 9510. Are the four in general use?—Yes; except one on the female side, which is not of much use. We find one airing court large enough for two of the classes—the inebriate and epileptic and the noisy and refractory.
 9511. Are the offices attached to the house—the laundry, and the storeroom, and so on—sufficiently large for the requirements of the institution?—Yes; at present they are quite large enough.
- School instruction.
 9512. I suppose there is no school in the asylum?—There is no school.
 9513. What is your opinion as to the advantage of having instruction given in this institution merely as a means of occupation?—Well, for the few who could take advantage of it, it might be of use; but, indeed, they are generally so indifferent to any thing of the kind that I do not think it would be of much service to the generality of the patients.
 9514. What are the arrangements for divine worship?—We have the attendance of three chaplains every Sunday—the Established Church, the Presbyterian, and the Roman Catholic.
 9515. Is there any place of worship in the asylum?—No particular place of worship.
 9516. What arrangements are made for the celebration of divine service?—We use the day-room on the male side for early service when the Roman Catholic chaplain attends, and the day-room on the female side for the other denominations.
 9517. I believe there were not always chaplains attached to this institution?—There have been chaplains attached to this institution for a great deal longer period than I remember.
 9518. What is your opinion as to the advantage or otherwise of having chaplains attached to an institution of this kind?—I think it is a very decided advantage; very much so, indeed.
 9519. I believe that was the opinion entertained by the former manager?—Yes, it was. There are many patients here to whom it would be a great affliction to deprive them of the opportunity of attending divine service.
 9520. What is the proportion of the inmates as regards religion?—We have about 148 Roman Catholics, forty-one Presbyterians, and twenty-three Episcopalians.
- No religious excitement amongst patients.
 9521. Have you found that any excitement is caused amongst the inmates of those different persuasions in consequence of the attendance of chaplains in the asylum?—Not the slightest of any sort.
 9522. Do you find their attention being called on the Sabbath-day, and at other times, perhaps individually, by the chaplains to religious matters has led to any excitement amongst the patients?—Not the slightest.
- Privy Council regulations as to Chaplains.
 9523. Are you aware of the Privy Council regulations with reference to the admission of chaplains?—Yes; we have a copy of them here.
 9524. Do you consider they afford sufficient security for the ministrations of the clergy-men not being given in cases where they might be injurious?—I think they do.
 9525. Have you found any difficulty to arise under the existing rules?—Never.
- Visits of Inspectors.
 9526. How frequently do the Inspectors come to the institution?—I see by a return I made a few days ago that Dr. Nugent was here four times last year, and I think three times the year before.
 9527. You mean here for the purpose of inspecting the asylum?—Yes, for inspecting the asylum.
- Privy Council control of expenditure.
 9528. Have you found that any inconvenience has arisen from the unfamiliarity which the Privy Council exercises over the expenditure—has any delay been occasioned?—I have never experienced any inconvenience myself from it during the short time I have been here. I have had no great experience yet of the financial matters connected with the house, except, indeed, that I had a letter yesterday from the Audit Office requesting to know why they had not got an abstract of the Governors' accounts, and requesting to know when they might expect it; now, that abstract I sent off to the Privy Council on the 18th.
- The system of audit.
 9529. Does the audit by the Commissioners of Audit take place immediately after the expenditure, or is it usual for a long period to elapse?—A long period of time elapses before the audit takes place. We get queries now, in 1857, connected with accounts sent forward in 1854, 1855, and 1853. The last queries were in reference to accounts of 1854 and 1855.
- Infirmary wards; advantages of an infirmary.
 9530. Are there infirmaries attached to this institution?—There are infirmary wards used as such, but we cannot afford to use them exclusively as infirmaries. The sick are separated by a movable screen from those who are invalids, and the position of the screen varies according to the number of sick. The sick are not treated in their separate cells.
 9531. Have you a nurse attending the infirmary wards?—Yes.
 9532. Do you think it would be desirable to have a distinct building for an infirmary?—I do not.
 9533. Are you favourable to the treatment of the sick in a separate place?—Yes; I am decidedly favourable to their treatment in an infirmary.
 9534. Are you of opinion that the insane who become sick could not be as well treated in a cell as in an infirmary ward?—I think they cannot. The disadvantage in the former case is that the sick insane person in a cell must be under the care of keepers who are not entrusted with the sick alone, and who have other duties to perform, and therefore the sick must in a great degree be neglected.
 9535. Are there any disadvantages in relation to the want of warmth in the cells?—I think it would not be wise to have sick patients treated in their own cells on account of the want of artificial heat.

9436. Are you of opinion the insane sick require as many appliances and comforts as the sane?—I would say they require more.

9437. You have stated that it would be desirable that the manager of a lunatic asylum should be a medical man?—I think he should.

9438. Are you of opinion, on general principles, without alluding to this particular institution, that there should be any defined rule as to the respective duties of the manager and visiting physician?—I think that, as far as the medical question is concerned, their duties should be co-equal; but of course, on any non-medical question, the resident physician should have the entire control. That would be the only rule I would make on the subject—that their medical duties should be co-equal.

9439. If co-equal, how would you prevent their clashing?—There would be difficulty with respect to that.

9440. With whom do you think the final responsibility should rest with regard to the sick of the institution?—Certainly with the resident physician.

9441. Would you think it desirable, in case there was a resident physician, that there should still be attached to the asylum a visiting physician?—I would think it desirable.

9442. Would you have him as an ordinary attendant, or as a kind of consulting physician?—I would have him as an ordinary attendant, attending on stated days in connexion with the resident physician, proceeding with him to see the medical cases.

9443. You would not have him called in merely at the option of the resident physician, but would have him a regular visitant upon a fixed salary?—Yes; I would have him a regular visitant upon a fixed salary.

9444. Why do you prefer the latter arrangement?—I think if the entire responsibility was thrown upon the resident physician of calling in a consultant whenever he thought necessary the Governors of the institution might consider that he called him too often, and fearing this the manager might not wish to call him in as often even as it was necessary. I think it would be putting the manager in an invidious position.

9445. Have you any padded rooms in the asylum?—None.

9446. Would you think them desirable?—I would wish we had two, one on each side. I would think them desirable from what I have seen elsewhere.

9447. What instruments of restraint have you?—A strait waistcoat, and a strap that fastens the ankles together, and the strap that goes across the waist to prevent a person from getting out of bed.

9448. Who keeps these instruments of restraint?—There is a place in each division in which they are kept, and whenever a patient requires any restraint of the kind he is put into the dormitory or the cell, and the resident physician is sent for by a keeper; and the instruments of restraint are never put on unless the resident physician orders it to be done. The keeper has the key of the place in which they are kept.

9449. Are you aware of the Privy Council Orders on the subject?—No; I am not aware of any order on the subject. [The witness is referred to the regulation on the subject.] Now that I see the rule, I must say that I would not understand it as conveying that the manager should have the instruments of restraint in his personal charge—that is, under his own lock and key.

9450. If they are not under his own lock and key, what guarantee has he that the keepers may not use them without permission?—The resident physician is constantly going about the house, and if he finds a man under restraint whom he has not ordered to be placed in that condition he would dismiss the keeper at once, and the fear of dismissal prevents the keepers using these instruments without authority.

9452. The visiting physician attends three times a week?—Yes; and oftener if necessary.

Barnwell Peter White, Esq., M.D., sworn and examined.

9453. How long have you been attached to this institution?—Two years and nine months, as visiting physician.

9454. You have heard the statement of Dr. Rogan as regards the manner in which you and he discharge the duties of your respective offices?—Yes.

9455. Do you concur in that statement?—Yes; I do to a certain extent. Since he came in charge we have had no serious illness in the house.

9456. Do you consider that your respective duties require a more accurate definition?—I think they do; I think they should be strictly defined.

9457. Supposing the law to be altered and to require in every case what practically, of late years, has been done, that the manager of the institution should be a medical man, what line of distinction would you draw as to their respective duties?—Well, I should say the ordinary bodily diseases should be treated by the visiting physician and the management or treatment of the insanity should be particularly left to the resident physician, and that occasionally he should require the opinion of the visiting physician on particular cases.

9458. Would you allow the resident physician, without any appeal, a complete control and responsibility as regards the moral treatment of the patients for insanity?—Well, not complete control, but general control.

9459. Then how far would you allow the visiting physician to interfere in the treatment of insanity?—Well, in the case of a person who is very ill I think it should be his duty to call the attention of the visiting physician to such a case and have his advice respecting it.

9460. You mean the case of a person labouring under acute mania?—Precisely.

LEWISSTOWN.
*Londonderry District
 Asylum.*
 Russell Peter
 White, Esq., M.D.
 Responsibility of medical treatment.

9561. With whom do you consider that the responsibility of treatment should rest in such a case?—Well, so far as the treatment of insanity goes, I should say with the resident medical man as being constantly on the spot.

9562. You consider that if the doctors differed his opinion should prevail?—Well, he should have more experience in the management of insane persons, and I should be inclined to defer to his opinion in reference to their treatment, unless there were very strong reasons why I should hold an opposite opinion.

9563. Practically do you consider, if there was a resident physician, having the duties you have stated, and a visiting physician to attend to the bodily disease and to be a sort of consulting physician upon all the cases of insanity, that any occasion would be likely to arise upon which a difference of opinion would take place?—There probably would. That would depend upon the good sense of the parties.

Dysenteric disease.

9564. I believe there has not been any epidemic or contagious disease prevalent in the house to any extent since your appointment?—Strictly speaking there has not. There was a good deal of dysenteric disease two winters.

9565. At the time the dysenteric disease prevailed were the patients treated in their separate cells or in infirmary wards?—Some were treated in their respective cells, and others were treated in the wards. Some dysenteric patients, owing to the effluvia, I was often obliged to remove to separate cells.

Arrangements for the sick.

9566. Are you satisfied with the existing arrangements for the treatment of the sick patients, or do you consider that an infirmary is required?—Well, I should like to have separate wards for sick patients. Under our present arrangement there are healthy patients sleeping in the hospital ward, and I would prefer having a ward altogether for the sick.

9567. When patients are treated in their separate cells are those cells provided with the proper appliances?—Well, they have no additional appliances beyond what they contain at present. They have no more heating.

9568. Are there no tables or night-shafts?—Oh, yes; they would be provided with night-chairs and with a table, if necessary.

9569. Do you think, generally speaking, that patients can be as well looked after in separate cells by the attendants as in an infirmary?—Well, I would think not. At night the night-nurse might or might not look after a person in a separate cell as well as in a ward where there were several sick persons, and where she would be kept more alive to her duties.

 incurable cases.

9570. You are aware of the large proportion of incurable cases in this institution?—Yes.

9571. Have you found that that proportion has had a tendency to increase?—Rather. There is a tendency to the accumulation of such cases in an institution of this sort.

9572. There having been, on the 1st of January last, 162 probably incurable cases, out of the total of 269 in the institution, the opportunities which this hospital affords for relieving acute cases can only be made available when cured cases, which form a small minority, are sent out of the asylum, or incurable cases are sent home or to the workhouse?—Only in those events.

9573. Pro tanto, as a curative hospital, the accommodation which this asylum affords is very limited?—Yes; but I have taken great pains, since I came here, to get removed out of the house all who are incurable, and harmless or idiotic—to have them sent either to their friends, who could care them, or to the workhouse as paupers, and under those circumstances no case has been kept out of the house, even in a single instance, I believe, for the last two years and a-half.

Inadequacy of Asylum accommodation.

9574. Do you think that the asylum is at all equal to the wants of the district?—For curable cases, unless that plan was pursued, scarcely equal to the wants of the district.

Lunatics in work-
 houses.

9575. Are you acquainted with the Derry workhouse?—I am.

9576. By a return which the Commissioners have received, it appears that there were thirty-six insane persons in that workhouse on the 1st of January, twelve of whom were maniacal?—Yes.

9577. Do you consider a workhouse a proper place for the detention of such cases?—It is as well as can be for those who are idiotic and quiet. Some chronic cases are pretty well off in it too, but it is very unsuitable for cases having any tendency to violence.

9578. Do you think that harmless lunatics are likely to be annoyed or molested in an institution of that kind?—Well, I have not known such to be the case. I have known the Derry workhouse for many years, being the medical officer of it, and I have not known that to occur.

Question of admitting patients for payment.

9579. From your acquaintance with the district generally, do you consider there is any considerable class of the population who are unable to provide for their friends in private institutions, and to whom it would be a great object to get them into this asylum at a reduced rate of payment?—I do. There is a very large class to whom it would be a great object to get their lunatic relatives admitted here for a small payment.

9581. Supposing the law distinctly authorized the authorities of this institution to receive payment for patients, is it your opinion the sum required to be paid should be, in all cases, the cost of maintenance?—Not in all cases. I would vary the sum according to the circumstances of the parties, leaving it to the Board to fix the sum, but in no instance to exceed what it cost the public for the maintenance of the patient in the institution.

9582. Supposing the cost of maintenance in the institution was £20 a-year, do you consider it would be preferable to allow parties to come in paying £8, or £10, or £12 a-year, rather than compel them to pay the £20 a-year, or some in as paupers?—I would vary the sum according to the circumstances of the parties, leaving it to the discretion of the Board to settle the amount in each case. There are many persons who could pay £8, or £10, or £12 a-year, and who could not pay £20 a-year; and it would be satisfactory to the feelings of such persons to pay the smaller sum, and not put their relatives into the asylum as paupers.

9583. Do you consider that the other arrangement of the fixed sum would be a check upon persons getting their friends admitted for £10 a-year, for instance, when they could pay £20?—The Board of Governors are always fit to manage that, and I would leave it to them to fix the sum in each case.

9584. You have heard it referred to, in evidence, that there is more lunacy in the county of Donegal than in the county of Derry; do you concur in the reasons suggested as to the cause of that?—Yes; being badly fed, and kept in great poverty for generations, and the close intermarrying said to prevail in several districts of Donegal, the isolated districts lying along the coast.

9585. Do you keep a Medical Journal of all the cases?—Yes. There is a registry of the cases, and there is a kind of Case Book kept.

9586. Have you ever considered in what manner the additional accommodation which appears to be considered requisite in this district could be best afforded?—Yes, I have.

9587. Will you be so good as to favour us with your opinion upon the subject?—I think a separate building on the upper farm would be the best means of providing additional accommodation for the wants of the district.

9588. For what class of cases?—For chronic, incurable, and imbecile cases.

9589. Do you consider there is any objection to having provincial asylums for the reception of such cases?—No; I do not know that there could be any very marked objection to that.

9590. Do you think the existence of any very large number of chronic cases in an asylum is undesirable as regards the effect it may have upon the curable cases?—I could not speak, from my own knowledge, about that; I have no experience as to the effect.

9591. Are you prepared to offer any opinion as to the effect upon patients of removal to a totally distinct asylum established for the class supposed to be incurable?—I would apprehend that the removal to such an institution would exercise a bad effect.

9592. Then I understand, generally, your views are for enlarging this institution in the present instance, and, on all occasions, having the curable and incurable cases in the same asylum?—Yes; there would be separate houses for them; but they would form the same asylum, and the patients would still associate together.

9593. Are there any matters you would wish to bring under the notice of the Commissioners, or any observation you would like to make touching the subject of this inquiry?—I know very many people who, from time to time, not very like insane persons, destroying their property and their substance; and if there existed a power of putting them under restraint for a very few days, when they are committing such destruction, it would be a very great benefit to themselves and their families, and the community generally, such power being, of course, properly guarded against abuse.

9594. In the cases to which you refer, what do you presume is the leading cause of the insanity you describe?—Prolonged intemperate habits.

9595. You say that there is a class of persons whom you think it desirable should be placed under restraint for a short time?—Yes.

9596. That is, removed to an asylum?—Yes; I would have them removed to an asylum.

9597. Does not the law at present give that power?—Why, you could not, strictly speaking, call the class of persons I refer to insane.

9598. Then, if they were not insane, would there not be a difficulty in putting them under restraint?—They are like insane people, but if you come to talk with them, you could hardly say they were insane.

9599. Would not the principle you suggest be very objectionable?—The principle would, but the practice of it would be often very useful.

The Lord Bishop of Derry and Raphoe, sworn and examined.

9600. Is there any matter which your lordship would wish to bring under the notice of the Commissioners connected with their inquiry?—I wish to express an opinion with reference to the appointment of chaplains to lunatic asylums, and I would say that it is most desirable that there should be in every asylum regularly appointed chaplains. I give that opinion from the observation that I was enabled to make when I was Dean and Bishop of Limerick, and also when visiting a very large asylum at Lancaster, where there were, I believe, nearly 1,000 persons. I attended there during the celebration of divine service, at which there were present between 400 and 500, and had I not been informed, and had I not known, that they were lunatics, I should not have supposed, from their demeanour, but that they were in the full possession of their faculties. I conversed with the resident manager and physician of that institution, and I was informed by him that the benefits of religious ministrations to the inmates were very great, and that to deprive them of the opportunity of attending religious service would be a positive cruelty to those persons.

9601. In the case of the asylum to which your lordship refers, Lancaster, were there chaplains of more than one persuasion connected with it?—No; there was only one chaplain attached to the asylum. The asylum was visited by other chaplains, but there were very few in it who were not Episcopalians. I ought to state that the gentleman I speak of was a resident chaplain.

9602. I presume, your lordship considers that the inmates of a lunatic asylum suffering under insanity of one kind or another are yet not always deprived of the use of their reason to such an extent as not to be enabled to benefit by the ministrations of their clergy?—Yes; I feel perfectly persuaded that at times they are benefited by them, and I feel that we have no right whatever to deprive those persons of the benefits and comforts of religion.

9603. You speak as well from the knowledge you have acquired in your episcopal capacity both in Limerick and in Derry as from your position as a Governor of this asylum?—I do. I have made inquiries here on the subject, and in a conversation with the late manager of this institution, I learned from him that he was of the same opinion as myself, with regard to the benefit to the inmates of religious instruction; besides that, I hold a very strong opinion that we have no right to prevent the giving of religious ministrations to the inmates of this asylum. If a person is visited by Divine Providence with insanity, there may be intervals in which the individual returns to a sane state, and we are not justified in depriving him of every religious privilege he would enjoy were he outside the institution. I make this statement merely because your attention and the attention of the public has been called to the subject by the controversy which has occurred at Belfast. I thought I would not be exactly doing my duty, knowing you were here as a Commission making inquiries, if I did not express to you my firm conviction of the absolute necessity of continuing chaplains in connexion with this institution, and of there being in every lunatic asylum adequate provision made for the religious instruction and comfort of the inmates.

9604. Without looking to the giving of religious instruction in an asylum, either as a means of cure, or the withdrawal of it as an infliction upon the inmates, is your Lordship of opinion, that its administration would be useful with the view to keeping alive the religious feeling of the patients in the hope of their recovery?—I am of that opinion. I think it is a matter of very great moment, that the religious feelings should be kept alive. I do not know in what respect it can be supposed the giving of religious instruction is in any degree not beneficial; I think, on the contrary, it must be always beneficial; for, I believe, the truths of Christianity, in themselves, are such, that they must exercise a salutary influence on the mind of any individual. I am not speaking now of sane individuals only, but also of those who are insane, with whom those truths must have a soothing and harmonizing effect.

Rev. E. Doberty.

The Rev. Edward Doberty sworn and examined.

The Roman Catholic chaplain; his maintenance in the
 Asylum.

9605. Are you the Roman Catholic chaplain of this asylum?—Yes.

9606. How long have you held that appointment?—Nearly twelve months.

9607. Are you aware what number of inmates belong to your persuasion?—Yes; I looked to the books the other day; we have seventy-five females, and sixty-six males.

9608. What number usually attend your service on Sunday?—I should say between ninety-six and 100.

9609. Are you in the habit of preaching to them?—No. I should say that the arrangement between the clergy is this: there are three curates in Derry, and one of them is appointed chaplain. There is another Rev. Mr. Doberty, who attends here every Sunday. With respect to the service, the general rule is to read morning prayer and say Mass.

9610. Do you preach at all on Sundays to the assembled inmates?—No; I do not think there is any thing further than what I have stated.

9611. Do you attend in the week?—Yes; whenever called upon I attend, and sometimes I visit, perhaps once a-week.

9612. Are you of opinion that any large proportion of those who attend Mass are enabled to profit by it?—Indeed, I believe, there is. I see them conducting themselves as well as many persons who are in their perfect senses.

9613. From the communication you have had with lunatics in the asylum, do you think those persons are enabled to profit by the instruction you address to them?—I may observe that there is one of them so well at certain times that he is able to assist in saying Mass.

9614. Are the patients provided with religious books?—Not that I am aware of.

9615. Have you every facility afforded you in the discharge of your duties?—Certainly.

Rev. Jas. Deehan,
 D.D.
 Presbyterian Chaplain.

The Rev. James Deehan, D.D., sworn and examined.

9616. How long have you held the office of Presbyterian chaplain to this asylum?—I was appointed in 1845 as chaplain, but I officiated two years before that voluntarily. I obtained leave from the Governors to come and officiate as chaplain without any expectation of being appointed chaplain or of receiving remuneration.

9617. You have been, then, fourteen years more or less connected with this asylum, discharging the duties of chaplain?—Yes.

9618. How many Presbyterians are there in the asylum?—About forty.

9619. What number attend service on Sundays?—Both Episcopalians and Presbyterians who desire it are allowed to attend both services—the Episcopalians and Presbyterian. The number generally present at service would average about forty-five.

9620. Some of these may be Episcopalians, and some of your people may attend the other service?—Yes; the Episcopalian chaplain never objects to that, nor have I ever objected to it.

9621. Then, you do not think the presence of an Episcopalian and Presbyterian chaplain in the house is likely to lead to any discord amongst the patients?—It is not likely to lead to the slightest discord.

9622. Are you in the habit of addressing any discourse to your congregation?—Always.

Londonwary District
Asylum.
 Rev. Jas. Denham,
 M.D.

9624. Your ministrations extend beyond the mere celebration of worship on Sundays, do you not attend during the week?—Yes; our services on Sunday are short and simple; we sing; have prayer; read a portion of the word of God; lecture or preach a short simple discourse suited to the audience, avoiding of course controversial subjects, and we conclude with prayer. Very many of them take part in the psalmody.

The Sunday services.

9625. Is it your opinion, that the lunatic inmates or many of them would feel it a serious deprivation if they were debarred from the opportunity of attending service on Sundays or of joining in prayer?—They would consider it a very cruel proceeding. My impression is, that it has a very soothing effect upon them; it breaks in upon the monotony in the first place of the long day's imprisonment which they would have. They regard the chaplain not merely as an officer of the institution, but as a friend, and they speak to him as such. When they are attending two services in the day, as they do very often, my service and the Episcopalian service, the effect upon them is very happy and soothing. I remember a case, when the former Governor was here, of a person who was brought here in a state of great violence, and the doctor without my knowledge introduced that person to the service, to see what would be the effect upon her; up to that time they were obliged to have her tied; the moment the singing of the psalm commenced she seemed immediately calmed down, and sat with entire composure during the entire service; so much so, that I was not aware there was any violent person in the room.

Advantage of religious ministrations,

9626. Did you find that religious ministration had a soothing effect in her case?—I believe it had. I merely remember the experiment being tried with respect to that patient, and the circumstance of the manager mentioning to me the happy result.

9627. Are the inmates of your persuasion supplied with Bibles and prayer-books?—Many of them are supplied with Bibles.

9628. Have you had every facility afforded you of discharging your duties as chaplain?—Yes, every facility.

9629. I presume there are in this institution Presbyterians of more than one denomination?—We have very few Presbyterians of different denominations in this country. They are nearly all in connexion with the General Assembly. We have one section called Covenanters. I am not aware their ministers would have the slightest difficulty in allowing me to minister for persons of their flock, nor would I have the slightest difficulty in allowing them to act for mine.

9630. Is there any thing else you would wish to state to the Commissioners?—With regard to the effect of the ministrations of the chaplains, I would be glad some of the medical officers should have an opportunity of stating generally, what they conceive to be the effect with regard to the inmates. I feel that the attendance of chaplains on the week days, especially for the sick, is a matter of great importance. I have, at least sometimes, found that persons who, during their ordinary health, were not very capable of understanding much on religious subjects, when they became unwell—I cannot say what was the cause of it—but I then found them very often capable of understanding conversations on religious subjects. The insanity very often seemed to have removed a cloud from their minds on such a subject. I frequently had in the infirmary ward persons who conversed as rationally on religious subjects as any sane person I was ever called upon to attend.

9631. From your acquaintance with the district, or the portion of it in which you reside, have you considered it would be advisable that a class of paying patients should be received into this institution?—I do consider that arrangement would be very advisable. My impression is, that, under the present arrangement, a very great hardship is put first upon the friends, who are obliged to assert, if not swear, that the person whose admission they seek is a pauper, whereas the relatives are, perhaps, in very comfortable circumstances as farmers, or they may be gentry who are somewhat decayed, and are not able to pay £50 a-year in a private asylum; to that extent they are paupers, in their inability to pay so large a sum, but they are not paupers in the ordinary sense of the word; and I think it very hard that they should be obliged, in order to procure the admission of lunatics of such a class here, to swear or declare that they are paupers.

 reduced rates.

9632. Do you think £50 to be the probable cost of maintenance at a private asylum?—Yes; and I think it a very great hardship on the county, that the county should be taxed for the expense of maintaining a person here, whose friends are quite capable of paying what would probably be the actual cost. A person cannot obtain admission here unless as a pauper only, yet he might be able to pay something.

9633. Supposing parties admitted to this asylum for the actual cost of maintenance, the county would be still affording them the benefit of the building and attendants?—Yes; but the county would not lose by that, except so far as the increase of the staff, and the existing accommodation would become necessary.

9635. Are you satisfied the Board of Governors would be able to exercise sufficient care over the cases, to prevent what is called "jobbing"?—I would say so. The gentlemen who are Governors here are intimately acquainted with the whole district, and they are quite capable of preventing imposition. I am not sure, also, whether it would not be possible to make some arrangement that would separate, in some measure, that class from the absolute paupers. I have sometimes seen, in visiting the wards here, a person, who was brought up and educated as a lady, having all the habits and feelings of a lady, and who was put into this asylum, placed upon a level with the very lowest and most ignorant persons. This was a position not favourable to promoting her recovery; and yet, from her means having failed her, or from the means of a gentleman having been removed from him, such parties are put in here as paupers, and are compelled to sit down at the same table, eat their food in the same manner, and mix generally with the most miserable paupers. I have long felt that was a hardship to persons in their circumstances.

9636. Does not the view you have just expressed, lead directly to the propriety of erecting a separate institution, at the cost of the rate-payers, for such persons?—I think the erection of a separate building or wing in connexion with this asylum, might meet the difficulty. There might be a separate ward for males, and another for females, of that class.

Charitable institu- tions for lunatics.

9637. In all communities there must be certain matters for which the law must provide, and certain other matters which must be left to public benevolence; are you quite clear the cases to which you refer would not be met, some day or other, by the benevolence of individuals?—I do not see how it could be met by the benevolence of individuals. The persons to whom I allude are obliged to come in here as paupers, though they were formerly in a respectable rank of life.

9638. You are aware that there are institutions where nothing more than the mere cost of the patients' maintenance is received, and that the other expenditure is defrayed by the benevolence of individuals?—We have no institutions of that kind here.

9639. I believe there is only one or two such institutions in Ireland?—I believe so.

Asylums in Scot- land.

9640. Are there not several in England?—I am not aware. I visited some of the asylums in Scotland. In the Scotch asylums they have three classes; one, for persons who can pay a large sum, on the first floor; one, for the middle classes, on the next floor; and one, for the poorer classes, on the upper.

9641. With the exception of the payment you refer to, are those asylums maintained out of the county rates?—I think the poor patients are maintained by the parishes which send them in.

Sir R. Halston, Bart.,
J.P., &c.

Sir Robert Bateson, Bart., J.P., &c., sworn and examined.

9642. I believe you have been for many years a member, and a constant attendant, of the Board of Governors of this asylum?—Yes.

9643. You are a Governor connected with the county Donegal?—Yes, with the county Donegal.

Appointment of Governors; the Inspectors.

9644. What is your opinion as to the mode in which the Governors are now appointed; do you consider it should be left to the Executive Government, or that a more representative character should be given to the Boards?—I consider that the position which a gentleman has in reference to his own locality, should be regarded in the making of the appointment.

9645. Have you ever considered whether the Grand Jury should be allowed to name a certain proportion of the Board of Governors?—I would consider the Grand Jury a very fit body to do so, but not to be the exclusive body for the purpose.

9646. What is your opinion as to the propriety of the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums being members of the several Boards?—As medical men, and having a certain control under the Government, they certainly should be ex officio Governors of the asylums.

Control in erection of Asylums.

9647. What is your opinion as to the provision of the law with reference to the erection of asylums—do you consider it should be left to the local Board of Governors to determine respecting them, or that they should be still erected under the direction of the Commissioners?—I consider the board should be the parties concerned, but not the sole parties; that the erection of buildings should be under the direction of the Government, but not entirely without the concurrence of the Governors.

The chargeability of the inmates.

9648. What is your opinion as to the existing law which regulates the chargeability of the inmates upon the county rate—do you consider that that burden is properly placed upon the county at large, or that it should be transferred to the poor-rate and levied upon electoral divisions?—I think it is a matter of indifference whether the chargeability is placed upon one or the other; I think they are much on a par.

9649. You are aware that under the present arrangement the cost of each inmate is charged upon the county at large, through the county rate?—Yes.

9650. Do you prefer that to having it made a charge upon the respective electoral divisions from which the lunatics are sent?—I would prefer the present arrangement to having a charge upon the localities from which the lunatics come.

9651. Do you consider the charge should be borne by the occupier under the county rate rather than divided between the occupier and the landlord, as it would be under the poor rate?—I am satisfied with the existing arrangement.

Dangerous Lunatic
Act.

9652. As a magistrate, you are conversant, of course, with the operation of the Dangerous Lunatic Act?—I am.

9653. What is your opinion as to the operation of that Act—do you consider it advisable that a power should be given to commit the lunatic direct to gaol?—The safety of the public requires that should be done in the first instance.

9654. Supposing there was no difficulty in providing for them in the asylum, would you advocate the magistrates being allowed the power of committing direct to the asylum?—Certainly not.

9655. Is it your opinion that a goal is a proper place for the detention of the insane for any period?—No; I would have it as a place of detention merely until an inquiry respecting the case could be gone into.

9656. Do you find it interferes with the discipline of a well-regulated goal to have lunatics confined there?—Certainly. The goal should be merely a place for the temporary detention of a lunatic.

9657. Lunatics have remained, I believe, in the goals of this district for a considerable period?—Yes, in Donegal particularly.

9658. Do you know from what that has arisen?—From the want of an understanding of the uses of these houses.

9659. Do you consider that the local authorities at Lifford should have taken more active measures for the transmission of the lunatics to the asylum?—I am giving merely a general answer, and more with reference to what has been than what is at present.

9660. How far do you think workhouses are proper places for the detention of lunatics?—None but the imbecile and those who cannot be benefited by treatment ought to be put into them. With respect to the Derry workhouse, I am in the habit of visiting constantly there, and the imbeciles and lunatics in it seem to be as well treated almost as they possibly can be. There might be possibly amongst some of them a chance of cure, and those individuals might be brought to a place of this description. They are so much under the charge of the officers of that workhouse that their kind treatment and security are sufficiently provided for.

9661. Are they not principally attended by other paupers?—They are; but paupers are generally selected for the purpose who have some judgment; persons who are likely to give the attention that such cases require.

9662. Then you would not be favourable to an arrangement by which the Board of Guardians should be allowed to require admission for the lunatic paupers into this asylum?—A distinction might be drawn amongst those who are in the workhouse and those might be sent here who have a chance of improvement, and only those who are totally imbecile kept in the workhouse.

9663. Then you would allow only a certain class to have the right of admission here?—A certain class amongst those individuals in the workhouse, such as might be fitting lunatics for an institution of this character.

9664. I believe it has been under the consideration of the Board of Governors how far additional accommodation could be provided in this district?—Yes; I may say it has been under consideration for more than two years.

9665. We have heard that the vacancies occasioned by the transfer of the Tyrone lunatics to Omagh were speedily filled up?—Immediately.

9666. Are you satisfied that there is still a want of additional accommodation?—There is, in consequence of the number of incurables in the asylum, many of whom have been for a very long period here preventing the admission of cases of necessity.

9668. What were the opinions entertained by the Donegal gentry with reference to this question?—The distance which the patients had to be removed to this asylum was one of their considerations, and the possible occupation or use of workhouses that might not be so much required for the poor, was another consideration with them also, but I have always been opposed to that on principle myself.

9669. Can you state your reason for the views which you entertain?—I object to the proposed change on the ground of the increase of staff, which is one of the great sources of expensiture; the difficulty of sufficient supervision, which is got over in the vicinity of a town where there are so many ways of ingress and egress, the facility of obtaining provisions being much greater in the neighbourhood of a town than remote country places, and also in consequence of the facility for repairs, which may be done cheaper and better in a place where workmen of all kinds are to be obtained, as here. Again, there never could be the same opportunity that there is possessed here, by the Governors, of giving their attendance at, and inspection of the asylum.

9670. You mean there is no town in the county Donegal where there would be likely to be such a general attendance of Governors as there is at Derry?—Yes.

9671. What town was thought of in Donegal for the asylum?—Letterkenny, as a central position.

9672. What may be the greatest distance patients have to come to this asylum from the county Donegal?—I suppose about fifty miles. Some patients have to come from Bundoran, from which I am told there is now an application; but I would say, that the asylum is at present in the most central position it could be for the two counties.

9673. Suppose an asylum was erected at Letterkenny, what distance would be saved a patient coming from Bundoran?—I suppose he would be about twelve miles nearer to it.

9674. Referring to the proposition of allocating one of the existing workhouses in the county Donegal for a lunatic asylum, do you think any of the workhouses in that county could be dispensed with?—Yes, at extremely remote points, for instance, Dunsinny, which is in a remote place.

9675. Is it your opinion any of the more central workhouses such as Letterkenny could be dispensed with?—I should think not; certainly not Letterkenny.

9676. Apart from the particular question between Derry and Donegal, do you think there are advantages in having a separate asylum for each county?—Certainly not. The same principle would apply for dividing each county into districts, such as baronies.

9677. In case of an asylum being established for each county, the Board of Governors would all belong to one county, and, possessing the whole charge, would, in fact, be administering altogether their own local funds; at present the Governors of this institution are a mixed body, administering the funds of two different counties?—Yes. But you are, of course, aware that, under the present arrangement for meeting the expenditure, each county bears only its own local expenditure.

9678. Are you aware whether any definite conclusion has been arrived at by the Donegal magistrates on the subject?—There is a letter here to-day from one of the magistrates most interested in this matter, Sir James Stewart. A copy of it has been sent to the Commissioners.

The subject of additional accommodation is always for the time.

9679. Is the question, as to the manner in which additional accommodation is to be provided at present in abeyance, pending this Commission?—Yes; every thing respecting it is suspended till the result of this Commission is made known. I may mention, as a matter of observation, that Mr. Babington and myself, and one or two other persons not present, had been asked by the Board to consider these matters. We have formed a Committee on the subject for a couple of years. I am a Donegal member of the Committee. There are two gentlemen from Derry and two from Donegal on it. We were appointed to consult the architects with respect to the extension of accommodation. Our idea was that it was necessary to increase the accommodation, but that the further accommodation should not be of so expensive a character as the present building, that the new structure should be in another part of the grounds, and that the inmates of it should be more on a footing with those in the workhouse, but should be still under the supervision of the present staff. The only increased expense would be occasioned by the appointment of one or two additional minor officers. There is a very important matter which individually, I think, might be brought under the consideration of the Commissioners, and that is with respect to the sewerage. In the erection of the new building, I would put sewerage altogether out of question, both for the sake of the health of the inmates and the value of the establishment. There is wasted in this establishment, by the sewerage not being made available, £140 or £150 a-year, and besides the system of sewerage is said to be defective; but if that was interfered with, it would, probably, cause great injury to the health of the inmates. It is known that one of the most dangerous things in the world is the breaking up and repairing of old sewers, for the gases that emanate from them are most destructive.

Suggestions with respect to a new building near the present Asylum.

9680. Then, as I understand, the view of this Committee is, that the increased accommodation should be provided on the premises, in the manner already described, upon the land at the other side of the road?—Yes; but should not be of the same expensive character as the present building.

Deficiencies in the Asylum.

9681. It has been stated that there are many wants in this asylum, such as lavatories, water-closets, &c., will you state what course the Board of Governors have taken with respect to those matters?—It was thought, generally, that it would not be well to commence the expenditure of £500 or £1,000 without getting all that was necessary done at the same time, and until the question of additional accommodation was settled; but the water-closets and lavatories are indispensable, and no delay should take place about them.

9682. Then, the Board of Governors are fully alive to the importance of these deficiencies being supplied?—They are deficiencies caused by the increased number of inmates. The rooms for the lavatories, or where the lavatories should be placed, have been turned to other purposes.

Appointment of superior officers.

9683. With regard to the government of the institution, how do you consider the superior officers should be appointed—by the Executive Government or by the Local Board?—Why, where the Governors have the direction and management of the institution to a great degree, they certainly should have a voice in the appointment of the officers, but they should be controlled by the Government: that, I think, is indispensable, but I think the recommendations for appointment might come from the Governors.

Control as to new buildings.

9684. With regard to an addition to this asylum, or the erection of a new building, do you think the direction of the work should be left to the Local Governors?—Not the direction; there should be some superior control exercised.

9685. Do you mean a control over the contract or over the plans?—Control over both the contract and plans. It would not do at all to have local individuals, whose time would not admit of it, charged with these matters. There must be some competent person watching the work carefully, for the sake of the public at large. This building is not considered to be at all as well finished a building as it should be, but there probably would be greater vigilance exercised now on the subject than there was when this was built.

Superannuation Act.

9686. Have you put the Superannuation Act in force in this asylum?—We have, in the case of the last manager.

9687. Have you found any difficulty in carrying it into operation?—Not the least.

9688. Have any objections been raised as to the scale of salary, or the amount to be included as salary, in granting superannuation?—Nothing in the shape of any permanent objection. The objections were got over by the great majority of the Board, without any dissentient voice, eventually.

9689. In fixing the superannuation allowance, was it a certain proportion of the money salary that was given, or were any other items included, such as allowances?—The allowances were taken into consideration.

9690. Then, you do not think that any amendment of that Act is required?—I think not; the existing Act allows sufficient means. I think that, with regard to the servants, it would be a great encouragement to persons of superior class to come in that capacity, if they were better paid; or if premiums were given, it would be a constant security for their good behaviour while in the institution. I must say that we have very good servants in this asylum, but the under servants are not adequately paid, considering the duties they perform, and considering the class of persons we should have in the position. The head nurse has only six guineas, and the assistant nurse only four guineas, per annum, with clothes and notions, and a guinea as a premium or reward.

9691. You have heard the evidence given in favour of the admission of paying patients into this institution, what is your own opinion on the subject?—I fully concur in the evidence of the gentleman who preceded me. I am in favour of their admission; but to make a classification of them, so as to separate them from the others, would go beyond, I am afraid, the arrangement of an institution of this kind. It is a great hardship upon many people that they are not admitted for reduced payment. There are a great number of cases in which a portion of the cost could be paid, if all could not be paid.

9692. It is stated that the Governors considered that the law did not allow them to receive paying patients?—Yes, except in the case of pensioners.

9693. You have heard the evidence given with reference to the importance of having chaplains attached to this institution, what is your experience on the subject?—I am ashamed to say that I could not pretend to give any opinion, but the opinions I have heard given are such, as to influence me in a considerable degree in favour of their appointment; when I hear that the regularity and order of the house are increased by their ministrations, I could not object to their coming.

9694. You were a member of the Board of Governors before chaplains were appointed?—I was.

9695. Could you tell us whether any change of opinion took place amongst the Governors on the subject after the chaplains commenced attending at the asylum?—I know that there are some members of the Board unfavourable to their continuance.

9696. You stated that in the proposed new building, you would wish to see carried out the principle of management which applies to workhouses?—I mean with respect to the maintenance of the patients, that is, that we would not go to the same expense for the treatment of incurables that is incurred here in the treatment of the curable cases. I would let the present dietary remain as it is in this house, but I consider that there should be a less expensive diet for the patients in the new building.

9697. Do you not think there would be a serious difficulty in applying the same principle of management, respecting diet, to insane persons, that is adopted with regard to paupers in workhouses?—I think not.

9698. Are you aware that incurable cases require very often a higher scale of diet than curables?—No doubt, because some of the incurables are working, and there is a better class of diet for those who are working than for those who are not.

9699. Then, in fact, in the proposed new asylum the management should be very similar to that for the ordinary insane patients?—It should be so; but with a greater classification of dietary.

9700. You have stated as one of the objections to breaking up the old sewerage that noxious gases would escape?—Yes, that is a very great objection.

9702. Is not that offensive escape more likely to occur continuously from bad sewerage than from good sewerage?—I think not, you can hardly go over a sewer grate that you are not offended by the smell, so much so, that you would wonder how persons could live in the adjoining houses. I have found that in London and in Dublin. The most dangerous gas in the world is that from an old sewer. We know how many people have lost their lives in descending them in London.

9703. Have you any suggestion that you would wish to make to the Commissioners?—Yes; I would suggest in reference to the increased accommodation, that the plan should be well digested, and that the cost per head for the number of inmates proposed to be accommodated should be considered in the erection of the building. That principle of a certain cost per head, in the building for the number of its inmates, is very much lost sight of in the erection of public establishments at present; I should like it to be attended to in any building here. With regard to the meetings of the Board I would suggest that, when a meeting takes place, and that there is more than a quorum, one of the first acts should be, that portion of the Board should examine the house and report to the Board before they separated.

9704. Is no visiting committee ever appointed by the Board?—Yes; but I would wish to have this part of the proceedings of the Board, that they should appoint one or two members to examine the house between Board days, not upon any fixed days, and that those gentlemen should report to the next Board,—a committee to be appointed at every meeting.

9705. Do the Governors usually go through the asylum on the day of their meeting?—

modation.

9706. Have you been long a Governor of this asylum?—About five or six years.
 9707. Are you in the habit of constantly attending the meetings of the Board?—Yes, as regularly as any one, I believe. I did not miss a day last year.
 9708. Sir Robert Bateson has stated that you were one of a committee appointed to consider what could be done to afford additional accommodation for the lunatic poor?—Yes.
 9709. Do you concur in the proposal to erect an additional building on the upper ground?—Yes; I think expense would be saved, both in the erection and in the management.

Lunatics in work-
houses.

9710. Do you think a building could be erected there ample enough for the wants of the Donagall district?—I should think so.

9711. I mean affording the quantity of ground requisite for the employment of the inmates?—Yes; that is the great advantage of the situation. There is sufficient ground there to employ the inmates; and I think they could be judiciously employed there. The objection with regard to the road intervening could be met at once by sinking a tunnel across.

Appointment of Governors.

9712. Do you consider that any class of lunatics might with propriety be permanently maintained in the workhouses?—I am a guardian of two workhouses, and from my experience, I think the idiots could be very comfortably taken care of in them; but those who require some management or treatment would be much better in this asylum. Idiots would be very well taken care of in the workhouse, and they are fed much cheaper. If there was room for them they might come here, but I am afraid it would increase the number in the asylum to an enormous extent, to bring them all from the workhouses, where I see them very well managed and very comfortable.

The Inspectors as
Board.

9713. What is your opinion as the present mode of appointing the Governors?—I have no objection to the mode of appointment, but I do not think we have a sufficient number from Derry on the Board, and those who are on the Board from the county of Derry are not sufficiently distributed over the county.

The eligibility of the Asylum.

9714. Do you experience the inconvenience of this absence of Governors from various parts of the county when you come to admit cases?—We have a form which must be signed by the minister, churchwardens, and magistrates resident in the district from which the applicants come, and in this form we have great confidence. I think, however, it would be better to have Governors from the different districts.

Erection of buildings.

9715. Do you think the Inspectors of Lunatics should be members of the Board, and should have the power of voting the same as the other Governors?—I should have no objection to that. I never saw any difficulty occur on the subject during my experience.

Dangerous Lunatic
Act.

9716. Are you satisfied with the existing state of the law, by which the charge for the institution is levied upon the county at large, through the county rate?—The general opinion is, that the more local you make taxation the more minutely the matter is attended to, but I think it is now very fairly apportioned and arranged. I am not a landlord, but I am a land-agent and farmer, and a very extensive one, and I think it would be a very unfair change in the law to put it upon landlord property. In my opinion, it is at present very fairly arranged.

Question of a separate Asylum for Donagall.

9717. Do you desire any alteration in the law as regards the control exercised over the erection of buildings?—I agree in what Sir Robert Bateson has said about that. I think supervision by a professional man is quite necessary, together with the assistance of the Board.

9719. Is there any matter you would wish particularly to bring under the notice of the Commissioners?—I would say with respect to the Donagall business, that I differ from many persons who have sat at this Board. In the first place, I think it right to put before you minutely the localities of Derry and Donagall. I say, generally speaking, that for a large portion of Donagall, this town is more easy of access than Letterkenny; in fact, I know that a great number of prisoners from the county of Donagall, who are sent to Lifford gaol, which is the county town, are obliged to pass through this town on their way to the north-west part. Donagall has much easier access to Derry than Killybegs. There is no doubt that Ballyshannon and the western parts of the county are a few miles farther from Derry; but I do not see that the advantage of establishing a new asylum in Donagall is at all equal to the objections and difficulty in the way of such a proceeding; besides, it would be dealing rather hard with Derry, to separate the counties and establish a new asylum. There was another county connected with this district, Tyrone; it has been detached, and it has not been arranged yet what proportion we are to pay Tyrone. If the Downed people are permitted to separate from us, you throw upon us the total expense of this building, which is very liable to go out of repair from the manner in which it has been built. If it is proposed to make use of the workhouse instead of building a new asylum, I think it would be a total failure. As a practical man I do not think the workhouse would be at all suited for a curative asylum. In any event, they would be obliged to build, and I say that it would be cheaper and better that they would help us here to build the necessary additional accommodation.

LONDON:
Lancaster & Sons,

A. Robinson, Eng.

9720. What are the defects in workhouses, which render them unsuitable for being used as asylums?—There is no accommodation for the staff, and there are no cells. They have only large dormitories, and you could not, without incurring great expense, arrange them for dangerous lunatics. The arrangements in an asylum like this are of a superior character. With respect to the facility for members of the Board coming from Donegal to attend here, I will say that they attend very well.

Unsuitability of workhouses for Aryans.

9721. What is your opinion as to the present mode of appointing the superior officers of the asylum?—Well, I think, with all due respect, the people who pay ought to have the right of recommending; at least they should have the right to recommend persons to be appointed as Governors, subject to the approval of the Government.

Appointments of superior officers of Army.

9722. Do you mean the right of appointing, subject to the approval of Government?—
 Yes. If the Government take it into their own hands, I think they ought to relieve us from the taxation.

9723. Are you satisfied with the manner in which the accounts of this institution are audited?—I cannot say of my own knowledge; but I have reason to believe there is delay.

Audit of accounts;
paying patients, etc.

9724. Would it be more satisfactory to have the audit more immediate and effective?—I have no doubt it would. With respect to the receiving of paying patients, I only wish to add my testimony to what has been said on the subject. I think it would be a great advantage to the country, that we could take into the Asylum persons of moderate means at a fair remuneration. Persons of that class have a great objection to be called paupers, and we conceive that we have no right to take them in any other character. It would, of course, however, too much expense to make such a separation of classes as Dr. Denham mentioned; it would be too expensive for location; it might be done by subscription. With regard to the superannuation, there was a very minute discussion amongst us, but I can hardly say that there was a division on the subject; ultimately we were unanimous. No difficulty was essentially experienced in the matter.

9725. Are you in favour of chaplains being continued in the establishment?—Quite so.

Classicalism

Mr. Samuel Kerside, sworn and examined.

Mr. Saml. Kennedy.

3724. What official appointment do you hold at present?—I am clerk of the union of Londonerry.

9727. Have you had from time to time a considerable number of lunatics in the workhouse?—I would say, on an average, from about thirty to thirty-five from the time the workhouse opened, eighteen years ago.

Twelve in the Derry workshops.

8728. Do you mean that the same lamnics have been there during the whole of that period?—I think some of the lamnics have been there from the time the workhouse opened.

9729. Did they come from any house of industry to the workhouse?—No; they were amongst the original admissions. They had no lunatics in the old house of industry.

9730. Are any of the lunatics at present in the workhouse violent?—No; we do not keep them when they become violent.

9731. By a return furnished to us of the number of lunatics in the workhouse on the first of January last, it appears there were twelve cases maniacal out of a total of thirty-six?—I do not know as to the classification. I know that there are none kept in the workhouse who are violent, or calculated to cause annoyance either to themselves or to others in the establishment.

9732. Do you make immediate application for the reception of violent cases into this asylum?—We make immediate application.

9733. Have you ever found any difficulty in getting janatics admitted?—No; we have never found any difficulty. We get them removed at once, when they become troublesome; but I would say there are not more than probably two or three in the year who require to be removed here.

9734. Is a system of exchanging lunatics with this asylum carried on?—The Guardians always attend to any application made from this asylum to have persons removed to the workhouse; they receive them at once, because they know very well they will not be sent unless they are harmless, and quiet enough to be kept in the house.

Exchanging Practices with the Asylum

9785. What are your arrangements in the workhouse for the care of those lunatics?—There is an hospital nurse in the workhouse; it is a particular part of her duty to see to the female lunatics. She has the best pauper in the establishment placed under her, to look after the lunatics; and, along with the matron, she is generally accountable for them; I speak now of the female lunatics. Then, as regards the male lunatics, they had at one time a man in charge of them, who slept in the ward adjoining where they slept. He did not attend to them exclusively, for he had other matters to look after during the day. He had under him the best male pauper we could get, to watch over them during the day. A pauper workman attended at meal hours, and saw to the giving of the meals. The Board became

The workplace arrangements for the locomotive.

- Leominster. economical, as Boards sometimes do, and they dispensed with the services of this man; but we do the best thing that can be done, and we have the most intelligent pauper in the house, and the most able-bodied man, to look after them.
- Londonderry District Asylum. 9736. Do any other paupers sleep in the same part of the building where the lunatics sleep?—Not at present. It became at one time necessary to use a small ward in the workhouse as a lock-ward for male patients. The arrangement has of late been altered, and that part of the establishment has been altogether given up to the lunatic patients.
- Mr. Saml. Kennedy. 9737. Do all the male lunatics then, without any classification, sleep in the one ward, and all the female lunatics in another ward?—There are three separate sleeping-cells for those inclined to be troublesome, and then there are two other wards, one at each side of the house, where the others sleep together.
- Sleeping arrangements. 9738. Do the male lunatics in the workhouse mix with the other paupers during the day?—Yes; some of them work out upon the land; and I may mention to you, that if all the lunatics were removed out of the workhouse just at this moment, there would be a great difficulty felt there, because there are no able-bodied men or boys in the house just now, except the lunatics, to pump up the water for the establishment; and I do not see how the water could be pumped only for them. We have no able-bodied adult paupers to perform the work.
- Employment of the lunatics. 9739. When lunatics are at all troublesome, are any mechanical means of restraint used?—I have never seen a lunatic there under restraint; but they may have been, for it does not form any part of my business to go through the house. As soon as they become so troublesome as to require restraint, we contrive to get them sent here.
- Restraint. 9740. What is your opinion as to the suitability of a workhouse generally for the reception of lunatics?—A workhouse is altogether so unlike what an asylum is and ought to be, that it would be nearly as easy to build a new asylum as to convert a workhouse into one. I went over the house the other day with Dr. Rogan, and in going through it we took down the plans of the building. We used both scale and compass to measure, in order to see how far the place could be made into sleeping-rooms, and we found that the Derry workhouse, which is a large one, built for 1,100 people, would hardly admit of the making of probably more than about seventy separate sleeping-rooms. Then there would be dormitory accommodation for about seventy more. The yards are not at all suitable for lunatics, nor are the day-rooms. I am speaking now from what I know of this asylum, and from what I know of the workhouse, knowing intimately the nature of both buildings from my own connections with both.
- The question of converting a workhouse into an Asylum. 9741. Do you think the workhouse could be made suitable for a class of lunatics who are not violent, such as might be placed in associated dormitories?—Yes, if you do not require to have separate cells. If the place was required merely for harmless lunatics, any house would almost do.
- Advisability of receiving patients for payment in the Asylum. 9742. What is your opinion as to the propriety of paying patients being received in an asylum like this?—I think it would be very advisable to receive paying patients here. I think a very large proportion of the funds of the institution, probably one-tenth, might be derived from that source. There are a great number of people who could pay £5 or £10 a-year, or whatever would defray the cost of their food in the asylum, who cannot pay £40 or £50 a-year in a private asylum. I believe if the area of taxation was decreased to electoral divisions the people would look more sharply after the patients in the asylum; and if the law enabled the Governors of the asylum to levy payments for the patients according to the means of the parties, I believe they would be more looked after then, and a good deal of money would be got in that way.
- The cheapness of lunatics; harmless cases in workhouse. 9743. If the admission of paying patients would introduce a good number of patients not now in the asylum, would it not be necessary, on that ground alone, to make more accommodation?—If the patients were charged upon the poor rate and upon electoral divisions, I believe you would not have more patients in the asylum than you have now; because it would then become the interest of the people in the electoral divisions to have proper provision made in the workhouse for the harmless incurable lunatics. They would be kept then cheaper and I think they would be safely kept. They would have the supervision both of the Lunatic Asylums Inspectors and of the Poor Law Inspectors. The Board of Guardians would see it was their interest to make provision in the workhouse for the lunatics, as they could keep them cheaper there, and I believe that arrangement would do away with the pressure now upon this asylum so as to render it unnecessary to enlarge this building or erect another.
9744. Do you believe the alleged amount of lunacy given in the various returns would not stand the scrutiny which a Board of Guardians would submit them to?—I have not been attending to that part of the statistics; but I believe the Boards of Guardians, when they came to pay £20 a-year to an asylum for every lunatic out of their electoral division, would be careful to see whether the person was sufficiently harmless to take him into a well-arranged ward in the workhouse, rather than send him to the asylum; and I know from experience that incurable harmless lunatics can be kept in a workhouse in as good health as in this asylum—that they live as long in the workhouse as here, and that they do not cause any inconvenience in the workhouse.

BALLINASLOE DISTRICT ASYLUM.

Ballinasloe District
Asylum.Denis H. Kelly, Esq.,
J.P., &c.

Denis Henry Kelly, Esq., J.P., &amp;c., sworn and examined.

9743. Have you been long a Governor of this asylum?—For several years.

9746. Have you been regular in your attendance during that period?—I am sorry I cannot exactly say I have been regular. I have been here occasionally. I live at a considerable distance from the asylum and my attendance is only occasional.

9747. What is your opinion as to the mode of appointing the Governors and as to the constitution of the Board?—They seem to work very well here, so far as I can see; the asylum being here in the neighbourhood of Ballinasloe, where there is a great number of gentry resident, there is always a good attendance, and they never fail in forming a Board. Gentlemen in different places around have the power of sending parties who require to be treated into the asylum. They occasionally look after the interests of their respective counties.

Appointment of Governors.

9748. Do you think an arrangement by which the Board would assume more of a representative character would be more desirable than the present?—It would be virtually the same parties that would be appointed, and I do not think that a different arrangement would be productive of any benefit.

9749. Have you ever considered the advantage, or otherwise, of a certain number of the Board being nominated by the Grand Juries of the several counties?—I think they ought to be so nominated, and the Board here, as it is constituted at present, comprises a good number of the members of the Grand Juries. Gentlemen have been recommended to the Lord Lieutenant from each county, by the Grand Juries, and they have been appointed on the part of their respective counties.

9750. Are you aware whether the Grand Juries of Mayo, Galway, or Roscommon appoint any committee to inspect the asylum?—I do not think they do.

Visiting Committee;
attendance of Governors.

9751. I believe the situation of the asylum would of itself prevent many of the Governors from Mayo attending?—Yes.

9752. With reference to the attendance of Governors at this Board, to which you have referred, you are not perhaps aware that, during the last three years, there have been seventeen days on which a quorum did not assemble?—I am not aware of that; I should think it is not at all impossible.

9753. What is your opinion as to the propriety, or otherwise, of the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums being ex officio members of this Board?—I think it very advantageous.The Inspectors as members of the Board; the maintenance of the
Asylum.

9754. What is your opinion as to the manner in which the funds for the maintenance of this institution are at present raised, namely, through the county rate—do you think that preferable to their being raised through the poor rate?—Far preferable.

9755. Do you consider any alteration of the law desirable, as regards the chargeability of the inmates, which now falls upon the county at large?—I should say not.

9756. You are, of course, aware of the operation of the Dangerous Lunatic Act, by which magistrates are empowered, on medical certificate, on being satisfied of the dangerous character of a lunatic, to commit him to goal; do you consider goals suitable places for such cases?—They are most objectionable in every way.

Dangerous Lunatic
Act.

9757. What amendment of the law would you desire with reference to such cases?—I would have them committed to a lunatic asylum instead of to a goal.

9758. In the event of the lunatic asylum not affording accommodation at the time, would you throw the onus upon the Board of Governors of providing accommodation?—I do not speak with reference to other asylums; I know nothing about them, but in such an asylum as this it is impossible what you refer to could occur; we could always make room here.

9759. Do you think there is any class of the lunatics confined here that could properly be detained in workhouses?—I think the detention of lunatics in workhouses highly objectionable; I think they are entirely subversive of the discipline of a workhouse, and it is very injurious to the poor creatures themselves to have them there, for it is totally impossible that any cure can ever take place.

Detention of lunatics
in workhouses.

9760. In the workhouses with which you are acquainted, are not the attendants upon lunatics usually paupers?—Yes, there can be no other attendants upon them.

9761. I believe the patients who are received into this asylum do not belong merely to the class whom the law considers destitute poor, but to that class also whose families might not be qualified or entitled to receive pauper relief?—That is the case.

Question of receiving
paying patients.

9762. What is your opinion with respect to the admission of a class of paying patients into this asylum?—If that was permitted to a certain extent, I would look upon it as a great charity and a great advantage to the public; for instance, if a farmer, having about £100 a-year, has the misfortune to have a parent, or a child, or a brother or sister, in a state of lunacy, it is impossible for him to send that person to a private asylum, and it is equally impossible that at home he can give to the patient the care required; and I consider it is fully as much a charity to receive a lunatic of that class into this asylum at a reduced charge as to receive free a pauper lunatic.

9763. I believe the law is silent upon the question as to whether persons of such a class

DISCUSSION.

Asylum.*
*Deputy H. Kelly, Esq.,

should be received?—I believe so. It is the practice to receive them here, and I consider we were doing our duty in admitting them.

9764. Supposing the legislative sanction given to the admission of a class of patients whose friends would be enabled to pay for them in the asylum, do you consider the law should enable you to apply any test, or would you leave it to the discretion of the Governors to see that such persons were not unduly or improperly received?—I do not know what test could be applied. They ought not to be parties who could be provided for elsewhere. They should be parties in such a position that they could not be paid for in a private asylum, or could not receive proper care at home. It is right that persons in such a condition should have the benefit of a public institution like this on paying for it; but I do not think that those who are well able to provide for themselves, or whose friends could provide for them otherwise, ought to be permitted to encumber a public establishment of this kind.

9765. I understand you would be satisfied to leave it to the discretion of the Governors to decide whether the case was one that might be received?—I think you might safely do so here, at least.

9766. I believe there is, on the part of a considerable class of the population, an indisposition to allow their relatives to receive aid in the nature of relief from a public institution, although they might not be able to pay for them in a private asylum?—I think there would be. There is many a very decent farmer whose child or sister might be in a state of lunacy, and who would be glad to have that relative in this asylum, where he paid a certain proportion of the cost, rather than send the party to the workhouse, or have him or her received here as a pauper. I think that decent feeling exists amongst the peasantry of this country. They are rather independent, and would prefer that their relatives should not be received into an asylum of this kind as mere paupers.

9767. Is it your opinion that in the event of paying patients being received, the sum to be charged for each should be a fixed sum, based upon the cost of maintenance?—Decidedly.

9768. And not a varying sum?—No.

9769. Considering the large extent of this district, comprising the counties of Galway, Mayo, and Roscommon, do you feel that the Board are enabled to exercise sufficient vigilance as to the class of patients admitted, so as to guard against the admission free of persons who might be able to pay?—I think that is very carefully looked to. The only mode of admission is by order of the Governors, and I am not aware of any Governor who would sanction the admission of a person who was not entitled to be received. There is a form under which cases are admitted, and that form is to be filled up and signed by a medical man, and by a justice of the peace; and at the bottom comes the order from the Governor to receive the person into the asylum, and for the payment of a certain sum for the carriage of the person to the asylum. That is the great advantage of having Governors scattered over the district. In my own district I two or three times found very great misery amongst parties so afflicted. When I happened to be away at one time, a case requiring admission broke out, and none of my friends in the neighbourhood could send that person into the asylum.

9770. This admission of individual patients, by order of individual Governors, appears to be in conflict with the regulations of the Privy Council, which provide that every patient shall be "admitted upon a special direction by the Board, unless in cases of urgency, when the physician may admit upon his own authority, stating on the face of his order the grounds on which he acts?"—Patients admitted upon the order of individual Governors are only admitted provisionally till the next meeting. The case is reported by the physician, and if there is any reason why a patient should not be kept, he is discharged; if otherwise, the admission is confirmed. It would be a virtual denial of the benefit of the establishment if a man in a state of lunacy was obliged to wait for the meeting of the Board, which might not take place for a month.

9771. But these urgent cases are provided for by the Privy Council regulations, which require the physician to admit under such circumstances?—The cases I speak of are admitted always through the physician.

9772. From your acquaintance with the country as a resident gentleman, is it your opinion that there is any large amount of lunacy or idiocy unprovided for?—I do not think there is now. There are several cases of idiocy, but I do not think they are cases that could be brought, with any advantage to them, into a lunatic asylum. They are harmless idiots, wandering about or kept by their friends. There is a good deal of that through the country, and there will always be more or less of it; but the cases requiring treatment, or affording any hope of cure, or of being benefited by admission to the asylum, they are, I think, pretty generally received.

9773. Do you not think there are social reasons for which it would be desirable that the class of idiots wandering about the country should be collected in some institution rather than be left at large?—I rather think not; I think it would be a misery to themselves.

9774. I believe the form of admission for this asylum requires the affidavit to state that the applicant is not subject to epilepsy, and was not born an idiot?—Yes.

9775. Are you aware that the Privy Council regulations state that idiots as well as lunatics, properly so called, and also epileptic persons, may be admitted into these asylums?—I was not at all aware of that, but I believe it is a very common thing that there is a certain degree of epilepsy connected with lunacy, and it is a very difficult thing for a person, such as a medical man, who merely sees a patient for a short time, when brought before him for examination, to decide whether the case is epileptic or not. There was a case of a woman here, who was exceedingly violent and who had been wandering about the country; she got into the posthouse at Mountbellew. We gave an order for her to be brought here, and the instant she saw the policeman, she threw herself into the most violent state of excitement, tore her clothes and mutilated her person in an awful manner, and fell into the most horrible epileptic fits I ever saw. Previous to that the medical man who examined her would not have said that she was epileptic at all.

9776. From another provision in the Act of admission which requires it to be stated that the person is not incurable, I presume, the object was to preserve the asylum as much as possible for curable cases?—Yes.

9777. In the case of lunatics sent from workhouses, is the provision requiring an engagement for the removal of the patient generally complied with?—It is generally done by the master of the workhouse, or the chairman of the day. Such cases do not frequently occur, unless one arises like that I have just described, where the person would do injury to himself or others. The more legitimate mode would be to commit such parties to the county prison, and from that they would be transferred here; but sometimes, when a case of necessity arises, you are obliged to resort to the most direct and immediate course at once.

9778. What is your opinion as to the mode of the appointment of the superior officers of this establishment; do you think it ought to be left to the Executive Government or to the Board of Governors?—I think it ought to be left to the Governors, with a revo on the part of the Government, if the Governors should make an improper appointment. I am convinced that any Board that has to do the work of managing the asylum should have the appointment and control of their own officers. If officers are appointed over them they have not that control; they will not exercise the same power they would possess if the appointment lay with themselves.

9779. Would you give the power of removal to any central authority after inquiry and investigation?—Well, I suppose the Government is considered the central authority in Ireland generally upon every thing. That is a matter I would not venture to give an opinion upon.

9780. Is it your opinion that it would be advisable the resident manager of this institution should be a medical man?—Decidedly.

9781. Do the Governors, on the occasion of their meeting, usually go through the establishment?—Almost always two of them. It is a rule with us, when we meet here at the Board, that two members shall make a round of the house, and the remainder go on with the work, and a very hard day's work it is too.

9782. There is no regular visiting committee, except the committee that is appointed for the occasion at each meeting?—I believe not.

9783. Are there not chaplains attached to this institution?—There are.

9784. Have there always been chaplains in this institution?—No; it was only six or seven years ago the arrangement was made to have chaplains here.

9785. What is your opinion as to the advantage or otherwise of having chaplains attached to this institution?—Well, it has been productive of less evil than I should have expected; there has been less controversy than I should have anticipated. We put one creed at one side of the asylum, and the other creed at the opposite side, and they had no means of coming in conflict in any way. I hear from medical men who have been here, that the consolations of religion to those who attended religious worship, were productive of good effects in a medical point of view. I was greatly afraid of the system when it was first instituted; I thought it would have led to a battle of the chaplains, but it did not turn out so.

9786. Do you mean that the persons of different creeds were placed at opposite sides of the house, or that the places set apart for the chaplains are on different sides of the establishment?—I believe so. There is a corridor on each side at the top, and one is for the Roman Catholic patients, and the other for the Protestant patients.

9787. When you speak of there being less controversy in the house than you expected, do you mean controversy amongst the chaplains, or religious contentions amongst the inmates?—Religious contentions amongst the inmates was more what I expected. I was afraid the introduction of religious worship into the asylum would have caused the inmates, when they came from their different services, to engage in exciting controversies, and would have led to results that would be deplorable. It has not produced that effect, and the chaplains on both sides have behaved with great judgment and discretion, and we have no unseemly fighting or squabbling.

9788. You say there has been less religious controversy than you expected, to what extent has it occurred?—There must be always more or less.

9789. To what extent has it occurred?—I cannot exactly say, but I have heard here and there occasionally, that there was some expression used and that another fellow said he did not like it, but nothing worth talking about took place.

9790. I believe the accounts of this institution are at present audited by the Commissioners of Audit in London, do you think that satisfactory, or would you desire a more local audit?—I do not know; the present audit seems to be very fair as far as it goes, and I do not see any objection to it.

9791. The objection raised to it in other places is, that it does not take place till after a long interval of time?—It is generally a humbug.

Anthony O'Flaherty, Esq., J.P., &c., sworn and examined.

9792. I believe you are a Governor of this institution?—Yes, for a very short time, only a few months.

9793. You have been also, for some years, chairman of a Poor Law Union in the district?—Yes.

BALBRIDGE.

Ballinacree District
Asylum.
Anthony O'Flaherty,
Esq., M.P., D.L.
Lunatic in workhouse.

9794. What is the usual course pursued with reference to lunatics who are admitted into the workhouse?—They are generally admitted like other paupers in the first instance, and transmitted, when they become dangerous lunatics, to the goal upon the commitment of two magistrates. That course is necessarily preliminary to their being admitted here, and then they come to the asylum.

9795. In the case of the union with which you are connected, the Galway Union, I believe such cases would be committed first to the goal of the town of Galway?—Yes; to the goal of the town. Our union extends into the county.

9796. Have the pauper lunatics thus committed from the union extending into the county and comprising the county of the town, been transmitted to this asylum and charged to the county of the town?—Yes; so we understand it to be.

9797. Do you consider the workhouse a suitable place for the detention of any class of lunatics?—By no means; it is a very unsuitable place.

9798. I believe workhouses were not constructed originally with a view to lunatics being detained in them for any period?—Not at all.

9799. I presume it is the case, as stated by the last witness, that the attendants upon the lunatics in workhouses, so far as your knowledge goes, are always paupers?—Always; we have no provision for any other.

Paying patients.

9800. You have heard the evidence given with reference to the admission of a class of patients whose friends might be enabled to pay for them in this institution, but who could not pay for them in a private asylum, what is your opinion on that subject?—I entirely agree with Mr. Kelly on that point. It would be most desirable to admit here a certain class whose friends or relatives could pay a certain sum for them. I believe that to be one of the greatest necessities we have connected with lunatic asylums.

9801. From your knowledge of this large county, do you consider there is any considerable number of persons, idiots or lunatics, at large, who ought to be provided for in some institution?—I am quite of opinion that a large class is at large who ought not to be so. There ought to be some provision made for the care of such parties, so as to remove them from intercourse with the public.

Chargeability of lunatics.

9802. As regards the chargeability of lunatics, which at present is upon the county rate, are you satisfied with that arrangement, or do you think any other would be more desirable?—It is almost impossible to give a decided opinion upon that point. One does not like to offer his own judgment in opposition to the judgment of others, so much superior in intelligence and experience; but I should say myself, judging from the facts, that it would be very much to the advantage of the occupiers to have the chargeability placed upon the poor rate rather than upon the county cess. That charge would be an advantage to ratepayer and occupier.

9803. Inasmuch as the ratepayer pays only half of the poor-rate?—Yes.

9804. Do you think that any more local charge for the lunatics could be established than that which at present exists, namely, the charge upon the county at large?—I should think that every district, union, or barony, or subdivision, ought to pay for its own lunatic poor. I am a great advocate for bringing responsibility as much home as possible to every person in the community. It would tend more to the general advantage of the country eventually.

Constitution of
Board of Governors.

9805. What is your opinion as to the constitution of this Board, do you consider the appointment of Governors should be left to the Executive Government, or that the Board should assume any thing of a representative character?—I think they ought to assume something of a representative character; I think a certain portion ought to be appointed by one class, and a certain portion by another. It ought not to be left altogether to the Executive. I think there ought to be a representation of taxation.

9806. Have you ever considered more minutely how that representation might be afforded either by nomination from the Grand Jurors, or election from magistrates, or any other course?—No. I do not think the selection from magistrates would be a proper course. They are not the parties I would propose to see represented. I refer rather to the occupiers and ratepaying tenants. The Grand Jury might appoint a certain number of members, and there might be some mode of selection by which those parties interested in the payment of the tax might be represented. It is not easy to point out an arrangement at this moment, but the mode of carrying out what I have indicated could be discovered.

9807. What is your opinion as to the propriety of the superior officers of these institutions being appointed by the Executive Government or by the local Boards?—There is a good deal to be said for the one mode and for the other. I think with Mr. Kelly that, if you take away altogether the power of appointment of certain officers from the Board, the Board may not have that proper control and authority they otherwise would. I think that if the appointment was submitted for the approval of the Lord Lieutenant in Council, or in any other mode thought proper, or by giving a power of dismissal to the Lord Lieutenant; under such an arrangement the Governors might have the power of appointment.

9808. There being of course a power of dismissal for misconduct?—Of course; that I think very important, to give the Executive the power of dismissal.

9809. Referring to a previous part of your evidence—I believe a pauper patient when received direct from the workhouse into this asylum, immediately becomes chargeable to the county at large, no matter what union he may have come from?—Just so.

9810. You are aware of the duties which the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums discharge—is it your opinion they should sit upon the Boards or attend them as Poor Law Inspectors attend Boards of Guardians?—I think they ought to attend in that way; they might sit at the Board but not vote.

Question of Inspectors being Governors.

Chaplains.

9811. What is your opinion as to the advantage of chaplains being attached to these insti-visions?—I am clearly of opinion there ought to be chaplains attached to these institutions; even independently of any other view of the case, I think in a sanitary point of view they would be useful.

9812. I believe you reside principally at a considerable distance from Ballinasloe?—Yes.
9813. Do you think the remoteness of the western districts of this county or Mayo from the asylum has operated in preventing cases seeking admission that would otherwise apply?—I cannot say that of my own knowledge; on the contrary, I find a great anxiety on the part of friends of lunatics to get them into the asylum—a very great anxiety indeed. There is no exertion they do not use to try and induce the neighbouring magistrates or gentlemen to get the party admitted.

9814. I believe the fact of such an asylum existing for the reception of such cases is generally known throughout the district, no matter how remote?—It is perfectly well known.

9815. You have stated that there is considerable anxiety on the part of friends to get admission for their relatives into the asylum?—Yes.

9816. And that there still remains a considerable number of lunatics out of doors unprovided for?—Undoubtedly.

9817. May not that arise from the form of admission which excludes three very important classes,—idiot, epileptic, and incurable?—I think the form of admission highly objectionable; nothing could be more so, in my judgment.

9818. Are you aware that the form is not in accordance with the orders of the Privy Council?—Now, I understand it is not; I was not aware of that before. I took it as a matter of course that the form would not be printed if it was not in accordance with the rules of the Privy Council.

9819. You are aware that while there are a considerable number of cases outside the asylum there are twenty-three vacancies in the asylum?—Yes.

J.B.M. Kiernan, Esq.

9820. How long have you been manager of this institution?—Since the opening of the asylum, in November, 1833.

9821. I believe you are not a professional person?—I was an apothecary, and attended as a student at St. Patrick's, in Dublin. I never took out a degree.

9822. What experience had you of the insane before coming here?—I was seven years assistant apothecary at the House of Industry, and for two years previous to coming here I superintended the lunatic department in the House of Industry.

9823. Has the form of admission which has been referred to here to-day been always in use in the asylum?—Not exactly. The words "not incurable" were not originally in the form. The Board of Governors have put in those words.

9824. How long since?—I cannot say exactly. It is a long time ago.

9825. Were not the words "not subject to epilepsy," or "not born an idiot," always in the form?—They were always in the form. The Council rules now in existence were not then formed, and we had nothing to guide us.

9826. Were the Privy Council regulations furnished to the managers of the different asylums?—They were, when they came out, in 1843.

9827. By whom do the admissions take place?—The patients are allowed to come in at once when the papers are perfect.

9828. Without their cases being considered by the Board?—Without being considered by the Board, and their cases are brought before the Board on the next day of meeting.

9829. Do the Board reconsider the cases on the next board day?—No.

9830. Do the minutes of the Board contain any record of the names of the persons admitted?—The only way they contain them is, that my return of the state of the house is read, and that return contains the names.

9831. The minutes of the Board do not show the names or number of the persons admitted since the previous meeting?—They do not.

9832. Do the memoranda of the business to be done, which you lay before the Board, contain the names of the parties who have been admitted since the previous meeting?—They do.

9833. Practically are any of these cases ever reconsidered and rejected?—Practically they are not.

9834. In the last case, which appears to have been admitted on the 30th May, that was not a Board day?—No.

9835. There is no entry, as required by the Privy Council regulations, that this was a case of special urgency admitted by the visiting physician?—No.

9836. Is it not the practice to make that entry?—Sometimes the physician has admitted urgent cases. My instructions from the Board are to take in a case where the papers are filled up; however, the great body of the cases are admitted upon warrants, and the most of the other cases are received upon Governors' orders.

9837. With regard to these cases, have you experienced any difficulty in getting a patient removed, under the bond attached to the form of admission, after he was cured?—We sometimes have to send them home at the expense of the institution.

9838. Have you had any difficulty in finding out the locality where the person signing the bond resided, or in discovering those who were bound to receive the patient?—They have not always answered my letters.

9839. Have you been obliged to retain any patient who would otherwise have been removed if the bond had been carried out?—I am not aware of such a case.

J.B.M. Kiernan, Esq.
Cases from gaols.

9840. Have you never had to proceed upon a bond?—No. The only difficulty that arose was in one case from Galway, and I wrote to the clergyman who signed the paper, on the subject, and he said the people were very poor.

9841. With regard to the admission of cases from the gaols by warrant of the Lord Lieutenant, do you receive any information respecting those cases?—None.

9842. You require certain information with regard to the cases which are admitted in the usual form?—Yes; I should say that I do receive some information with respect to gaol cases from the keepers, how long they have been in the gaol, and whether they were violent or not; and sometimes I do not get that information.

9843. The information you get depends upon the capability of the keeper to answer the questions you put verbally?—Yes.

9844. Would it not be of considerable importance that you should be furnished with a history of each case?—Most important.

9845. Is it the practice to charge the cases that come from the county gaols to the particular counties to which they belong?—Yes; we charge the patient to the county from the gaol of which he comes.

9846. In the case of the county of the town of Galway, patients are always charged to the county of the town?—Always.

9848. Have you ever applications from the Guardians of the Poor in the county Mayo?—I have had from Swinford.

9849. Have the applications from the county Mayo been as numerous as the relative population of that county towards the rest of the district would indicate they might be?—Before the district was divided, the applications from Sligo were greater in proportion to the population than from any other place except the town of Galway, which was always quite beyond the proportion of its population; next, Sligo; next in order was the county of Galway; and then Mayo. More of the Galway patients were cured. There were fewer from Roscommon than any other place in proportion to the population.

9850. My question had reference to the number of applications.—We got no applications except those from gaols.

9851. Then I understand the Mayo cases are principally cases sent under the warrant of the Lord Lieutenant?—I might say there were very few cases these five or six years except those sent in that way.

9852. It appears that five out of six of the admissions since the last Board day have been from the county Mayo, and have been cases transmitted by warrant of the Lord Lieutenant?—Yes; some of the cases seemed to be dangerous, but the greater number were not dangerous at all.

9853. Do you think then that the cases transmitted from the gaols under the Dangerous Lunatic Act, have been sufficiently investigated by the local medical man before the commitment of the parties to prison?—I cannot say whose is the fault; but it is a fact that many cases have been committed as dangerous that were not dangerous. The late doctor here said, he would put down some cases as not insane.

9854. What was the general course of proceeding in those cases?—Parties rejected said they would go back, and come in here through the gaol; and many of them did come.

9855. That would indicate a difference of opinion between the medical authorities here and the medical authorities in those districts from which the patients came, with regard to insanity?—Yes; they are generally cases of moral insanity.

9856. Are you furnished with any history of the cases received from workhouses?—No more than is contained in the form of admission, except I may get information from those who come with them.

9857. Have you many paying patients in the asylum?—Eight.

9858. How do you give credit for the sums received from those paying patients; is it to the county from which the patients come, or to the asylum generally?—To the counties from which the patients come. Our rate of charge is not uniform, it is according to the means of the parties; one pays £10, another £12, another £14; and £15 and £16 are the general sums.

9859. Do you charge, in any case, more than the annual average cost of maintenance?—There was a time we were charging more. We have a pensioner from the town of Galway, who has a pension of £4 15s. a-quarter, which was more than it cost us formerly. Now, that sum is rather under the actual cost. Our average expense this year is beyond that.

9860. Then I understand the Board have at times received a larger annual sum for the maintenance of a lunatic than his annual cost to the Board?—Yes; in that one case. And there was another case, a great many years ago, of a gentleman from Galway; it was a peculiar case, and the friends undertook to pay £15 in addition to another £15. He was to have a servant to attend him.

9861. Putting aside the case of pensioners, I wish to know whether it is the rule of the Board, in fixing the sum which paying patients shall pay, not to charge more than the actual cost to the Board of the patient?—Yes, the charge is generally less than the actual cost.

9862. Are those patients treated in the same way as the other patients?—Yes, except in a medical point of view. The pauper, if he had been respectable, and accustomed to good things, would be treated in the same way.

9863. Do you mean that the dietary is more suited to what their habits in life may have been?—They get white bread instead of the second quality of bread.

9864. How are they treated with respect to dress?—The paying patients wear their own dress, supplied by their friends.

9865. Have you had any cases admitted as paying patients who were afterwards put on the pauper list?—One.

9866. Have you found that the stipend agreed to be paid for paying patients has been generally paid?—On the last heard day a woman from Aiklone memorialized the Board that she was not able to pay what she agreed to pay for her husband, and the Board reduced the charge.

9867. What number is the house calculated to accommodate?—337.

9868. Is there any order of the Lord Lieutenant limiting the number to be received?—No order.

HALLINGBORO.
Bournemouth District

J. B. M. Kierman, Esq.

The Asylum
accommodation.

9869. How is the accommodation divided between males and females?—There is somewhat more for males than females.

9870. At present there appear to be 307 patients in the house?—Yes, 307.

9871. I believe there are vacancies on both sides?—Yes.

9872. Are there many applications for the consideration of the Board to-day?—Only one.

9873. How long is it since the Sligo and Loburn cases were removed from this asylum?—In April, 1855.

9874. Was any large proportion of the inmates then removed?—Eighty-eight.

9875. Have those vacancies ever been entirely filled up since?—Four months ago the male places were filled up, and we were depending upon the discharges for vacancies. The female places were never filled up. We used, at the commencement, to admit three males for one female. The consequence was, that we had to make store-rooms into dormitories for the men. Another cause was, that we got seventy cases from the gaols of Roscommon and Mayo; they were old epileptic cases.

9876. These cases you refer to as coming from the gaols of Mayo and Roscommon were cases admitted when the house was first opened?—Yes, and they had been years in those gaols.

9877. Have you heard any opinion as to the cause of the increase in the number of female applications?—I could not say. The number of females has increased wonderfully during the last twelve months in the asylum, and within the last six months more especially. The greater number of them could not be accounted for in any way, either the male or the female; it was neither owing to hereditary disease nor drunkenness, nor any other cause that we could find out; usually we were enabled to discover some pre-disposing or other cause.

Increase in number of female patients.

9878. Do you think this increase in the number of inmates has been in any degree occasioned by the frightful scenes of destitution and disease witnessed in this country some years ago?—In the absence of any thing else, I should suppose those occurrences have had that effect.

9879. Nothing has come directly to your knowledge to induce you to form that opinion?—Nothing, directly; I have been striving to find out the cause, and could not ascertain exactly.

9880. I believe this asylum was considerably enlarged some time since?—Yes; we had room for 316 before the alteration, and the asylum was made by the alteration to hold 340. The number to be received is now put down at 337.

9881. From a return furnished by you and the visiting physician, it appears that on the 1st January, 1857, out of 310 cases then in the house, 219 were considered incurable?—Yes.

Large proportion of
incurable cases;
Asylum enlarged in 1851; cases delayed
before that.

9883. Have you had occasion to refuse many applications during the last few years?—None since 1851; since the building was increased.

9884. Previously to that, had you occasion to refuse applications?—Yes, we had to delay them previous to that.

9885. Was there, in fact, a difficulty, arising from want of accommodation, in getting in pauper inmates?—There was great delay.

9886. Do you think it is generally known that difficulty has been to a considerable extent removed?—I should suppose so; for they come here more directly now, except, unfortunately, in Mayo, where they put them into gaol instead of sending them here direct; if there could be a remedy for that it would be a great matter.

9887. Are you engaged in any other pursuit besides being manager of this institution?—None other.

9888. You have furnished a list of thirty-six Governors of this asylum, has there been any alteration in the number of Governors since the district was divided, removing those who lived out of the district?—I have not received any.

9889. Of those thirty-six Governors, it appears that during the last three years only nine attended, and that two of those were the Government Inspectors, you must, therefore, have had many days on which a quorum did not attend?—Yes.

The attendance of Governors.

9890. In case of a quorum not meeting, is there an absolute adjournment of the business to that day month?—No; one Governor goes over the accounts; then I go to others, and if I have proof sheets show them; I have gone over the whole of the business with three Governors, one after another in that way.

9891. Then are we to understand that on occasions when a quorum do not assemble the business is transacted in this way, that you get governors on other days singly to go over the accounts, and pass them?—Yes, I get them as well as I can.

9892. It also appears, that of the seven who attended, exclusive of the Inspectors, two attended only once in three years; does that indicate a bad attendance on the part of the Governors in this district?—Yes.

9893. Do you think this locality, being remote from a large portion of the district, operates to prevent the attendance of Governors?—Certainly; since the poor laws were established the Governors will not come from a distance; I presume they think the poor law boards more important. Lord Crofton and others used to come from Roscommon previous to that time.

9894. When did you last see a Governor from Mayo here?—Not for a great many years.

9895. Did you ever see a Mayo Governor here?—Yes; they used to spend three days on it: one day coming, one day here, and another going back.

9896. Do you attend the meetings of the Board?—Yes.

9897. Do you act as Secretary of the Board?—Yes.

9898. Do the Inspectors of Lunatics attend and vote at the Board like other Governors?—They attend, and I think the Board is generally swayed very much by the opinion of the Inspectors.

9899. Then you probably have not many divisions on the Board?—No.

9900. Are there any special local regulations in force in the house beyond the Privy Council regulations?—There are, some about servants.

9901. Are those regulations approved of by the Board of Governors?—Yes.

9902. Have you ever had occasion to put in force the Superannuation Act of last session?—We have two cases at present under consideration.

9903. Have any difficulties presented themselves in dealing with those cases arising from the terms of the Act of Parliament or otherwise?—There will be a difficulty in one of the cases, that of a man who came here with incurable lunatics from Roscommon. He wants to claim the seven years' time he put in there in addition to his time here, and the Inspectors seem to agree to that in their letter on the subject, and that will put him into a higher class; he is before the Act of Wm. IV.; it will give him eight-twelfths instead of four-twelfths.

9904. Is there a sufficient number of attendants in the house, male and female?—We are adopting a regular classification and are dividing the patients fairly, and there is an assistant to be appointed to-day and a head keeper.

9905. Are you allowed a sufficient number of attendants?—Yes, at present; we will require more.

9906. Are attendants on their appointment obliged to go through any examination as to their fitness?—They are brought before the Board and questioned.

9907. Do they generally read and write?—None else have been taken in these few years back; a few cannot read or write, but they were appointed formerly.

9908. By whom are the servants appointed?—By the Board in every case.

9909. Who dismisses them?—The Board.

9910. Is the Daily Statement Book regularly kept?—Yes.

9911. Are the cases of restraint entered daily?—We have only an odd case now and then, but of course when one occurs we enter it.

9912. In what way do you bring under the notice of the Board matters you may think deserving of their attention?—By a written report or statement.

9913. You have stated that you have very seldom a case of restraint here; what mechanical restraint is used?—We apply the muff covering to the hands, a strap round them and the strait waistcoat.

9914. Who keeps those instruments of restraint?—I do, in a press in the office.

9915. And they can be used only when you give them out?—Yes. Most of our restraints are for surgical purposes, such as when there is a poultice or blister on, that the patient might otherwise tear off.

9916. Are there any padded rooms in the asylum?—There are not. There are tenders in to-day for making a padded room. There are two rooms with thick sheeting.

9917. When seduction has been heretofore used, as regards the patients, were they secluded in their own cells or in those rooms?—In those rooms.

9918. What quantity of land have you attached to this institution?—We have forty-two statute acres.

9919. How are the patients generally employed?—The men who are fit to be out on the grounds are employed at spade work and gardening; some are assisting the servants cleaning; some are making mats; some are engaged at tailoring, and some are stacking turf. The women are employed at sewing, knitting, and spinning, and the bedding and clothing are made up in the house.

9920. How are the forty-two acres chiefly employed?—Potatoes, and oats, and sometimes wheat, are planted. We have a crop of wheat this year. We are obliged to have a horse for ploughing, and to carry manure to a distant farm we got lately.

9921. Has the additional land which you have recently obtained practically enabled you to extend the employment of the patients?—Greatly. We will be obliged to lay down more in meadow; we want patients to work it.

9922. Then you have got more land than your increased number of patients require?—We have.

9923. Who keeps the farm accounts?—The steward keeps the rough accounts first, and the clerk and storekeeper afterwards.

9924. Are those accounts audited by the Board?—Yes.

9925. How often?—Every month.
9926. According to what weight are the supplies derived from the farm for the use of the house charged in the accounts—is it the market weight?—Yes, the market weight.
9927. Is there a good supply of water here?—Yes, we have got water from the river which we work up with the horse; but even the horse will be scarcely able to work up a sufficient supply when we get the water closets created.
9928. Is it the river water that is used for the inmates?—We have a well and a pump for drinking.
9929. Do you employ the patients in pumping the water from the well?—Yes, and also a small engine for pumping up to the laundry.
9930. Have you found it necessary to employ the patients beyond what you thought advisable for their health?—We had to do so before we got the horse. The patients used to get swelled legs, and that is the reason I recommended the getting of the horse. They have light work now.
9931. Is there a supply of hot and cold water laid on in the various wards?—There is cold water and there is an attempt at supplying hot water, but it is a very bad attempt. We have boilers behind the grates; some of the boilers burst. They hold perhaps only three or four gallons, and while the water is being drawn away it becomes cold.
9932. Have you lavatories in the several wards?—Yes.
9933. We are to understand there is not a supply of warm water in the various lavatories?—There is not.
9934. How frequently do the patients get a bath?—They have no stated time for baths; we have no proper way but one to give them a bath.
9935. Am I to understand there are baths, but no means of giving them?—The difficulty is that there is no supply of hot water.
9936. Are we to understand from your answer that there may be patients in this establishment who have not been put into a bath, or have not received a general washing for a considerable period?—Yes.
9937. I presume the answer you have given does not apply to the cases of dirty patients?—No; they are obliged to wash frequently.
9938. Are there any artificial means of warming the building?—There are not, except by means of open fire-places.
9939. Are those fire-places in the inner or outer walls?—Inner walls.
9940. Are there fire-places in any of the dormitories?—In every one of them.
9941. Are they ever used?—In winter only.
9942. Is the house sufficiently warm for lunatics in winter?—I am quite satisfied it is not.
9943. How is it ventilated?—The ventilation is not very perfect; there is a good deal, no doubt; we have a good many windows which open on a swirl, the top portion, and there is a small ventilator in each.
9944. Does the ventilation depend more upon doors and windows, or are there any artificial means?—There are no artificial means.
9945. As regards the employment of the patients, are you enabled to make up all the female clothing in the house?—Yes; we buy the raw material.
9946. Are you enabled to make up the shirting for the men?—Yes.
9947. Not having a shoe-maker you do not now make the shoes?—No; and our tailor cannot make and repair all the men's clothing, so that we are obliged to send some to be made.
9948. Are any of the paupers under instruction in these trades?—No.
9949. Have you ever employed any of those tradesmen in instructing the inmates?—No.
9950. What furniture is there in the corridors?—None.
9951. Are the corridors much used by the patients?—The ends of them; the new portion at the end.
9952. Why should the ends of the corridors be more used than the other parts?—Because the day-rooms are at the ends.
9953. What furniture is there in the day-rooms beyond tables and benches?—Nothing beyond tables and forms.
9954. Are there any chairs?—None, except in the convalescent places; we have ordered chairs.
9955. Do the patients dine in the various day-rooms?—Yes; each class in their own day-room.
9956. Are there any books for the use of the patients?—A few—Chambers' Miscellany and Journal, and we have a parcel of Travels, and they have got prayer books.
9957. Of books of general information and amusement, what number may there be for the house?—Four large volumes of Chambers' Journal.
9958. Is there at this moment any one book for the use of each ward?—There is not.
9959. What amusements are there for the patients?—Dancing and singing are the principal amusements; some of the men play draughts and chess. I believe a few play at cards.
9960. At what time do they go to bed in winter?—The inmates generally go to bed at half-past seven. Epileptics go to bed at half-past six.
9961. What means of amusement are there upon wet days for the large number of inmates in this house?—Nothing particular.
9962. Are there any prints or any thing on the walls to relieve the monotony of the place?—No.
9963. Do the females ever take exercise out of doors?—They do.
9964. How frequently in the week?—About once or twice a-week; they have a large 9966. Are your requisitions for clothing duly attended to?—Yes.

9967. Is there a school in the establishment?—There is not.
9968. Was there ever a school?—Never.
9969. Have you got many young patients?—We have indeed; we have got small boys.
9970. Independently of those who might be able to benefit by the instruction given in a school, is there not a considerable number of the inmates who might be amused by receiving instruction?—Yes.
9971. Has the matter ever been under consideration?—Never; the class I speak of are generally idiotic and epileptic cases.
- Meat.
 9972. How frequently in the week is meat or soup given?—They get soup four times a week.
9973. Is any solid meat given?—Only by order of the physician.
9974. Is the meat from which the soup is made given to the inmates?—Yes, in the soup.
9975. It has been stated that there were not always chaplains attached to this institution?—Not always.
9976. When were they appointed?—I think it was in the year 1848.
9977. How many chaplains are there?—Two.
9978. Have you inmates of any other persuasion besides the Roman Catholic and those of the Established Church?—I am not aware; we had one Presbyterians, but I do not think we have one now.
9979. What are the arrangements for the celebration of divine worship?—There is a large corridor at the female side for the Roman Catholics. There is a railing put up and an altar, but no ornaments. It is an inspection lobby larger than a corridor.
9980. Is it exclusively appropriated for that purpose?—Yes; and at the opposite side corresponding is the place for the Protestants. The Roman Catholic side requires to be enlarged very much, and there are means of enlarging it. It does be very crowded.
9981. From a return you have furnished, it appears that as many as 180 Roman Catholics attend divine worship?—Yes.
9982. What proportion of the Roman Catholic inmates are in a condition generally to attend?—About two-thirds. Some are glad to go that are not very well fit for it, but it would excite them more to exclude them.
9983. It is also stated in your return that sixteen was the number of members of the Established Church who attended divine worship?—Yes.
9984. What is the proportion of members of the Established Church in this institution?—Twenty-four or twenty-six, altogether; about two-thirds attend.
9985. Have you ever known any quarrelling or squabbling to arise amongst the inmates in consequence of their attendance upon divine worship?—Never.
9986. Have you ever had any religious squabbling at all amongst them?—Never.
9988. What religion are you yourself?—A Protestant.
9989. If you or the visiting physician considered a patient in his then state of mind would be excited by religious matters, what course would you adopt with reference to his attendance upon religious worship?—I would not allow him to go, if I thought there was any injury likely to arise.
9990. Do you think the Privy Council regulations give you sufficient power with regard to the inmates in cases of the kind?—I have always understood they do.
9991. As regards the attendance of the clergyman of the various persuasions at other times than on Sundays, are they allowed to visit patients whenever they desire?—At all times.
9992. In like manner, if you thought a patient would be excited by the visit of a clergyman, would you interfere to prevent the visit?—I would represent the matter to the clergyman.
9993. No difficulty has arisen with you in reference to chaplains visiting patients who were unfit to receive them?—None whatever; on the contrary, I have spoken to chaplains to visit patients who could not be well managed, and they have done so.
9994. Did you find them to give aid in the carrying out of your system of treatment?—Yes.
9995. What arrangements do you make with regard to the visits of the friends of the poor afflicted creatures in the asylum?—We allow them in upon any day they come.
9996. You do not limit them to the day fixed by the Privy Council regulations?—We attempted to do so, but so few came upon that day, and so many came upon other days, that we found it would be a great hardship not to admit parties, many of whom came fifty or eighty miles to see a patient.
9997. How frequently do the Inspectors visit the institution?—Some years twice or three times, and other years oftener.
9998. Are their visits made unawares?—Yes.
9999. Are they usually made on board days?—Sometimes; Dr. White generally came on board days, and Dr. Sargent generally came on other days, as a general rule.
10000. How soon are the accounts audited after the close of each half-year?—That system to patients.

Visits of Inspectors.

Care of patients with far religious

has been changed some years ago. We have to send up a sheet every month; then they call for an abstract every year.

10001. How soon after the half-year is closed is the final audit of the accounts made by the Commissioners of Audit?—It is a yearly account we send, and they are very often two years in arrears; they have pulled up closer than they have been heretofore.

10002. You are obliged to furnish the Privy Council also with a full statement of the expenditure?—Yes.

10003. And in making applications for money, you give a statement of what the money is required for?—Yes, we have to give an estimate.

10004. Have any inconvenient delays arisen from that reference to the Privy Council?—I recollect at one time, in a quarter commencing on the 1st October, that we did not get the money till the 30th December. During the last year, or year and a-half, the delay is about six or seven weeks.

10005. Are all the supplies for this institution obtained by contract?—Not all.

10006. What are the exceptions?—Sometimes we have not a contract for potatoes, because we have potatoes of our own. We have a contract for oatmeal.

10007. Are the contracts half-yearly or yearly?—They are mostly by the year; butter, we have taken broad half-yearly, and last year for three months. The contracts for meal and beef are half-yearly.

10008. How are the tenders advertised for?—In the local paper and in the General Advertiser, and by placards through the town.

10009. Is the locality one that, in your judgment, enables you to obtain the supplies on good terms?—I think it is. We have had some things from Dublin at great inconvenience, soap and tin ware, and we were obliged to send them back. The Governors do not mind the trouble, but take what appears to be the cheapest and the best.

10010. Do you have much competition for the contracts near home?—Yes, a great deal. We get soft goods, such as blankets, from Dublin, and these things were satisfactory enough.

10011. Do you inspect every part of the asylum each day?—Yes, and sometimes more, particularly the places where there are works doing, repairs and so on, and I go to see particular cases of patients.

10012. Are there infirmaries?—Yes, one at each side of the building.

10013. Are the patients, when sick, removed to those infirmaries, or are they ever treated in their own cells?—They may be treated in their own cells for a day or so.

10014. But the practice is to treat cases in the infirmary when the illness is continued?—Cases of continued illness always go to the infirmary, and also delicate cases, which can receive there more attention. The infirmaries stand out from the building, but there is a connexion between them.

10015. Is there an hospital nurse set apart for attendance upon the patients?—Yes, a keeper and attendant.

10016. Is there an apothecary attached to the establishment?—Yes, but he is not resident.

10017. Are the drugs supplied by him?—No; they are purchased by the Governors, and supplied from Dublin.

10018. Does the storekeeper reside here?—He does.

10019. You have stated that the form of admission excluding epileptics, idiots, and incurables has been in force for twelve or fourteen years?—Yes.

10020. Have you any explanation to offer as to why that form of admission was continued, although the order of the Privy Council, declaring that those three classes of patients were admissible, was issued fourteen years ago, namely, in the year 1843?—The only explanation I have to offer is, that six months ago it was under the consideration of the Board to change the whole form; the exclusion of epileptic cases was objected to by Dr. Derry, one of our Governors. In the mean time, Dr. White, the Inspector, came down here, and desired me not to print the new form, as the Inspectors or the Government had under consideration a standard form for all the asylums. It was agreed by the Board to omit the words excluding epileptic cases, in consequence of their being in opposition to the Privy Council rules.

10021. Are not those three classes of patients very important classes to be taken into an asylum, and not to be left at large in the country?—They are, certainly; but it was thought, originally, that epilepsy, per se, without lunacy, should not be taken in.

10022. You have stated that the dietary of paying patients is different from that given to the ordinary patients in the house?—The only difference made in favour of paying patients is, that they get white bread instead of second quality bread. Many of the pauper patients get white bread also, but the paying patients invariably get it, because they have been accustomed to better, and, if possible, they are also put into a better class in the house, amongst the quiet and orderly.

10023. Would you put a violent patient, because he was a paying patient, into a class different from that required for his treatment?—Not violent exactly; but, of course, when they are getting well, if they are at all suitable for it in their habits, they are put into a better class.

10024. You do endeavour to make some difference, so as to favour the paying patients?—We do, in a moral point of view, as regards their moral treatment, thinking they have been accustomed to more comforts than they would have in this asylum as pauper patients, and the want of which they would feel worse than others.

10025. Does that difference of treatment give rise to jealousy amongst the patients?—I never knew it to do so.

10026. How often does the apothecary visit the asylum?—Generally every day; whenever he is about to absent himself, he speaks to me or to the doctor to act for him.

BALLYMORRIS.

Thomas Dillon, Esq., M.D., sworn and examined.

Bellinche District
Asylum.

T. Dillon, Esq., M.D.

Quantity of Medical Managers; Visiting Physicians; responsibility of treatment,
&c.

10027. What appointment do you at present hold in this institution?—Visiting physician.
10028. How long have you held that appointment?—I was appointed in January, and entered upon the duties in February last.

10029. What public appointment had you previously held?—I was surgeon in the Mayo County Infirmary, physicians to the gaol, and poor law medical inspector.

10031. Do you consider yourself charged, as visiting physician, with the medical and moral treatment of the inmates?—The Privy Council regulations say that I am.

10032. What is your opinion as to the propriety, or otherwise, of the resident manager of this institution being a medical man?—I think it is necessary that he should be so.

10033. In the event of the law requiring that the managers of these institutions should be medical men, do you consider that the visiting physician would still be required?—I do. I think it quite impossible that any man, per se, could manage the moral, medical, and fiscal portions of this institution; and, even if he were capable of doing so, I think it would be too much power to give to any one individual placed over so many irresponsible persons.

10034. Supposing the fiscal duties you speak of were transferred to another officer, do you think it would still be advisable to have a second medical person to intervene in the medical and moral treatment?—I do.

10035. With whom do you consider the main responsibility of treating the cases should rest?—The main responsibility should rest with the visiting physician.

10036. Then, would you consider the other in the light of a consulting physician?—Certainly.

10037. Do you think any medical man whose attention is entirely devoted to the cure of insane persons possesses any advantage in the treatment of their ordinary bodily diseases over a person practising out of doors?—I should say not. A well educated physician would be able to treat these properly. The only difficulty is, that many diseases of lunatics are masked, but an intelligent medical man knowing that fact would detect them.

10038. Do you think the presence of a second medical attendant would be necessary in consequence of the resident physician being entirely removed from general practice, and not having the same familiarity with general diseases which the visiting physician has?—Yes, I think it would be a great advantage, for that reason, to have the attendance of a man daily conversant with diseases out of doors.

10039. When a patient first presents himself for admission to the asylum, do you see the case?—If I am in the asylum I do, and if not I see it on my next visit.

10040. Has your attention been particularly called to the regulation under which the cases of special urgency are to be admitted only by you?—Yes, there was only one such case since I came.

10041. Was that case of special urgency one which had not even the recommendation of a Governor?—I think it was sent with a recommendation to follow.

10042. Are the cases which come with an order from a Governor for admission considered ordinary cases?—Yes, ordinary cases.

The Apothecary.

10043. It appears that the manager of this asylum is competent to act as an apothecary, and yet that there is an apothecary attached to the institution: as a general rule, if the manager was a medical man, do you consider that an apothecary would be necessary?—I do.

10044. Why do you consider he would be necessary?—I think the resident medical man should not compound his own prescriptions. I think he has quite sufficient to do without that, and there are also the prescriptions of the visiting physician to be compounded.

10045. Have you ever considered the advantage, or otherwise, of having a clinical clerk attached to the establishment?—No, I never gave that any consideration.

10046. It appears by a return which was furnished from this asylum on the 1st January last, that there were then 219 incurable cases out of an aggregate of 310 cases; have you ever considered, supposing the pressure on the asylum to increase beyond what it would be enabled to meet, what arrangement could be made to relieve the asylum from these incurable cases?—I would say that a separate establishment for the incurables would be very desirable.

10047. Would you prefer providing the additional accommodation required for the district in a separate asylum for incurables, or by means of additional buildings?—I would be for adding another wing or branch to this building.

10048. Considering the extent of this district, comprising the counties of Mayo, Galway, and Roscommon, would you prefer the erection of another asylum like the present in another part of the district, say Mayo, which could be detached, rather than have a separate asylum for incurables?—I should say that as long as I know the asylum, up to this time, the wants of the three counties have been supplied here, and we have twenty-three vacancies, while the discharges since January last have kept pace with the admissions. We have had forty-two admissions since January, and thirty-eight discharges, and there are twenty-three vacancies; that is within the space of five months, which is a tolerable test of the capabilities of the institution for the district.

10049. Does not the form of admission keep a considerable class of cases out?—I should say it does, and I will give you my reason. I have been frequently applied to, to know how persons could be got in.

10050. Does not the form which excludes epileptic cases, or idiots, or incurable cases,

The form of admis-

keep these classes out of the asylum?—It ought to do so; but there are such cases in this asylum.

10051. Practically the form at present is acted upon?—It ought to be acted upon, but it is not, for I find there are such cases in the house.

10052. Are not epileptic cases such that it is most desirable they should be detained in some place?—Certainly; they are most deserving objects of relief.

10053. You have stated that you consider the wants of the district have been fully answered by this asylum, in consequence of the number of vacancies not having been filled up; have you ever had your attention directed to the returns attached to the Seventh Report of the Inspectors of Lunatics?—Never.

10054. It appears from those returns that there are 698 idiots, epileptics, imbeciles, and seniles, not in asylums, workhouses, or gaols, in the counties of Mayo, Galway, and Roscommon; allowing that a considerable number of those cases belong to the more wealthy class, would not the return indicate that there is a large amount of lunacy, deserving of relief from such an institution as the present, still remaining out of doors in the district?—According to that return, which I was not aware of before, there certainly is.

10055. As regards the proposition to which I previously referred, of building a separate asylum for incurables, supposing such a course to be determined upon, do you think it would be desirable to have that institution in immediate connexion with the district asylum, or in a distant part of the country?—I should say in connexion with the asylum; because when a case becomes chronic it is easily transferred from one portion of a building to another, instead of being sent to a distant part of the country.

10056. Do you think that the fact of the patients being transferred to an institution which, one way or another, might be discovered by the patients to be a condemned one for incurables, would have an injurious effect upon them?—If they were treated in the same building with the others, there might not be an injurious effect.

10057. Do you think the presence of any large number of incurable and hopeless cases in an asylum of this kind is objectionable as regards a curative hospital?—Where they are mixed together, I should say so certainly. I could give an instance, which occurred the other day, of the importance of isolation, in the case of a man who was found to be kept in a constant state of excitement from the presence of other patients. I had him removed from the others, and a man placed in charge of him, and in ten days he became perfectly calm, and is now perfectly sane; showing that association with such cases as you speak of is injurious.

10058. Suppose a provincial asylum established for the reception of probably incurable cases, do you think that there is any risk of such an institution not exciting the same interest as a curative hospital would, on the part of the Governors, or those in charge of it, in consequence of the inmates being considered beyond cure?—It would be difficult to answer that; but I should say that where there is a prospect of a cure, a great interest is always excited.

10059. From your knowledge of the county Mayo, is it your opinion that county derives that full advantage from the asylum which the position it holds in the district enables it to possess?—I should say not.

10060. I believe the nearest part of the county Mayo is a considerable distance from this asylum?—Yes, about thirty-six miles; and the most remote part, Behanuffet, ninety miles.

10061. Can you form any opinion as to whether there is any large amount of lunacy unprovided for in the county Mayo?—I should think there is.

10062. It has been stated that there has been a considerable increase of late years in the number of applicants for admission to this institution; have you formed any opinion as to what are the causes of this increase?—I am connected with the institution only about four months; but, from the time it was established, we found it very difficult in Mayo to get cases confined here; so much so that in the gaol at Castlebar they have had as many as fifteen or twenty lunatics.

10063. For what length of time were they detained there?—For some months.

10064. Were you without sufficient means of treating them properly in the gaol?—I had some whatever.

10065. From your official experience, locally and generally, with medical matters in Ireland, do you think lunacy is on the increase?—It is on the increase.

10066. Have you formed any opinion as to the particular cause of that increase?—It is considered now, in Mayo, that intemperance has increased it.

10067. Do you consider any portion of the increase can be traced to those scenes of destitution and misery with which the country was afflicted some years since?—I think the increase is not connected with them, so many years have now elapsed.

10068. Has not temperance, rather than intemperance, prevailed for many years past throughout the west of Ireland?—About ten years ago it did, but not of late to any great extent.

10069. I presume you concur in the opinion that the detention of a lunatic in a place where his case cannot be treated in the early stages, is very often prejudicial to the ultimate cure?—Highly prejudicial; we get some of the worst of our cases from gaols.

10070. The result of confining such cases in gaols is, that they eventually become a charge upon the rate-payers during their lives in these institutions?—Yes.

10071. It has been stated that restraint is very little used in this asylum; is your practice opposed to it?—My practice is that of non-restraint.

10072. Have you found that you can absolutely dispense with restraint in all cases?—I have done so since I came here, with the exception of one case; that was a surgical case, and the restraint was used to prevent the man from removing dressings from his feet.

10073. From your constant visits to the establishment, are you satisfied that the bedding and clothing for the inmates are sufficient?—They are quite sufficient.

10074. Is the dietary one that you approve of?—It is very good. The physician has the power of increasing the dietary when circumstances demand it.

10075. What is your opinion as to the admission of paying patients into this asylum?—I think it would be a great boon to persons in limited circumstances.

10076. Do you think that there is a class of farmers who do not desire that their lunatic relatives should receive relief as paupers, and who yet, at the same time, are not able to pay for them in a private asylum, and, therefore, are obliged to retain them at home?—Yes.

10077. Do you think any distinction should be allowed in the asylum between paying patients and the others, as regards treatment or dress?—I think there should as to dress, certainly; paying patients are brought as nearly as possible in the dietary they receive to the circumstances or condition they were previously in.

10078. I understand you do not think that any difference should be made in their treatment from that of the other patients, except as to dress, beyond what their medical and moral treatment required?—Certainly not.

10079. Are you acquainted with workhouses in Ireland?—I am.

10080. How far do you consider any class of lunatics should be detained in those establishments?—I do not think they should be detained in them at all; for there are in the workhouses none of the appliances necessary for lunatics.

10081. I believe the workhouses are not at all adapted in their arrangements, beyond having a few cells, for the reception of lunatics?—They are not; those cells were called idiot cells, and I rather think they are not used as such.

10082. Are they, generally speaking, the sort of cells you would desire to see lunatics detained in?—Certainly not.

10083. As you are familiar with workhouses in Ireland, supposing a workhouse could be given up entirely for the reception of lunatic cases, do you think the construction of the buildings generally, which are pretty uniform, would admit of any large class of imbecile cases being detained in them?—I think they would.

10084. Have you found the attendants in this establishment, generally speaking, orderly and respectful?—I think some little revision is required with regard to the attendants. I do not think that some of them are of that order which they might be in an establishment of this kind.

10085. Have you brought the matter under the notice of the Board?—Yes. The Board are to-day electing a man to an office, the creation of which I recommended, that of head-keeper.

10086. Have the Board acquiesced in your views with regard to the regulation of the attendants?—Yes.

10087. If it were deemed desirable to give opportunities for the study of insanity, more extended than exist at present, do you think it would be possible to make a large institution like this available for such instruction, by having a clinical clerk resident in it, under your direction, for six or twelve months, studying the disease?—I think so; but I must add that he should come here for instruction alone.

10088. I understood you to say that it might be desirable to make amongst the patients, if wings were added to an institution like this, the distinction of curables and incurables, under the same staff?—Yes, that is my opinion.

10089. Would not that lead to the separation of a particular class in two separate establishments, suppose the quiet and orderly, would you not then have two classes of quiet and orderly, one of curables and the other of incurables?—Yes; the same classification must be observed in both cases.

10090. Then you would have a wing of the building for quiet and orderly curable cases and another wing for incurable cases, also quiet and orderly?—Certainly.

10091. What great advantage would arise from that?—I do not know any advantage that would arise beyond separating the incurables from the curables; I see no other advantage.

10092. What would be the advantage of having them in the same establishment in separate halls?—I propose that the building for the incurables should be altogether distinct.

10094. You mentioned, as an instance of the evil of mixing the two classes, the case of a man cured by isolation?—Yes; he belonged to the quiet class.

10095. Was his cure attributable to removal from the incurable cases, or merely to removal from the causes that excited him?—His removal from the causes that excited him.

10096. Supposing the resident managers of these institutions to be medical men, what limit would you place to the number for which asylums should be erected, and which the medical manager should properly take charge of?—I think 200 is as many as he could take charge of.

10097. That is supposing them to be curable cases?—Yes. It is a very responsible charge, 200 curable cases.

10098. You are clerk and storekeeper in this institution?—Yes.

10099. Do you reside upon the premises?—Yes.

10100. Do you receive the supplies which come into the institution?—Yes.

10101. These furnished by contractors as well as those purchased by order of the Board?—

Yes. I do not make purchases, the manager makes them.

10102. With regard to the fairs, when supplies are received from the fair for the use of the house, do they pass through your hands?—I give an order to the steward for a certain quantity of potatoes, and he gives them.

10103. When the crop is brought in does it remain in the steward's charge?—Yes; he makes up the potatoes into a pit and sends in the contents of a pit of potatoes.

10104. With regard to the material for making up the clothing for the inmates, does that material pass through your hands?—It comes into my hands and is issued out by me to the matron.

10105. When the clothing is made up, is it received by you again?—It comes back again for me to issue it, and I get an order from the matron to give it out.

10106. When new articles are issued, are the old ones taken back into store?—The old articles received from the makes are, generally, except shirts and coats, which go to the matron to be repaired.

10107. Do you find that the Board of Governors are able to obtain supplies at a fair and moderate rate at Ballinasloe?—Yes.

10108. In the absence of the manager do you take charge of the institution?—Yes.

10109. Have you any other occupation beyond your duties here?—None.

10110. Do you inspect the food prepared for use?—Yes; I am always with the patients when the meals are being given out, and generally see some division or other at some meal every day; I see that they are properly distributed. The matron goes to the female side.

10111. Are the inmates supplied with plates and mugs for use?—There are very few mugs in the house; they are all tins nearly.

10112. On the days potatoes are given are they served on plates?—On platters, such as are used in the poorhouses.

10113. Is each patient supplied with a plate?—Almost every one of them.

10114. With regard to the drugs, are they received into store by you?—I have nothing to say to them.

10115. Are they supplied by a contractor?—No; there is an order given by the medical officer—by the manager, who sends up to Dublin for them.

10116. By whom are they received when they come back?—By the apothecary.

CORK.

CORK, 18th JUNE, 1857.

Present:—Sir T. N. REDINGTON, Chairman; Dr. CORRIGAN, and Mr. BARRY, Secretary.Cork District Asylum.

CORK DISTRICT ASYLUM.

T. Power, Esq., M.D.Thomas Power, Esq., M.D., sworn and examined.

10117. What appointment do you hold in connexion with the Cork Lunatic Asylum?—
Resident physician.

*The Resident
Manager and Physician.*

10118. That is resident manager and physician?—What is called resident physician. It embraces, I think, a considerable share of what was formerly the duties of manager.

10119. Did you happen to hold any other appointment in connexion with this asylum?—
I was formerly sole attending physician when the asylum was at the old establishment in the town.

10120. Were you attending physician to the asylum previous to its being declared a district asylum for the county of Cork?—I was.

10121. Then you have had considerable experience in the treatment of the insane?—
Yes; I was appointed visiting physician to the asylum by the County and City Grand Jurors, previous to its being made a district asylum; and I was re-appointed on its becoming a district asylum, by the then Lord Lieutenant, Lord Heytesbury, in Council, when Sir Thomas Fremantle was chief secretary.

The Visiting Surgeon; his duties.

10122. Are you connected with any private asylum?—I attend a private asylum medically.

10123. Is there at present any other medical gentleman attached to this institution but yourself?—There is an attending surgeon; he is called surgeon here, but he is a surgeon and physician.

10124. When you hold the office of visiting physician was the manager a medical man?—
No, the first manager was not; he died, and the second manager was a man who had been apothecary to the forces. He was appointed, not in consequence of his medical knowledge, but as any non-professional person might have been.

10125. Is there any understanding or arrangement between you and the visiting surgeon or physician, as to the manner in which your respective duties are to be discharged?—
We have no written arrangement, in fact there are no rules made between us, but whenever a surgical case occurs I give him intimation of it; I send for him. Besides his doing the surgical duties, I also consult him in case of any other incidental disease upon which I may wish to have his opinion.

10126. How often does he attend in the course of the week?—Well, his attendance depends in a great measure upon the requirements of whatever cases he has to attend to; I cannot answer the question precisely, but he attends very frequently, though I do not think he has any regular days or any fixed time for coming. He sometimes comes every day, and sometimes not so frequently.

10127. He does not, therefore, discharge the duties of physician as laid down in the Privy Council regulations?—He does not; he never interferes in the ordinary medical practice of the establishment. It is only in those cases that are surgical he interferes, unless when I require his assistance.

*The discharge of the duties of Resident

10129. But, practically, the duties of the office which you hold comprise the duties previously discharged by the visiting physician, together with the control of the establishment, by residing on the spot?—Precisely.

10130. The duties of clerk are discharged by a subordinate officer, for whom you are responsible?—Yes; and I have the assistance of an additional officer, who did not exist before, the steward or head superintendent. He bears the same relation to the male side that the matron does to the female side. He looks after the food and the patients.

10131. From the statement you have made, it appears that the staff differs materially with the other asylums; this is, I think, one of the largest.

Duties not defined.

10132. When you were appointed to the office which you at present hold, did you receive any particular instructions as to the duties you were to perform?—No; I do not know what are my duties.

10133. I presume you would consider it desirable that they should be distinctly laid down?—
It would be much more satisfactory to me if they were.

10134. When patients are first admitted into the asylum, does the surgeon visit them?—
No.

10135. He merely attends as consulting surgeon to the institution?—He merely attends as surgeon to the institution, and as consulting physician occasionally, but his real position here is that of surgeon.

Propriety of having a Resident Physician.

10136. Having had experience of the management of this institution, under the present arrangement, whereby the resident manager is a medical man, and discharges the duties of visiting physician, and previously under circumstances when the manager was not a medical man, and that you were visiting physician, which do you think is the better arrangement?—Well, I think it the better arrangement that there should be a resident physician, acting as physician for the insane, and acting as their moral physician at the same time. I think the very circumstance of his being brought more frequently than he otherwise would be in connection with the patients, makes them have more confidence in him, than they would have in the visiting physician, who made only occasional visits.

10137. Do you consider the proper treatment of lunatics requires the constant and daily observation of the person in charge of that treatment?—I could not say that it actually requires it in all cases, but I know it is an advantage, and a very great advantage.

10138. What number of patients have you at present in the house?—438.

10139. Of whom it would appear, by the Daily Statement Book, that 223 were incurable?—Yes.

10140. Do you find the number of incurable cases increasing?—Well, no, I think it remains about stationary; I think it was just as great ten years ago as it is at present.

10141. Have you any difficulty in getting patients removed, who may be incurable?—No attempt of the kind has been made, not knowing where to apply for the purpose.

10142. Have you experienced any difficulty in getting patients removed who had been cured?—Yes, we had difficulty in that; and that is one of the things that would require legislation, in my estimation. We have more than one at present in the house we cannot get removed, unless we would turn them outside the gate, which we do not like to do. We have written to the persons signing the engagement, and they have treated the communications with the greatest contempt.

10143. The engagement to which you refer, contemplates the removal of the patients, although they should not be cured?—Yes. When the form was last printed, there was a change made in it, in consequence of a case that we could not get removed, and of my being unable to certify the patients were cured.

10144. What number of patients had you in the old asylum, before this new building was erected?—In my time, I do not think we ever had more than 430, if I recollect rightly, but previous to my time there were as many as 490 or 500 certainly.

10145. Then, although this large asylum has been erected with improved accommodation for lunatics, the number accommodated is, practically, not more than what it was before?—Not more, but they are better accommodated.

10146. Have you had an increased number of applications for admission since the asylum was opened?—We must have had an increased number of applications for admission, because we have an increased number of patients; there were only 377 patients when we came here, and there is an increase to 448, in about two years.

10147. What number in the asylum calculated to accommodate?—It was built for 500.

10148. Is it capable of accommodating 500?—Well, I could not well answer that; it should be by great squeezing we could accommodate 500, for several cells and places have been taken off, for other purposes, and several rooms and passages left out of the original design.

10149. Does that include the accommodation in the infirmary?—No.

10150. How many would the infirmary accommodate?—About thirty-two.

10151. Have you at present many applications each month for admission?—A great many; I think the number varies from eight to fifteen. It is scarcely ever less than eight; that is between regular applications, and those we receive as urgent cases.

10152. The orders for admission are made on board days, and by the Board, except for urgent cases?—Yes; the Board have kindly extended to me the power of taking in patients that come any distance, or that are violent, or such cases as have no one to take charge of them, and which I receive as urgent cases. All those are reported to the next Board and they sanction their admission.

10153. Do you make the entries required?—I make a minute, and state at the time why they are admitted as urgent cases.

10154. Do you consider that the asylum at present is sufficiently large for the accommodation of the lunatics of the district?—It is, at present, as far as I know, but I do not know what lunatics may be out of doors.

10155. Supposing the demand for admission to increase to such an extent, that the asylum would not be enabled to afford accommodation for the patients, have you ever thought in what way that additional accommodation might be provided?—Never; but it could be easily provided by the extension of a wing, or by fitting up a compartment in the new nearly tenantless Country Union Workhouses, as a chronic hospital for idiots, epileptics, &c.

10156. Have you ever had under consideration any plan for removing a class of lunatics to a separate asylum?—No.

10157. What would be your opinion of the removal of a class of supposed incurable lunatics, to a separate institution?—It is very hard to say what an incurable lunatic is. Several persons, of whom I myself and other physicians despaired, have become sane, and continued so for years. There is one man in Cork, now doing a very good business, who was for seven years in an asylum, and was one of the worst cases in it; I dare say there is not a more acute man of business in Cork now than he is.

10158. When parties apply for admission to the asylum, do you require them to fill up this form which you have exhibited?—Yes.

10159. Do you find the information they give is sufficiently full?—I do not find it of any service whatever.

10160. Do you feel that you do not get a full or correct history of the case?—I do not depend upon it at all.

Cork District Asylum.
T. Power, Esq., M.D.

10161. With regard to the cases that come here from gaols, do you have any information with respect to them?—Not as much as I would wish to have. It is a source of great inconvenience, which gets me into rows with the Board, and other people, that when sending a patient they do not give the religion, and give no clue as to the residence of the patients, or their relatives or friends, so that we could communicate with them, in case of death, or recovery.

10162. Are cases coming from workhouses accompanied with any information?—The information required on the second page of the admission form is generally not given, that as to whether the friends or relatives are affected with the same disease or not.

10163. I suppose you would consider it a great advantage to have the history of each case given?—I would. It would be a great advantage in the treatment of the case.

Admission of cases from workhouses.

10164. Do you know whether any delay is experienced in obtaining admission here, for patients coming from workhouses?—Yes; by the rule they are obliged to wait for the next Board, and longer than that.

10165. No impediment arises from the parties being obliged to give security for the removal of the patients?—They generally give the security, either of the guardians, or of the master, for the removal of the patients. They complain of want of facility in getting patients into this institution from the workhouse in Cork. A complaint was made last Board day.

10166. What was that grounded upon?—It was grounded upon my refusing a case, for which the papers were not perfected. There was no medical certificate and no symptoms were described that would make me suppose the case was an urgent one. The case was transferred to the county gaol, and is there still.

10167. In order to be transferred to the county gaol, the patient must have been committed under the Dangerous Lunatic Act?—Yes.

10168. He must, therefore, have exhibited some signs of violence?—I do not know; I suppose it must have been the case, for that is the usual way to get them into gaol.

Detention of lunatics
houses.

10169. From your experience of workhouses and gaols, do you consider them fit places for the accommodation of lunatics?—Certainly not. The moment persons are declared to be lunatics, I think there should be every facility afforded for placing them in an establishment of this kind.

10170. I believe the immediate treatment of the case is very important for the purpose of cure?—It is of more importance than any other circumstance connected with insanity.

Paying patients, &amp;c.

10171. Have you any patients here who pay for their maintenance?—Yes.

10172. What rule is adopted by the Board, with reference to those cases?—The Board asked the average cost of each patient, for the previous year, when first making this rule, and they made a rule that payments then were to be received of sums varying from £17 to £20 per annum for each case. It appeared to them that that amount would cover their cost to the asylum.

10173. Was that independently of clothing?—No, including clothing.

10174. How long is it since the Government have adopted the rule of admitting paying patients?—About six or eight months.

10175. Have you received many such patients since?—I think we have received about ten or twelve; we have about eight or nine at present.

10176. What sort of investigation takes place, with respect to the capacity of the friends of those parties, to pay for them in a private asylum?—It sometimes happens I take in those cases, previous to the meeting of the Board, when they are very bad or violent; I receive them, as urgent cases, upon their paying in advance a quarter of the highest rate of charge, that is £5, and I represent the case to the next Board. Some of the members of the Board are generally acquainted with the circumstances of the party, or his friends, and I could not myself take them in unless I was aware they were unable to pay in a private asylum.

10177. Do you consider the Board take sufficient means to see that the friends of the party are not able to pay in a private asylum?—As yet they have done so.

10178. In the short period that has elapsed since the admission of those paying patients, have you had any complaint of the quarterly stipend not being regularly paid?—No.

10179. Is it your own impression that there is a considerable class of cases in the country of lunatics whose friends would not like to have them admitted into this asylum as paupers, but who are at the same time not able to pay for them in private asylums?—I do not think there are many of that class in this county; I ought to be a tolerably good judge, for I paid for my information. I got up an asylum to receive patients at ten shillings a week, and I never got more than eight or nine patients. Dr. Osborne and I had the asylum.

10181. Is it your opinion that there is no undue preference given in any way to those in the immediate vicinity of the asylum before those from distant parts of the county?—No preference whatever is given. No case that is a fit case for admission is ever rejected.

The Board of Government.

10182. Is the attendance of Governors pretty regular?—It is not very numerous, but it is tolerably regular.

10183. Have many occasions occurred on which there has been no quorum?—Not many occasions, but it has occurred more than once.

10184. Does the Board contain a fair representation of the county of the city of Cork as well as of the county of Cork?—I know that a great many citizens complain of not having a voice on the Board—a great many of those who superintend the rates here. There are a great many of the Governors, I believe, who are residents of the county of the city, but I do not think the citizens look upon them as citizens.

10185. Do the Board meet more than once a month?—Once a month they meet; occasionally there is a Special Board for particular purposes.

10186. Is there any Visiting Committee appointed by the Board of Governors to inspect the house from time to time?—There had been, but I think it was discontinued.

10187. Do the Governors themselves visit the house?—Well, not very often; they generally visit when there is any thing in the way of complaint as to the construction of the establishment, deficiencies in the baths or the windows, or when works are being required, or things found to be out of order, they generally examine them.

10188. Are we to understand that the Governors only visit the house when any particular matter requires to be inspected or examined?—They do more frequently than that.

10189. Have you had much reason to complain of deficiencies in this building?—Great reason, if you take it from the time we first got into it to the present; and still we have to complain of deficiencies, but they are about to be removed. There are workmen engaged on the grounds.

Deficiencies in the building.

10190. What are the deficiencies of which you complain?—All the back windows are unsafe; patients can get out through them, and they have done so. We have no means of fastening the windows—those are about to be removed by order from the Treasury; areas that are dangerous; the sewerage requires to be re-constructed; and the baths and water-closets to be repaired, and they are in hands.

10191. Are there any artificial means of ventilating the house?—That is also in contemplation.

Ventilation; warming.

10192. Was there any arrangement made for artificial ventilation in the construction of the building?—There was an arrangement made, but it was doubtful whether it would act or not; according to my view it never acted; other persons thought differently; large towers were built for the purpose.

10193. How is the house warmed?—By fire-places.

10194. Is there no warming apparatus?—There is no warming apparatus. That was put down as one of the requisites when sending in our complaints to the Treasury upon the last occasion, but it was rejected.

10195. Is there a sufficient supply of hot and cold water laid on in the house?—Yes.

10196. You state that there is an infirmary for the treatment of the patients?—Yes.

The infirmary.

10197. Is that distinct from the building?—It is separate altogether. It was an old dwelling-house that was converted into an infirmary by the Board of Works.

10198. Is your own opinion favourable to the propriety of having infirmaries in all those institutions?—Certainly, they are of very great advantage.

10199. You do not approve, therefore, of the lunatic sick being treated in their separate cells?—No, I do not approve of that at all.

10200. Do the patients dine altogether or in separate day-rooms?—They dine in separate day-rooms. The patients in each gallery dine by themselves.

10201. I believe there is a large quantity of ground attached to this institution?—Fifty-seven acres is the quantity contained within the walls, as given to us by the Board of Works.

Quantity of ground; employment of patients.

10202. Are those patients whose health will permit of it employed in agricultural pursuits to any great extent?—Yes, to a considerable extent. There are about from ten to twelve acres under cultivation; that is a rough guess; from this we produce potatoes, cabbage, turnips, and other vegetables.

10203. By a return for to-day it appears there are only sixteen male patients at agricultural labour and gardening?—That kind of labour is over, with the exception of the turnips; the potatoes are all dug.

10204. Have you adequate means of employing all those inmates who are capable of being employed?—We have a great deal more means of employment than we have men for; in laying out the grounds outside, in making roads, in cleansing out the yards, and carting the grounds which were left in a rough state in the front; besides, they have done all the work for the new sewerage; many of the men are at present employed on it.

10205. I believe that tailoring, carpentry, and shoe-making are taught in the institution, are you enabled to make up here all the shoes required for the inmates?—Not all; at one time we were, in consequence of having a good many shoe-makers. We sent out some cured.

10206. Is the male clothing made up in the establishment?—All; and also the female.

10207. Is the sheeting made up here?—Yes, and beds and bedding, and table-cloths; and the washing of the establishment is done here.

Classification.

10208. What classification are you enabled to make of the patients?—We classify idiots, weak-minded patients, and epileptics in one division, with three galleries. We classify recent and violent cases in three more galleries; and then in three other galleries we have the more quiet class of patients, those that are either convalescent or have got into a permanent state of quiet mania.

10209. When you speak of three galleries, I presume all the patients in those are associated together?—Only in the yard; they do not associate at their meals and when sleeping; in other words, there is only one yard for every three galleries.

10210. How frequently do the patients get a bath—is there any fixed day of the week for the purpose?—Every week regularly every patient in the house gets a bath, except those in the infirmary; that is independently of those baths ordered medically.

Baths.

Cont.

T. Power, Esq., M.D.
Restraint; Instruments of.

10211. What restraint do you use?—We use the strait-jacket whenever we have occasion for restraint, and we use a girdle with bracelets.

10212. Do you make a daily entry of the cases of restraint in the Daily Statement Book?—Yes, that is in case of restraint by means of either the jacket or the girdle.

10213. What case of restraint would you not enter?—We would not enter putting on the strong shirt, which is used to prevent patients from tearing their clothes.

10214. But the other cases, however short the period of restraint, are entered?—Yes, however short the period, they are entered; and the keepers are never allowed to use any restraint without acquainting me or the steward at the male side, or the matron at the female side. If they see a necessity for restraint when I am out of the way they can order it.

10215. Who keeps the instruments of restraint?—The steward chiefly.

10216. Why do you not keep them yourself?—It was not the custom of the place; I never kept them.

10217. Are you aware that the Privy Council regulations require you to keep them?—Well, I was not aware of that; we have recourse to them but very seldom.

10218. In this asylum of 436 patients, how many cases of restraint may occur in the week?—Probably for weeks and weeks no case will occur. I will be obliged to order restraint to-night for one case. In consequence of the patient never lying down, I must have her put into a box bed, and the sheets tied round her to keep her in bed. She remains all the night standing bolt upright. Those are cases in which we must have recourse to restraint; at least, so I think.

10219. Are those instruments of restraint ever left entirely in the charge of the servants of the wards?—They are; but the servants in the wards never use them unless by direction. They generally follow the directions on the subject; at least, I have never found them transgressing. Whenever a case of violence suddenly breaks out they put the patient into a padded cell.

10220. As long as the instruments of restraint are not kept by you, as the regulations require, you cannot be perfectly certain they are not used without your authority?—I cannot be perfectly certain; I could not swear it.

Padded rooms.

10221. Have you always had padded rooms in this asylum?—Padded rooms or strong rooms.

10222. Have you found them useful?—Very useful; we could scarcely get on without them. There is a young man here now whom we kept sleeping in a padded cell for, I suppose, a month, from the fear of his attempting to commit suicide; we put everything out of his way; he is now recovered.

Hours of retiring to rest and of rising.

10223. At what hour do the patients retire to rest in the winter?—About six or seven o'clock.

Books; amusements.

10224. At what time do they rise?—From seven to half-past seven o'clock, and breakfast at nine. They rise at six o'clock in summer, and breakfast at eight.

10225. What kind of occupation or amusement have you for patients during wet days or winter evenings?—We have some few books and some few newspapers.

10226. How many books may you have for the use of the inmates?—Well, I dare say, about fifty or sixty books, or more.

10227. Are those in general use?—Those are in general use—distributed all through the house. There are not many patients who read, but those who do read are very fond of reading.

10228. Have you any other amusements for them?—There are some rough draught-tables.

10229. Is there any recreation hall?—There is a large hall.

10230. Has it ever been used?—No.

10231. Are there any parties or dances given?—No. There was a lady here yesterday who said she would bring up music on Saturday next to see what effect it would have on them, and I gave her leave. They are very fond of dancing. There are persons in the house who play upon a musical instrument, and when they play the patients dance.

10232. Would you not attach considerable importance to amusements being afforded to those unfortunate inmates?—I do, decidedly. I think there are several sources of amusement of the means for which we are very deficient; for example, we have no hall-court, though that would not answer on a wet day unless it was roofed.

Galleries, day-rooms, &c.

10233. Is there any furniture in the long galleries which the patients are in the habit of frequenting?—No.

10234. Then they stop in the day-rooms when they are within doors?—Yes; and they walk up and down the galleries, and look out of the windows.

10235. What furniture is there in the day-rooms?—Some tables and forms.

10236. Are there any chairs for weak or feeble patients?—Yes; lately I got a couple of dozen of strong straw arm-chairs for weak persons, which I have placed in the infirmary.

Question of school instruction.

10237. Is there a school in the asylum?—No school.

10238. I presume there are many patients unable to read or write?—The great majority are unable to read or write.

10239. Apart from any advantage in the way of education, do you consider the occupation which instruction would afford would be advantageous?—I think any thing that would engage their minds would be of advantage in a curative point of view.

Arrangements for religious worship.

10240. What are the arrangements for religious worship?—The Roman Catholic and Protestant chaplains, at different hours, celebrate mass, and read the service in the chapel on the grounds. The Roman Catholic chaplain attends at eight o'clock on Sunday morning and on holidays; and the Protestant chaplain at half-past ten or eleven o'clock.

10241. The chapel, I believe, is detached from the building?—The chapel is detached.

10242. Do you find that inconvenient?—I think it rather an advantage. It gives the patients more the idea of going to church or chapel the same as when they were at home. They look forward to it with pleasure as a recreation.

10243. Have there been always chaplains attached to the Cork District Lunatic Asylum?—Always, as long as I recollect.

10244. What is your opinion as to the advantage of the ministrations of chaplains in a medical point of view?—I think they are highly beneficial.

10245. What proportion of the number of inmates is generally capable of attending divine worship on Sunday?—We have a great many. The Roman Catholic chapel is full—from 150 to near 300 Roman Catholics attend; and, I suppose, from twenty to thirty Protestants.

10246. Nearly one-half the inmates are enabled to attend?—Yes; there is a record in the daily statement book.

10247. Are you aware whether the chaplains are in the habit of preaching on Sundays?—I think they are. The Roman Catholic chaplain does.

10248. Are the chaplains allowed free access to the patients during the week?—Yes.

10249. What restriction is there upon their attendance, supposing a case appeared to you, as manager, to be one that should not be disturbed?—I never interfered. I have requested the chaplains very frequently to go to the patients to speak to them, for their conversation has a tranquillising influence on them in their excitement, even though in robust bodily health.

10250. Have you found that any squabbling or religious difference arose, after the patients have returned from the places of worship on Sundays, between those of different persuasions?—Never; I never saw the slightest difference between them.

10251. Are the chaplains provided with the books they may require for the religious instruction of the members of their respective creeds?—Yes; they have prayer books, rosary beads, &c.

10252. Are any Bibles furnished?—No Bibles.

10253. Are the servants of the establishment generally capable of reading and writing?—The majority of them are, the attendants generally; but some of the lower servants are not.

10254. Are they ever employed in reading to the patients?—Never.

10255. Have you a sufficient staff of servants?—I think not.

10256. Have you ever brought the matter before the Board?—No; some years ago the matter was brought forward and settled as at present, though the inmates have become very numerous since. We have the same staff now we had then.

10257. Is there any examination of candidates for such appointments?—I always examine them, and the Board subsequently, when confirming their appointments.

10258. Is it now required that persons to be appointed to these situations shall read and write?—It is not imperatively necessary when a man is qualified in other respects, and that he is not appointed to any very advanced position: it is not considered perfectly essential that he should read and write.

10259. Have you ever had occasion to carry into effect, in this institution, the Superannuation Act?—We have not had occasion.

10260. What are the salaries of the attendants?—The head attendants on the male side of the establishment, that is of three galleries, are paid a pound a month, with rations, and clothing, and coals. The assistants are paid fifteen shillings a month, and rations, and clothing.

10261. Do you find these wages enable you to secure the services of competent persons?—I think that competent persons have often wished to go away from this place to present themselves to be hired elsewhere.

10262. In consequence of higher wages being given elsewhere?—Yes.

10263. When you wish to bring matters under the notice of the Board, do you do so in writing?—Always. I first of all allude to it in my own statement, which I make every day, at the commencement of the sitting, to the Board; and then I have it in a memorandum book in half a column, and the other half of the column is for the answer of the Board. I make a written report, each board day, on the state of the institution since the previous meeting, and I mention any occurrences worthy of mentioning that may have occurred in the meantime.

10264. Is there a medical journal kept in the institution?—Yes, there is; it is kept weekly instead of daily.

10265. Who acts as secretary to the Board, and takes down the minutes of the proceedings?—The minutes of the Board are generally contained in this memorandum book alluded to, or in resolutions that may be brought forward, and that are taken down by the clerk.

10266. Are supplies for the house procured by contract?—Yes, for the most part, except trivial things that we could not bring into a contract, or that are not thought of at the time of entering into contracts.

10267. Have you experienced any difficulty in getting the articles required for the establishment from contractors?—We have generally plenty of contractors; at present we have no contractor for grocery, and we have some trouble about it.

10268. Those articles that are not supplied by contract, but purchased, are they brought into store to the store-keeper, in the same way as the rest of the supplies?—Always; and they are brought into my account and submitted to the next Board. There are trivial things for which I get £30 at a time to pay for the purchase of, various little things and small repairs, such as the repairing of locks.

Audit of accounts.

10260. Your accounts are audited by the Commissioners of Audit in London?—Yes.
10270. How soon after an account is closed does the audit take place?—From six months to two years and three years.

10271. Do you mean that there have been accounts detained for three years?—I think, for a very long time after the opening of this asylum, upwards of two years elapsed before the accounts were sent.

10272. Do you think a more immediate audit would be more satisfactory?—Well, I do not think it makes any difference to us.

10273. Are you enabled to reply to the questions which are put to you, at the end of two or three years, relative to the items in your accounts?—Almost just as well as at the moment, in consequence of the state of our books.

The visits of the Inspectors.

10274. How frequently do the Inspectors visit the asylum?—Well, the Inspectors have no regular time. I could not say how frequently; I would say, they visit from eight to ten times a year, between both.

10275. Are those visits made on Board days?—Latterly, the visits were made by Dr. White, on Board days, because there were matters coming before the Board, that I thought required his attendance, and I would write to him, saying I wished he would attend at such and such a Board.

10276. How many visits have been made by the Inspectors in the year, without notice to you?—Four or five; four certainly.

10277. When the Inspectors attend the Board, do they take part in the proceedings the same as the other Governors?—Occasionally they do.

10278. Do they vote?—They have voted very frequently; one of them voted on a question of expenditure, the governors objected, and he said he would vote no more on money matters.

Question of clinical instruction in the treatment of insanity.

10279. As you have a large Medical School here, do you think that any arrangement could be made, by which advanced students, of good moral conduct, could have the advantage of learning here the treatment of insanity?—I do; I think arrangements could be made for that purpose; I think it could be carried out. There is a demand for the instruction; I have been frequently applied to on the subject.

10280. What arrangements would you propose?—I would propose having clinical lectures for certain periods, say three months; selecting for instruction acute cases, and those of recent occurrence.

10281. Do you propose to give those lectures yourself, or by another?—I propose to give them myself.

10282. Would you propose that any of the advanced students should be resident pupils or clinical clerks under you, for a short time?—I would not see any objection to it; I think it would be a great advantage to have one student resident.

10283. Would it not be also an assistance to you in taking cases?—Certainly, and in many other respects.

Question of having Visiting Physicians.

10284. You have stated that the arrangements between you, as the medical manager and the visiting medical officer, are not defined at present?—They are not defined. He has nothing to do with the medical practice, unless I choose to consult him upon particular medical cases, and he always gives me the assistance of his valuable opinion upon these occasions.

10285. Not speaking particularly, as regards this institution, but on a general principle—would you think it advisable to have an officer, in the position of consulting physician, or visiting physician, attached to an institution of this kind?—Well, no, I would not like a visiting physician. I think he would be sure to clash with the resident physician. I think it would be much better to have, as we have in this institution, and which is found to work so well, a visiting surgeon who might be occasionally consulted, medically, by the resident physician. The visiting surgeon and I never clash in our duties.

10286. Are you visiting physician to a private institution in the city?—Yes.

10287. And do you consider the principle, as regards a visiting physician, should be different in a private asylum, and a public asylum?—Yes, for this reason: I have the sole treatment of the cases in the private asylum; they are left to me. The proprietor employs me, and if he did not like me, he would not employ me. We could not clash.

10288. If it be advisable to have a visiting physician to take charge of patients in a private asylum, where there is a much smaller number of patients, why would it not be equally advisable to have the same arrangement in a large asylum?—Well, I cannot answer that question without going into the minutiae of a private asylum. The visiting physician would be in the same position as the resident physician of a public asylum, that is, sole physician.

10289. Suppose there was no such objection, on the part of the proprietor, do you think it would then be advisable to have a visiting physician in a private asylum?—Do you mean a private asylum, kept by a physician?

10290. Yes.—I do not see any necessity for a visiting physician then; but still I think it would be an advantage to the asylum to have a visiting physician.

10291. Then if it be an advantage to a private asylum, to have a visiting physician, why would it not be an advantage to a large asylum, to have a visiting physician also?—Because the medical men, who keep asylums, are generally confined to them, in their practice, and generally know very little of ordinary medical practice.

10292. Is not the resident physician of a larger asylum, placed in exactly similar circumstances?—He would be, if placed in the asylum immediately after coming from college.

10293. The proprietor of a private asylum does not necessarily become a proprietor immediately after coming from college?—Not necessarily; but asylums generally descend from father to son, and the son is made a doctor to carry on the asylum, and seldom seeks for general practice.

10294. Then it would be your view, that the resident medical manager of the asylum should have the uncontrolled care of the sick?—Yes.

10295. Is it your opinion that the manager of an asylum, who is out of general practice for many years, is as capable of undertaking the treatment of the cases of sickness that may occur among the insane, as a physician in general practice would be?—Do you mean out of practice as long as he is connected with that asylum?

10296. Yes, out of practice for many years.—I think he is just as capable, if not more so, than the other physician, for treating diseases incidental to lunatics.

10297. Is there any difference between the bodily diseases of lunatics and sane persons?—Pathologically, I should say not, but symptomatically there is.

10298. What is the difference?—The diseases are much more latent; not as well developed, when occurring in the insane, as if occurring in persons possessed of their clear intellect.

10299. If they be more latent, would they not require more practical knowledge to detect them?—The practical knowledge, I say, is in the man constantly attending them, more than in a person not accustomed to them. I think the patients in the asylum would sooner communicate their ideas to persons they were acquainted with, than to a man they see but casually, when they happen to be suffering from bodily diseases.

10300. Would you desire at all to have a visiting or consulting physician attached to the asylum, in addition to the resident medical manager?—I think it is an advantage, in a large establishment like this.

10301. What would you propose to be the nature of his connexion with the asylum—is it that he should be called in merely in such cases as you would consider necessary, or that, being appointed visiting or consulting medical officer, he should regularly visit, being paid a salary?—I think the arrangement which exists at present in this institution of a surgeon, with power to the physician, of calling in his aid, in certain cases in which he may consider the aid necessary, is one of the best arrangements that could possibly be made; the attending surgeon acts as consulting physician; it works very well here.

10302. Speaking on general principles with respect to future appointments, would you think it advisable that the visiting or consulting physician, whichever he may be called, should be qualified both in medicine and surgery?—I think it would be an advantage, decidedly, that he should be so qualified.

10303. You have mentioned the case of a patient sheeted down in the bed every night, will you describe the manner in which the patient is secured?—The patient is secured by putting sheets over and round the lauds through holes in the side of the bed; there is plenty of room given to the limbs, but the sheet is tight across, and the patient must lie down. If they attempt to get up they are caught by the sheet.

10304. Are the attendants allowed to do that without any order from you?—Certainly not; they have not the apparatus, they have not the bedding for the purpose.

10305. Is it your opinion that is a better mode than to let the patient lie with the mattress on the floor?—In winter, a patient would be frozen to death if left that way.

10306. Have you no means of providing warmth for such a patient?—No.

10307. Were you attached to this institution in 1852?—Yes.

10308. I find recorded in that year thirteen cases of "Epileptic Apoplexies," and none in any of the following years; can you give any explanation of that?—None, except that it was a misnomer putting them down in that way. Ten months of the year were passed in the old asylum, and Mr. O'Neill, manager at that time, recorded the deaths according to his own nomenclature, without consulting me on the subject. I consider the great majority of these causes of death to be incorrect. There were several patients died that year of the cold of this place. It was, if I recollect rightly, the first year we came here. It was excessively cold, and the walls of the rooms in the back of the house were wet, and a number of cases died of cold. Epileptics appeared to me to be much more subject to be affected by the cold than any other patients. We had a disease that year also, which we mistook for a very long time; it was scorbatus. It appeared without any symptoms except general weakness, ending in diarrhoea. We had a great number of deaths before we discovered the nature of the disease, before it showed itself by any of the ordinary symptoms of scorbatus, such as purple blotches and spongy gums. The way I first discovered it was by the mother of a patient complaining that her daughter was beaten. I examined the case and saw large purple blotches at the back of the patients, which could not be produced by beating. I did not know how to account for it at first: I watched more closely and I thought it looked something like scorbatus; and having watched for some time, I found out that it was scorbatus, and almost every patient that got ill subsequently was treated for it. The disease did not show itself by the ordinary symptoms, but after the discovery we had very few deaths. Some of these cases to which you referred were affected by that, and it was at that time the entry you have read was made.

10309. Then, as such a mistake may occur in an asylum, would it not afford an additional reason for having two heads instead of one in the way of medical advice?—It may; but as it happened on this occasion, I was the first in Cork that discovered the disease, which occurred extensively in the Union workhouse at that time.

10310. I find in the same year as many as thirty deaths from consumption, while the highest number in any other year only amounted to seventeen; have you the same explanation to offer for the prevalence of that disease in that year?—I have no doubt but that the late manager's nonattendance was again at fault upon this occasion; moreover, I find no cause so general for predisposing to consumption as that very scurbutus. It is said to be a very curable disease, but I never saw a case of it recover perfectly; is left a sting always.

10311. I find on referring to the sick diet book, that there is no entry in it from 1854 to 1855, inclusive, can you explain that?—My attention was not directed to that book. I thought it was entirely in the care of the steward at that time, but all the diets required there are given in the ordinary daily diet sheet and storekeeper's diet book.

10312. If not entered in the diet book for the infirmary, what is the direction under which the patients were supposed to get the necessary diets?—I ordered them in the infirmary.

10313. Were those verbal orders?—Verbal orders.

10314. I find in the infirmary diet book an entry for November, 1856, and there are other entries for the same period, the one appearing to be a copy of the other, but they do not exactly correspond?—Those books were kept by different men, and I used not to look over the books at the time; besides, after a certain period of use the book, from its form, becomes confused, from the frequent crossing out of articles previously ordered, and the substitution of new items in their places, to be again crossed out and others marked in.

10315. I refer to the last six months—November last—by whom is the prescription book kept?—By me.

10316. I find no entry in this book from June, 1847, to April, 1853?—During that time I kept this book very irregularly. I used to give the prescriptions verbally, and get the medicines made up in the infirmary. My prescriptions are generally very simple. They were made up with the assistance of the attendants there and the apothecary.

10317. Were you visiting physician or manager at that time?—I was visiting physician till 1852, when I was made resident physician on the new buildings being about to be inhabited.

10318. What is the arrangement for informing you of any cases of sickness or accidents that may occur?—They are put down on the statement book from reports given by the various heads of divisions every morning.

10319. And are they available for your inspection and the surgeon's on your visits?—Special reports are made for the surgeon, and put up in a particular part of the office, that he may see them when he comes.

10320. Is there an apothecary?—There is.

10321. How often does he visit?—Sometimes twice, and sometimes three times a-week. Latterly he has been visiting more frequently than upon former occasions.

10322. Who makes up the medicines on the days when he comes here?—The medicines I prescribe are generally very simple; they are made up by the infirmary man, a good many of them; and when I see any thing complex I send for the apothecary.

10323. What is the education of the infirmary man?—None, except that he learned to read and write, but he was infirmarian at the workhouse for a long time and can make up these ordinary things, such as castor oil and pills.

10324. Do you think, with his education, he is capable of making up a medical prescription?—I think he is capable of making up the simple prescription I speak of with a few drops of laudanum.

10325. Do you think laudanum a medicine to be trusted with a man of that kind?—Certainly not; but ten or fifteen drops I may give to him to be put into a dose of castor oil.

10326. Then it comes practically to this, that while there is an apothecary for the institution, the medicines are made up by a man who knows nothing of medicine?—Not all the medicines. The complex medicines are made up by the apothecary.

10327. Do you call laudanum a simple or harmless medicine?—When made up complexly, the apothecary is sent for.

10328. Do you think it safe to trust a man of the kind you have described with such duties?—I do think it is safe.

10329. How frequently do you go round the house yourself?—Generally every day.

10330. What do you mean by generally?—Unless on very extraordinary occasions I go round every day.

10331. Be good enough to read number twenty-four of the Privy Council regulations?—It states that the manager shall inspect every portion of the establishment each day before twelve o'clock, and shall personally inspect each patient.

10332. Is that order always complied with?—There are scarcely any exceptions to it, unless I am kept away by most particular business; I go round every day, and generally before that time.

10333. You appear to have a vast deal on your hands in addition to the charge of the asylum with over 400 patients: you have also to attend on a private asylum?—I attend the private asylum but three times a-week.

10334. What distance is it from this?—It is about three miles.

10335. Have you any other occupation?—None other.

10336. Do you never see patients out of the institution?—Scarcely ever.

10337. You do sometimes?—I do.

10338. Then there are occupations which do take you away from the asylum?—When I joined this asylum, I was allowed to practice in the treatment of insanity in public, and I attended Dr. Osborne's asylum. The practice I have out of doors is scarcely worth mentioning; I suppose I have not seen two cases outside the asylum in the year. It happened recently that I was called to see a case twelve miles from here; it was the only one that occurred for probably two years.

10339. Do you see any objection to mixing paying patients with those who are admitted gratis?—From our experience of paying patients I can say they are worse than any other.

and they require a great deal more attention than the ordinary pauper cases. That is the only objection I see.

10340. What do you attribute that to?—Well, I suppose, that their friends being better circumstanced, are enabled to keep them for a longer time before they send them in. Our experience of them shows us that they have a worse description of insanity than the ordinary pauper patients.

10341. Supposing paying patients were admitted to the asylum, which plan would you think more advisable, that of admitting them at a fixed rate, say the cost of maintenance, to meet the wants of those unable to pay in a private asylum, or according to a graduated scale of charges, leaving to the Board of Governors to decide on the amount to be paid?—Well, that is a question that would take some time to consider. I think the simplest way would be to charge them a fixed sum; but that might incommode a great many families that would not be able to pay that sum. A fixed rate, framed upon an average of the cost for some years, would be a just rate, and I would admit the others as paupers.

10342. I see in the form of admission that you require, in the physician or surgeon's certificate, a statement that the patient is likely to derive benefit from being placed in the Eglinton Lunatic Asylum; is it meant by that the case is probably a curable one?—I should suppose so.

10343. If that be the case, would it not exclude cases of idiocy, generally speaking, of epileptic mania, and others not supposed to be curable?—I object to that admission paper altogether; it is not one of my framing; in fact, I think there could not be a more objectionable paper of admission. It does not refer at all either to paying or pauper patients.

10344. There appear to be two forms of admission before us, which is the one acted upon at present?—Both are acted upon.

10345. One of the forms of admission appears to be for persons who are paupers, and the other for persons who are not paupers?—Yes. Notwithstanding the wording of the form, in reference to patients very likely to benefit from their admission here, it has not had the effect of excluding the class of cases you have referred to.

10346. I find in both forms this paragraph, "I hereby engage that the friends of the within-named patient shall withdraw him or her from the Eglinton Lunatic Asylum on his being notified to me that the patient is recovered or deemed harmless, or that the Governors do not consider it advisable to retain him or her in the asylum?"—That last clause was added by the Governors in consequence of the cases that I have alluded to.

10347. In the event of a patient being dismissed, under the provision with respect to harmless cases, and that that patient is idiotic or paralytic, what is to become of him when discharged from this asylum?—He must go to the workhouse, I suppose.

10348. Do you think the workhouse a fit place for the reception of such patients?—Certainly not. I am not advocating or defending that form of admission at all; it came down from the Castle here.

10349. Have there been any escapes from this asylum?—Very frequently; I had to report three escapes to the last Board.

10350. How are the escapes effected?—Two got away from men who had them in charge out at work, and a woman got away at night. We got her back, and it appeared that through some negligence or mistake the door of her cell was not closed in going the rounds at night.

10351. But how did she get out of the house?—She got out of one of the windows; they can get out through the windows here; you have no idea what small windows they can get through.

10352. With respect to the patients who escaped from the keepers on the grounds, was there no obstacle to their getting away, such as a boundary wall?—There was a boundary wall, and one of them got over it; the other got out on the gate which was open, as it is in possession of the Corporation, who are building a water reservoir on the grounds.

Samuel Hobart, Esq., M.D., sworn and examined.

10353. How long have you been connected with the Cork District Asylum?—I have been connected with the Lunatic Asylum since the year 1816.

10354. In what capacity during that period?—I was for many years, at the beginning of my connexion with the asylum, the apothecary, and subsequently I was appointed surgeon as well as apothecary. I have the document here informing me of my appointment as surgeon.

10355. At what period was the Cork Asylum made a district asylum?—In September, 1845.

10356. When the Cork Asylum became a district asylum, did you receive any notification as to what your duties would be?—No.

10357. Your appointment continued as before?—Yes.

10358. Practically, are the duties you now perform the same as you have always performed as surgeon?—The same. Every surgical case that occurs in the house comes under my care.

10359. Is your attendance regular or is it occasional, as you may be required?—I may say occasional. I visit, perhaps, two or three times a week, on an average; and if I had cases on hands that would require daily visits, I would make them, or I would even make two visits in the day. On one occasion I was here four times in the day.

10360. Would you attend, supposing you had no case on hands, or received no notification of your presence being required?—I very often came without expecting any case.

10361. You are also an M.D.?—I am.

- Cons. 10362. Do you take any part in the medical treatment of the cases?—Dr. Power and I meet and consult upon some cases the same as we would in private practice.
- Cork District Asylum. 10363. With regard to the treatment of insanity, you take no part whatever in that?—
S. Robert, Esq., M.D. Unless in the surgical treatment.
10364. When you visit the asylum on those occasions, is there any record of your visit—do you make an entry in any book?—I do; there is a Daily Statement Book.
10365. I think you stated that you received no particular instruction as to the duties you should perform when this became a district asylum; your attention, therefore, has not been called to the Privy Council regulations?—No, I got no instruction; I continued to do my duty the same as usual.
- The infirmary. 10366. It has been stated that there is an infirmary in the grounds adjoining the institution, are the surgical cases invariably treated in the infirmary?—Not invariably; some trifling cases would not be removed to the infirmary, or a dangerous lunatic would not be removed there.
10367. Are there proper means of providing for the accommodation and treatment of these lunatics in the cells, such, for instance, as means of warming the cells?—There are not.
10368. Is the infirmary provided with the requisites for the proper care and treatment of the patients who may be there?—It is.
10369. In what manner do you bring under the notice of the Board any thing you may consider requires amendment or alteration?—I never brought any thing before the Board; I did not see any necessity. If there was any difficult case upon which I required consultation I would consult Dr. Power.
- The subject of the medical staff. 10370. Do you regard your position more as that of consulting surgeon to the institution than otherwise?—I do not; I am the ordinary surgeon to the asylum.
10371. You, probably, heard Dr. Power's evidence with reference to the staff of medical officers which should be attached to an institution like this?—I did.
10372. What is your own opinion as to the advantage of having a visiting physician besides a resident physician?—I agree very much with Dr. Power. I think it would be bad to have a visiting physician coming whenever he liked. I think he should be a consulting physician, and there would then be no danger of their clashing.
10373. You would have him appointed consulting physician, and the responsibility of requiring his attendance should be left with the resident physician and paid accordingly.
10374. You do not think the services of such an officer could be dispensed with?—I do not think they could, with propriety, in cases requiring consultation.
- Lunacy in the district; adequacy of the Asylum. 10375. From your knowledge of the district, is it your opinion there is any large amount of insanity among the poor which is not provided for in this institution?—I do not think there is; the cases are all provided for; there are sometimes cases in the workhouses, but they are transmitted either here or to the goal.
10376. Do you consider the Cork Asylum meets the wants of the district at present?—Decidedly.
10377. It appears, however, there are in the workhouses at present over 100 lunatics, including idiots?—I am not aware.
- Insanity in workhouses; general feeling as to the Asylum. 10378. Do you consider a workhouse a proper place for the detention of such cases?—I do not.
10379. Do you think there is any indisposition on the part of the poorer classes in the country to send their lunatic friends to institutions of this nature?—I do not think they have any objection to it; they may, at first, but when they find how patients get on, they are very glad to have their lunatic relatives or friends admitted.
10380. I presume the opinion you have expressed as to workhouses not being proper places for the detention of lunatics applies more forcibly to goals?—I do not know much about goals.
- Paying patients. 10381. Are not the attendants upon lunatics in workhouses usually paupers themselves?—I think so.
10382. What is your opinion as to the advisability of paying patients being received?—I think they ought to be received, for there are many incapable of paying the high price in a private asylum, and they ought to be received somewhere.
10383. Do you think it would be advisable to have a variable or fixed sum to be paid by them?—I think it would be better to have a fixed charge, and let them either pay that or come in as paupers.
- Medical prescriptions. 10384. In what book do you write your prescriptions?—There is a book for the purpose, but I seldom write prescriptions at all, for the medical treatment of surgical cases is very little, and whenever I order any thing I make it up myself. I do not like to put the apothecary to the trouble of coming up here for the purpose. He may come without being sent for; but, lest the medicine might not be given, I make it up myself.
10385. Do you make up all your own prescriptions?—Not all. I sometimes write, and when I do not write I make up the medicine myself and give it to the nurse-tender.
10386. There appears to be no regular system of medical treatment at all?—Where there are sore legs and things of that kind what regular plan of treatment can you have.
10387. I have referred already to the prescription book, in which there was no entry from 1847 to 1853?—I think that is Dr. Power's book, not mine.
10388. Have you a prescription book?—Yes, there is one at the hospital. (Same is produced).
10389. It appears there has been no prescription written by you from the 29th April, 1853, to the 26th June, 1855?—All the medicines were made up by myself.

10390. And no prescription has been written during that time by you?—Probably not.

10391. In Dr. Power's prescription book there is no prescription entered from the 23rd September, 1853, to the 1st October, 1856?—I do not know any thing of Dr. Power's book.

10392. The first case in the prescription book for the year 1856 is that of a girl named Eliza Crodon, suffering under malignant tumour of the neck; and she appears to have died on the 2nd November, 1856, from the tumour having extended to the glands of the neck; there is no record either in the prescription book or the sick diet book of the treatment of that girl, a purely surgical case, for that period or for some time before?—Well, I have not any record of it; it was under Dr. Power's care all that time; I may have seen it in the hospital.

10393. Dr. Power's statement on the 1st October is, that the girl, having an enormous tumour of malignant appearance on the left side of the neck, was placed under the care of the surgeon?—It was enormously swollen, I remember very well, and also her head. We could do nothing for her.

10394. Then, to come to the point, there appears to be no entry in the prescription book at all from the 23rd September, 1853, to the 1st October, 1856, when the first notice appears of this case, which died on the 2nd November following, and there is no record in either the prescription book or the sick diet book to show the treatment or the progress of that case?—There is not any record of it, nor was there any medical treatment; she would neither take any thing for us, nor would medical treatment act.

10395. Did she require no sick diet during that period?—I suppose Dr. Power attended to that.

10396. Dr. Power's book states that she was placed under your care?—She was shown to me, and I saw her, that is all I can state about the case.

10397. During the year 1853 there appear to have been several surgical cases?—There were none of them very interesting, if they were I would have entered them in my own private case book; they were principally bruises, cuts, wounds, and things of that kind.

The Lord Bishop of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, sworn and examined.

10398. Is there any observation which your Lordship would wish to address to the Commissioners relative to the subject of this inquiry?—There are some matters connected with it which fall under my own observation, and to which I would wish to call attention. I cannot say that I, myself, have had experience of the conduct or management of this asylum, or, indeed, of any institution of the kind, but I have had some opportunities, in private, of seeing the treatment of lunacy, and I desire to impress upon the Commissioners the importance of continuing a regular religious attendance in institutions of this kind, because, I am persuaded it is of great use, not only in a religious point of view, but also with respect to the proper medical curative treatment of persons labouring under that malady. I would wish to mention that the Archbishop of Cork has been a very constant attendant at the Board here, and his attention has been particularly called to matters of this kind in connexion with this institution, and he, I am sure, will be able to confirm what I have said, on general principles, and from my limited information, derived merely from seeing private cases.

10399. I suppose your Lordship does not consider that a person labouring under, it may be, a slight bereavement of mind, should be deprived of the opportunity of attending religious duties, such as he would have had if at large?—I should say, certainly not. There is hardly any case of insanity in which there is a total destruction of the proper rational powers; and I should imagine there is hardly any case in which the mind is not accessible to religion, at particular times, when it is discreetly and judiciously applied.

10400. Has your Lordship reason to be satisfied with the arrangements made at this asylum for the celebration of divine worship and the performance of the duties of the chaplain?—I can only speak from hearsay, and from what I know in that way I am quite satisfied.

10401. Is there any thing which appears to your Lordship to require amendment as regards the mode in which Governors of these institutions are appointed?—I have not been able to attend at the Board meetings here. I am only a short time in Cork, and I have been very much engaged with other matters since I came down, so that I have not been able to give any attention to the management of the institution.

10402. I believe you have been, for several years, a Governor of this institution?—I have.

10403. I believe you have been in the habit of attending, with a good deal of regularity, the meetings of the Board?—Yes.

10404. Is the attendance of Governors at the Board numerous?—Not very numerous, but it is sufficiently so for the discharge of the duties of the Board,—except on one or two occasions, when the weather was exceedingly inclement. Generally speaking, there is a sufficient number present to perform the duty of looking after the institution.

Attendance of Governors; appointment of.

10405. Do you find that there is a fair attendance of Governors from the distant parts of the county?—I think there is, when matters occur at the Board affecting the particular districts, which, I may say, they represent; and on general matters there is a very fair attendance.

10406. What is your opinion as to the manner in which Governors are appointed, namely, by the Executive Government?—There is a great difference of opinion on the point amongst the members of the Board; but, as far as my judgment goes, I think the trust is better discharged by the Executive than it would be by any other body.

10407. What is your opinion as to the propriety of the Inspectors being members of the Board?—I think it is desirable that they should be members of the Board. Their knowledge of the institutions is necessary to guide the Governors in matters that may come before them. It is desirable to know what is done in other places, and their position gives them an opportunity of knowing that; besides, they have studied the subject in England.

10408. You are aware that Poor Law Inspectors attend meetings of the Boards of Guardians, but have no right to vote. Do you see any objection to the same rule being applied here?—Personally, I see no objection to their voting, but some Governors have objected.

Inspection of the house by Governors.

10409. We have heard that there is no visiting committee appointed by the Board of Governors to inspect the house; what means do the Governors generally take to ascertain that the asylum is in good order, and that the inmates are properly looked after?—Occasionally, at least on board days, some members of the Board walk over the institution, or various parts of it; and if they think any thing requires attention, they mention it to the following Board. Since the house was taken up, there have been several sub-committees appointed with regard to the defects in the construction, and that has made the members familiar with all parts of the house. Visits have been paid by individual members to see whether the wards were in proper order. Sir Thomas Tolin, Mr. Beamish, and myself, have attended, exercising our right as Governors.

The building; its arrangement.

10410. I believe this building, in its construction, differs from any other asylum in Ireland, there being five separate blocks of building?—Yes.

10411. Is it your opinion that the building is conveniently arranged?—I should say it would be more convenient if it was built in a quadrangular form rather than being scattered about. The nature of the ground may have been the reason for the present arrangement, which is not convenient.

Paying patients.

10412. Are you favourable to the admission of paying patients?—Yes; under certain restrictions. There are many cases in which parties are above the state of pauperism, and yet their parents or friends are unable to provide the necessary medical aid that might promote their recovery, and those cases, I think, ought to be received, always having regard to the limits of the institution. If that class of patients exceeded a certain number, there might be a danger of the asylum being diverted from its original purpose, that of receiving pauper lunatics, who might be excluded if paying patients were very numerous. The matter has more than once come before the Governors, and the general impression seemed to be that paying patients ought not exceed twenty per cent. of the entire number for whom there is accommodation.

10413. Do you consider it would be proper to provide, at the public charge, for patients who are not absolutely destitute poor?—I do.

10414. And that it would be also desirable to admit a certain number of cases of patients whose friends would be enabled to pay for their maintenance here, but would not be able to pay for them in a private institution kept for profit?—Precisely. When I speak of maintenance cost here I include establishment charges, a portion of the interest payable to Government upon the cost of building, as well as the actual cost of maintenance.

10415. You mean a certain charge for the use of the building?—Yes.

10416. Do you think the asylum is now adequate to the wants of the district?—I think it is at present; at the same time the number of patients is increasing very much, so the house will show.

Appointment and dismissal of superior officers.

10417. What is your opinion as to the manner in which the superior officers of the institution should be appointed, whether by the Executive Government or the local Board?—I think the local Board ought to have the appointment of the majority of the officers, indeed I would say all, the Government having a vote with regard to the qualifications a man should possess for the office.

10418. You mean that some central authority should have the power of preventing unqualified persons from being appointed?—Certainly.

10419. With regard to dismissal, to whom would you give the power?—I think the removal of officers should rest with the same parties who made the appointment, always subject, in both proceedings, to a central authority.

The disciplinary question.

10420. You have heard the evidence given with reference to the appointment of chaplains to this institution. Do you concur in the views of the Lord Bishop in that respect?—Most fully. I have known, in my private experience, more than one case of insanity in which I found the exercise of religious instruction, judiciously applied, to be of very great value, and, indeed, in one instance, it led to the recovery of a patient, in conjunction, of course, with good medical treatment. With respect to this institution, the rules in reference to religious instruction have been so judiciously carried out, by both the chaplains, that the Governors have had no reason to find fault, and I think the arrangement has been most beneficial. Before the appointment of chaplains paid by the Governors, and in the time of the old institution, during the episcopacy of his Lordship's predecessor, a curate was in the habit of attending the asylum of his own free will, and the medical gentlemen reported so favourably that the curate got permission to attend the institution, which was the precursor of this asylum. Then paid chaplains were appointed, since when the evidence of various persons on the subject has been favourable with regard to the effect of the religious ministrations. I have formed a more decided opinion upon that point than perhaps any one else connected with the institution.

10421. When you speak of the regulations carried out by the chaplains, you mean the Privy Council regulations of 1853?—I do.

10422. Do you consider they afford sufficient security that the duties of chaplains will not be allowed to interfere in any way with the proper medical treatment of the patients?

—Yes; I presume it was expected the diocessans would appoint judicious persons, and that has been the case here.

Horatio Townsend, Esq., J.P., &c., sworn and examined.

10423. How long have you been a Governor of this institution?—About thirty years; I hardly remember the exact number of years.

10424. Do you mean that you were a Governor of the asylum maintained by the county of Cork previous to its being declared a district asylum?—Yes, long previous to its being declared a district asylum.

10425. Has insanity, in your opinion, increased in the district?—I am told it has, but I have no personal knowledge that it has increased. In my own district, about Blarney, I think it is the same. We had, lately, two cases in our neighbourhood, which is rather unusual.

10426. With regard to the admission of paying patients, do you concur in the evidence given in favour of that?—Yes; I was one of those principally concerned in bringing it before the Board. I did so, because I saw that class of persons excluded from medical relief for insanity, because there were not the means to send them to private institutions, and because they were met here by the question, were they paupers. If they were not paupers they could not be admitted. The matter was discussed here and urged upon the Board, and we admitted some who were not able to pay in private and costly institutions, but whose families contributed towards their maintenance here. The charges made in those cases were very much in proportion to the means of the parties. It was very difficult to draw a line with respect to the charge, for a member of a family might be excluded if one pound more than they could afford to pay was required.

10427. Are you, then, in favour of having a fixed charge, or a varying charge?—I am decidedly in favour of it being a charge varying according to the means of the parties, for the means of families vary very much. I think it would be beneficial to the public if there was a power of so regulating the charge; for if there was a fixed sum required, some families might not be able to pay so much, and their lunatic relatives would therefore be excluded.

10428. What is your opinion of the control at present exercised by the Commissioners, in Dublin, with reference to the erection of new asylums and their enlargement. Do you think more power should be given, in those matters, to the local Board, or that things should remain as at present?—We had a great deal of difficulty with the Commissioners in getting the defects of the asylum remedied, and I doubt if they are properly remedied yet. Lately, they have become more open to reason, and have remedied a great many of the glaring defects we complained of at first. The patients were kept for a long time at the north side, and never had a cheerful view.

10429. That has been only partly remedied, I believe?—Only partly remedied. I think that in such matters we require a controlling power, or a body for reference.

10430. What is your opinion as to the manner in which the Governors are now appointed?—I do not see any other way in which they could be so well appointed. They are excellent Governors here, and I believe they have attended remarkably well, so far as I can judge. I never saw any want of Governors here. They complain in Cork that they have not a sufficient number of Governors from the city on the Board, but I think that is a very unfounded complaint.

10431. Have you ever heard it considered whether a representative character should be given to the Board by the Grand Jury nominating a certain number of Governors?—They might do so, but I think the Government should approve of all.

10432. Does the Grand Jury of the county of Cork appoint a committee to visit the asylum?—They do always, but it is more a matter of form than any thing else. They come here and go over the place, and make a report, but very few of them are judges of the matter.

10433. What is your opinion of the Inspectors being members of the Boards of Governors, and voting at them?—I think they are very useful as members of the Boards; we have got a great deal of information and guidance from them at various times because of their experience; but not being ratepayers here, I do not see why they should vote.

10434. Has the question of transferring the charge for the maintenance of this asylum from the county-rate to the poor-rate ever been under consideration?—No, except in conversation. In my opinion it is but fair to have the cost of this asylum charged upon the poor-rate, for the asylums come into the same category as poor-houses; and I do not see why asylums for the reception of insane paupers should not be maintained in the same way.

10435. By whom, in your opinion, should the principal officers of the establishment, such as the manager and physician, be appointed?—They are appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, but we recommend. Dr. Power was appointed by us, and approved by the Lord Lieutenant: that I think is a very good system.

10436. I understand if the course, which is pursued here, of accepting the nomination of the Board, were pursued elsewhere, you would see no objection to it?—None at all.

10437. From your experience of this asylum, for so many years, do you think it of importance that the resident manager should be a medical man?—I think so. I think a medical man is much more likely to be efficient in the position than a mere civilian or non-professional person.

10438. You are aware of the control exercised by the Privy Council over the expenditure?—Yes.

10439. Do you find that any inconvenience or delay arises from that proceeding?—I never heard that there did; I believe it works very well.

10440. You are aware of the operation of what is called the Dangerous Lunatic Act, by which dangerous lunatics are committed to gaol?—I am, and a very roundabout, troublesome business it is. I am obliged to send a great many myself to gaol, and I do not approve of it at all, for they are a great inconvenience there.

10441. What alteration in the law would you suggest?—I think the magistrates at Petty Sessions ought to have the power of sending them direct to the asylum. They have now to adopt a roundabout process, and bad consequences sometimes arise.

10442. Do you think, generally speaking, the medical men who examine cases before they are sent to the house have had sufficient opportunities for examination and for the forming of a correct opinion?—I think they are very competent to judge whether the parties are sane or insane, and so can the magistrates. In fact, I think the matter is quite obvious in dangerous cases, and they might as well be sent to the asylum at once as to the gaol. We are exceedingly inconvenienced by them in the gaol.

10443. I presume there is great difficulty in treating lunatics properly in the gaol?—The greatest difficulty.

10444. Have you ever had to discharge lunatics from the gaol who were committed by you before they were admitted into this asylum?—Never; we always refer it to Dublin; they are generally very egregious cases that are committed there. They have been running wild over the country sometimes, and we must send them to gaol, and they pass by this asylum on their way there.

Chaplain.

10445. Do you concur in the evidence given as to the necessity of having chaplains in the asylum?—I have no doubt at all of the necessity of having them.

10446. Is there any matter connected with the operation of the law, with regard to the subject of our inquiry, generally, that you would wish to bring under our notice?—No; indeed I do not know any thing particular. I think the establishment is in a very sound state; it is in a great deal better state than I ever remember it to have been in.

Rev. C. E. Clifford.

The Rev. Caleb Henry Clifford, sworn and examined.

10447. How long have you been chaplain to this institution?—I think since the year 1842.

10448. During that time have you been in the habit of performing divine service on Sundays?—Yes.

The Protestant
Inmates.

10449. Are you enabled to say what proportion of the members of your church attend in this institution on those occasions?—I think something about one-half of the entire. I kept an account of the attendance on Sundays, and I think I am right in saying the average is about one-half of those in the asylum of my persuasion.

10450. Do you find that they are generally orderly and quiet on those occasions?—Particularly so on Sundays.

10451. Do you find that the attendance on divine worship has that soothing influence on them that might be expected?—I think it has. I think their being precluded from that opportunity would cause a blank in their existence that would be greatly felt by them in this institution.

10452. Are you in the habit of preaching to them?—Yes, short sermons.

10453. Are you in the habit of visiting the inmates separately?—Yes.

Advantage of
tions.

10454. You are therefore enabled to judge how far they are in a state of mind to profit by your ministrations?—Some like to speak with me on religious subjects, and appear to derive comfort from doing so. Towards the close of life, and in their last moments, it is extraordinary what an effect religious ministrations have produced on some of them. There seemed to be a rallying of the reasoning powers as death approached, which enabled them to appreciate the services of a clergyman. I have remarked that particularly. There is another thing that renders the communication of chaplains with this institution desirable; it affords very great consolation to the relatives of the inmates to know that they are visited by chaplains of their respective persuasions.

10455. Do you think the public at large would object to persons of bereaved minds, in this institution, being deprived of religious ministrations?—Yes; the relatives of inmates call frequently at my house respecting them. I seem to be a kind of medium of communication between relatives and a patient, as to his condition; they come to me to inquire.

10456. In the case of a patient becoming convalescent, would he not probably be as capable of appreciating your religious communication as many persons out of doors?—Certainly. I think the religious feeling seems to be the last extinguished in insane persons. That feeling seems to survive all others.

Classification.

10457. Have you had every freedom and facility afforded you in the discharge of your duties here?—Yes, every facility at all times. I may observe, if the non-violent class were subdivided into two divisions, so as to separate the less insane from the more insane, that it would be desirable. There are three classes—idiots, violent lunatics, and non-violent, and among the non-violent are the tranquil. There are some of them sane, comparatively speaking, while others are very insane, and I think the comparatively sane suffer by intercourse with the very deranged patients. There is a member of my congregation here who attempted suicide two or three times. The man is not mad on any point except one, and I think the intercourse with the other patients is injurious to him.

10458. You are speaking now with regard to the classification of the house generally?—Yes; I think a fourth class such as I have suggested would be desirable. I do not know whether the accommodation of the asylum would admit of it.

The Rev. Philip Barton, sworn and examined.

10459. How long have you been Roman Catholic chaplain to this institution?—I am going on ten years connected with the institution; officially I am chaplain going on two years; but through the previous chaplain I have been connected with the asylum since about the year 1838.

10460. Am I to understand that during a period of nearly ten years you have been discharging some clerical duties in the establishment?—Yes; previous to my own appointment I was expected to discharge the duties of chaplain in the absence of the other chaplain, or of those who used to attend for him. I am going on two years the regular chaplain of the asylum.

10461. From your experience during that time, what is your opinion as to the advantage of the ministrations of clergymen to the inmates of the institution?—I think that, according to Catholic doctrine and Catholic principles, the absence of such religious ministrations would be looked upon as a very great grievance by the people. I have no doubt whatever in regard to the necessity for such ministrations, and I believe that, in all cases of insanity, something may be done for them at the approach of death. It is, I conceive, a very important part of my duty also to watch the glimmerings of reason. Perhaps, half the cases in the asylum are relapsing cases: they recover, and are often on the point of being discharged when they relapse. I watch the opportunities afforded by their apparent recovery and minister to them, and I feel that to be a very important duty. The absence of chaplains would be attended, in my opinion, with bad consequences. I conceive it is their duty to benefit the patients indirectly—that is, through the servants. If the servants were not influenced by religious ministrations it would be difficult to account for their treatment of the patients, for it is the nature of the circumstances in which they are placed here to render them callous towards the patients, were it not that they are constantly reminded of their duties to them.

10462. From the daily statement book it appears that upwards of 150 patients attended mass last Sunday; is that about the usual number?—I never ascertained the exact number, but I consider the average number must be that at least, from the crowded appearance of the chapel.

10463. Are you in the habit of preaching to them?—Almost always.

10464. I presume you regulate your discourse with reference to the audience you address?—Always. I was extremely particular for a long time, but I find it is not necessary to be quite so particular as I at first deemed requisite. They do not attend to everything, and I accordingly may say a great deal for the benefit of the servants without interfering with the patients.

10465. You limit your discourse to what your experience has taught you may be safely stated in the presence of the patients?—I do. I am always very much on my guard in addressing them.

10466. What proportion of the number who attend do you think are really capable of appreciating what might be said on such occasions?—I attach importance to the discourse, not on account of the patients, but more for the sake of the servants of the institution. To come at the minds of the patients requires, I think, personal communication with them.

10467. What proportion of those who attend mass are really aware that they are so attending?—I do not think I ever saw a more attentive congregation. They all seem to have a deep religious feeling. I have heard that on their way to the chapel they are noisy, but when they enter they become quiet and collected immediately.

10468. Are you in the habit of visiting the members of your church individually in the asylum?—Yes.

10469. Do you consider that much advantage arises to them from this private intercourse?—Very great advantage.

10470. Are you afforded every facility in the discharge of your duties?—Great facility; from all the officers, from the highest to the lowest, I have never experienced any thing but the greatest courtesy.

10471. Supposing that there were no regular chaplains to these institutions, and that it were left to the authorities of the establishment to send for a clergyman, when they thought his services necessary, would you be satisfied that the discretion of sending for the clergyman might be safely left to the manager if he were of a different religious persuasion from yourself?—I would not, nor would I be satisfied even if he were of the same persuasion as myself. As I have already said, I think the regular attendance of a chaplain is necessary, as it is an important part of his duty, in my opinion, to watch the glimmerings of reason. Patients become rational for a few months, and relapse two or three times in the year; and if the chaplain is not present and vigilant, so as to take advantage of those brief intervals, the patients sustain an injury.

10472. I want to know do you consider that, as regards dying patients, the discretion I speak of might be left to the manager of the institution?—I do not think it could be safely left to the manager's discretion to determine when the chaplain should be sent for. Unless the chaplain was a person whom the attendants were somewhat afraid of they would not take the trouble to send for him. If a patient died without the clergyman being sent for they would make very little noise about it. This is particularly important with regard to lunatics, for the symptoms of approaching death are very doubtful in such cases, and many of them who seem not at all near death die suddenly. I would not depend upon the official of an institution to discharge that duty.

Various charges by witness, who had been an inmate, of ill-treatment, and against Manager, attendants, &c.

Mr. Nicholas Barry, sworn and examined.

10473. Have you any statement you would wish to make to the Commissioners?—Yes, I was admitted into this asylum on the 9th December last, by order of the Lord Lieutenant, in default of bail. I am an excise officer. My health was in a bad state when I came in here, and at the end of four weeks I was admitted to the hospital. In the hospital I received good treatment, but in the asylum I experienced the worst treatment. Two days after my coming here I was asked my religion by either the steward or the man who has charge of No. 2 ward, Whelan, I think, is his name. I wrote down my name, Nicholas Barry, Gorey, county Wexford, a Protestant. During the time I was here I was not allowed to go to any place of worship, and I was refused any book till I got it from England. When I considered at one time that I was dying, I asked to be allowed to have my own private physician to attend me, and I was refused; I asked to have a clergyman to visit me, and that also was refused. Furthermore, I was struck and ill-used in the asylum. I was struck by a man named Dan Sullivan, and by another man named Carol, and by a third man named Clifton or Clifford.

10474. Do you mean that you were merely pushed about?—No; I was struck. I was caught by the collar, and I was kicked while I was down, on account of my having made a complaint to the house steward that drunkenness was going on in the asylum. For the month I was in the hospital there was nothing but a system of gambling going on, and that to a very great extent, so much so that the keepers were put on the watch while they were at it. They lay on stools or forms, and if any one stirred from the position he sat in he was struck. I asked for religious books to read, and the doctor refused them. I asked the Inspector to allow me to go to a place of worship, and he inquired into the matter, and directed the doctor to let me go to church the following Sunday, which was Christmas day, but I was refused. There is a room called a wash room, in which there are four basins, and I asked to be allowed to wash there instead of the temporary wash room, and that was also refused. There is a bath room, but there was not more than half a foot of water to wash thirty persons every morning. We were allowed but one towel. There was a hutchin in the asylum who was paying for himself; he was not allowed to wash in this place, but was pushed out of the room; he was insisting upon washing, when he fell head over heels into the bath. Three days after that he was removed, and the next I heard of him was that he was dead; and I have no doubt that the fall he got into the bath accelerated whatever disease he had, and brought on his death. His death was concealed, for I inquired about it. I was labouring under a violent attack of dysentery and was ordered medicine, which I did not get for three days. I got so ill that the doctor applied a blister to me for over three days, which saved my life. I asked to be placed under the care of Dr. Hobart, in consequence of his knowing me, which was refused. I have already stated that while I was in bed I asked for a prayer-book of any religion to read, and it was not given me, and I remained without any prayer-book until my trunk came over to me from England. We have been eight days in the house without a bit of soap, and the only thing we got to dry ourselves was the quilt on my bed and that of a gentleman's next me, named Campion. I was an excise officer, and being possessed of a good deal of property, I had sufficient means to support me without my pension, or finding it necessary to return to my office. I asked permission to communicate with my private solicitor in Mullow, and I wrote to him, but the letter was detained here for seven days. I wrote to Counsellor Harding, who is married to my niece, and the letter was suppressed for eight days. So far as religion goes, the time I was sick I sent for the Rev. Mr. Clifford, who came whenever I did send for him; but the doctor interfered, and said he would not allow any clergyman of any persuasion to attend me, as there was no mention made of my religion in the warrant under which I came to the asylum. I asked Dr. Power to show me the warrant, and he refused, but my solicitor saw it. Dr. Power told me, and I have no reason to doubt what he said, that I was sent here for not getting bail for £10. I have been twenty-one years a public servant. When I was here three weeks, I asked Dr. Power to allow me to be removed to a private asylum, as I had money enough in the hands of Counsellor Harding to pay my demands, but he would not allow me. The second day after I came into this asylum there were two keepers drunk, and they beat each other. The head man of No. 2 ward is allowed out of this house once a week. He leaves after dinner, and the place is put in charge of some one else; and from that time, after one o'clock, up to seven o'clock, when he returns, there is nothing but riot and disorder. Dr. Power removed one man for this. I have seen Dan Sullivan drunk, and since the middle of January he beat me four times, on account of my having told the house steward of the gambling and the drunkenness. In consequence of what I told him he watched them, and for that I was thrown down and beaten. I wrote an account of the matter, and the doctor says he got the account, but he managed to forget it. I was not allowed to walk in the grounds of the asylum, or to go out for the fresh air, even when my health was improving. I have heard part of Dr. Power's evidence, when he was asked was any recreation allowed the inmates on wet days when they could not go out of doors, and he said that books and papers were given them; but I have seen none, with the exception of one day that there was a meeting of the Governors, and then there were a few books and papers brought about an hour before the meeting, and after the Governors went away, they were removed again. That was the only occasion on which I ever saw books in the asylum. When Mr. Bernard came here to call me, I was not able to leave for two days after, on account of my health. I wanted to lodge informations with Mr. Bernard, for I was afraid I would have died the same night, but Mr. Bernard desired me to leave my informations over till I went out. I have to state that I was called names here on account of my religion; in fact, any one who won't go wherever Dr. Power tells him, or those under him, is badly treated. There was no paper allowed us to write on. I told Dr. Power about the want of water, and when he went to the house with me there were three of the cooks out of four that had not been turned for a length of time. I have stated that the keepers were engaged in gambling, and particularly Dan Sullivan, who has been a militia man, and a man named Clifford or Clifford.

10475. What sort of gambling was it—was it card playing?—They played cards, and cribbage, and chess. I informed the house steward of the gambling, and I gave a report of it to the doctor. In the hospital, I must state, that I was as well treated as if I were in my own house. I went to the hospital, from the effect of the injuries I received in No. 2 ward. The doctor was fully aware of these things, and could have prevented them, if he used any precaution, but there have been days that I did not see the doctor at all. I saw the Rev. Mr. Clifford, about three times a week, and he left no stone unturned, in order to get me books of some kind. I made a complaint to the Governors of the asylum, on the last day, and Sir Thomas Telfin said, to put it in writing, and attend on the next day of meeting. I sent an account of it to you, to Dublin, not being aware that you would be here. It is in the power of Dr. Power to put an end to these things, if he went round the asylum twice a day, and used the authority that rests with him. The instant he goes out of the asylum, he is seen from every part of the house, and he is not five minutes returned till it is known by us all. He could have prevented me from being ill-used if he made any exertion. By the suppression of my correspondence, I lost £17 a-year in one case. Dr. Power allowed an ejectment to be served on me in this house. My defence was neglected, in consequence of Dr. Power's neglect, in not sending my letter, and I was deprived of that £17 a-year freehold property. I am not aware of any thing else that I could state, but that I am anxious to have this affair investigated.

10476. You have heard the statement made by the last witness?—I have.

10477. Is there any thing you would wish to say, with reference to the charges he has made?—We received Mr. Barry into this asylum, under the Lord Lieutenant's warrant, under very peculiar circumstances. I never received such a warrant before with any patient. In that warrant I was told to keep him until such time as he might procure legal bail. I brought Mr. Barry's case before the next Board, stated the peculiarities of it, and that no religion was mentioned in the warrant under which he was admitted. The first Sunday that Mr. Barry was here, he required, as I am informed by the attendant of the division he was in, to go to Catholic service in the morning, but he was not allowed to do so, as his religion was not stated. He wanted then to go to the Protestant service, at 11 o'clock afterwards, and he was refused that also. When the matter was reported to me, I said that as I knew Mr. Barry myself, and his family, his father-in-law, and his late wife, to have been all their lives Roman Catholics, I would not, as long as he was under my care, and as I had got no statement of his religion, when I received him into the asylum, allow him to attend either place of worship. In corroboration of what I state, I refer to the Rev. Mr. Clifford, to say whether I did or not, make use of this observation, when I met him one day. I am very glad to have an opportunity of making this statement, because it is not my practice to interfere with the religion of any one. There have been several cases in the asylum, and there are two at present, who wanted to become Catholics; they had been entered as Protestants, and said I to them, if you want to become Catholics, your friends must take you out, and you must come in as Catholics, but you must go out as you came in, so far as this institution is concerned. On one occasion, there was a woman entered as a Protestant, who was taken without my knowledge, to Catholic service, by one of the nurses in her division, from her having been a Catholic originally. I at once reported that circumstance to the Board, and you will see the record of it, by referring to the minutes. Her husband came in a few months afterwards, and requested to have his wife become a Catholic, in the establishment. I said no—if you want to have her a Catholic, take her out, and send her in with Catholic papers, and then she may go to mass, but not until then. I never in any manner whatsoever, interfered in the religion of patients. With respect to the rest of Mr. Barry's statements, the only one of them I need refer to, is that about beating. All the others are more fanciful than any thing else. In the first report I made to the Board, after he came into the asylum, there was the following passage:—

"A patient named Nicholas Barry, was sent here from the goal, on the 8th ultimo, under peculiar circumstances, having committed an assault on his nephew, a J.P. He was committed to prison, for want of security to keep the peace, and was transferred here, I being authorised to discharge him, on getting legal bail. His religion is not stated. He calls himself a Protestant, but I know him, and all his family to be Catholics, so I do not allow him to attend either place of worship. He requires quantities of paper and stamps, for letter writing—and I justified in allowing them to him."

That is my statement, and it is signed by the Chairman of the following Board. Mr. Barry made a complaint to me, when he was in the infirmary, of having been beaten while in number two division, and he said he had given me a statement of the fact. I told him on that occasion, that if he had given me any statement of the kind, I never read it. He was in the habit of writing handfuls of notes and writings on the water-closet paper; I threw them all into the fire, but the moment he made the statement, in the infirmary, I at once applied to the persons to whom he referred me, for proof of his allegations, and this is my report on the subject, which was also submitted to the following Board:—

"A complaint was made to me, some days since, by one of the inmates, of his having been severely beaten by two of the attendants, about three weeks since. I inquired most minutely into the matter, and I find these representations to be grossly exaggerated and unfounded, and came to the conclusion that he had not been used more harshly than his own conduct and the order of the establishment required."

That is signed, "Thomas Tobin, Chairman." Now, with regard to the various other statements he makes. According to what he has said to day, he was beaten four times, but his first complaint was that he was beaten only once. He states Sullivan was drunk, but Sullivan was never drunk since he came into the establishment. He is perfectly right, with respect to another man being drunk.

10478. Has that other man been dismissed?—Yes, on the last Board day.

10479. You have stated that Mr. Barry was transmitted here under circumstances of a peculiar nature?—Yes.

10480. What is the peculiarity in the warrant transmitting him here?—In my being obliged to send him out the moment he procures legal bail, although I might be of opinion he was in an insane state.

10481. Is there anything peculiar in the warrant except that such a warrant never came to you before?—No. I wrote to Colonel Larcom, and he stated that I should discharge him, on legal bail being given, without any reference to his state of mind at the time.

10482. Are the medical certificates as to the insanity of prisoners in gaol usually forwarded to you with the warrants?—No; it is only stated that the case is certified to be insane by such and such a physician, and that the party was committed by such and such a magistrate.

10483. I want to know when a lunatic is transmitted here from gaol, who may have become lunatic in the gaol, whether the medical officer of the gaol gives a certificate, and whether that certificate is sent to you?—We have had very few of such cases.

10484. You have heard the evidence given by Mr. Barry, and you have heard the statements he has made, that he complained to you of various things in the asylum?—Yes, I have heard the statements he has made here.

10485. Did you investigate those matters he brought under your notice?—I did. He never made those statements until some weeks after, when he was put into the infirmary, and there is a report of my investigation there.

10486. Did he make a statement to you with reference to the men gambling in the wards?—He did.

10487. Did you take any steps to ascertain whether that took place?—Yes, and the steward said there was no such thing.

10488. Do you mean that the steward, as the result of an investigation by him, reported to you that he had reason to believe such was not the case?—Yes. I could never discover any gambling.

10489. Did you try yourself to discover it?—I did. I directed the steward to try was there any gambling.

10490. Is it the fact that there were only about four or six inches of water in the bath for the patients?—I have never examined the bath, but I think it very unlikely such would be the case.

10491. You are the head of this institution, and I want to know did you take any steps to ascertain whether such was the case?—I know it is untrue.

10492. How do you know it is untrue?—Because there are regular washing places.

10493. Are all the lavatories used?—As far as I know, they are.

10494. Are you aware that when the Commissioners visited the house in November they were told all the lavatories were not used, and that the patients in three galleries were washed in the lower lavatories?—I think not; I inquired particularly, and I find they are washed in their washing rooms. Mr. Barry complained of some of the coats being stiffened. They showed me where they stiffened them every day after they were done using them. All the patients are washed every week in a bath.

10495. But the question is, whether the quantity of water was such as is sufficient—have you ever gone to any of the wards when the patients were washing?—Yes.

10496. Are you satisfied they had a sufficient supply of water?—Yes; I have always seen plenty of water.

10497. Do you go round the house?—I go at different times. The house is very large; I sometimes make a visit to one part of the house at an early hour and am called twice in the middle of one visit, and it might, probably, be two hours again before I would go and make the rest of my rounds. Sometimes I would be called away and forget to go back to the gallery I was visiting.

10498. Being physician of this establishment, you, of course, examined Mr. Barry, and are aware of the bruises he says he received?—I am not aware of any bruises. I am aware of his being excessively ill with disease of the chest and congestion of the lungs.

10499. You heard him state his illness was caused, he believed, by beating?—I heard that.

10500. Did you examine him?—Yes; and I never saw the signs of a hurt upon him.

10501. You do not believe it was in consequence of any beating that it was necessary to apply a blister to him?—I do not believe it was. He was excessively delicate at the time, and I believe if he staid a month longer he would not have gone out alive. Instead of my having used Mr. Barry badly I treated him kindly, for I knew his brother. He was in the low priced asylum I spoke of having got up. I knew him in Dublin as a Custom-house officer. I knew his family and his wife's family, and I was particularly kind to him. I never refused him any books; on the contrary I got him books. I recollect, on two occasions. It is very likely that in such a large establishment as this that if a patient applied to me for one thing or another, which was unimportant, I might have forgotten it on some occasions.

10502. I understand those matters that Mr. Barry has referred to here to-day are at present under the consideration of the Board?—He was before the Board on two occasions.

10503. I understand the Board directed him to make a statement in writing?—They told him to put the matter in writing; it is under the consideration of the Board still.

10504. With regard to the letters which he says he wrote, and which were not forwarded?—Mr. Joyce, the Governor of the goal, told me that Mr. Barry was a most troublesome man, and to be very careful about him. I said to Mr. Barry when he came here—Now, you are here under very peculiar circumstances, and you had to be brought before the sessions in London, and I have no objection to your communicating with your solicitor or any friend you please; but when he began to write to seven or eight different people, I had no notion of allowing that to go on, and I confined him to writing to his solicitor, who was John Moriarty, Mallow. Mr. Moriarty saw that Mr. Barry was going to give me every annoyance in his power, and, of his own accord, he wrote me this letter, it is as follows:—

"Mallow, 11th June, 1857.

"MR DEAR SIR,—I very much regret to perceive that Mr. Barry is expressing complaints against you. I had been to see him on several occasions while he was an inmate in the Eglington Lunatic Asylum, and some of those were for prolonged periods, and at inconvenient hours, and on all those occasions I am prepared to depose to your humanity, kindness, and attention to him. Indeed, the correspondence which you had with me respecting him prove all these more satisfactorily than any other evidence. If I can be of any use you may command me.

"Yours, faithfully,

"JOHN MORIARTY.

"THOMAS POWER, M.D., Eglington Asylum, Cork."

10505. I believe the right of a lunatic confined under the circumstances connected with Mr. Barry's case to see or communicate with his solicitor is reserved to him under the Act of Parliament?—I thought not. I was merely acting in a friendly spirit when I gave him liberty to write.

10506. Did you delay forwarding any letters he wrote?—Some I did not forward at all.

10507. You have heard the statement he made—that, on several occasions, he wrote letters which you detained, and that, by your detention of one of those letters, he has absolutely been the loser of a certain sum per annum?—I detained several letters, I am aware. Mr. Barry, after having his solicitor with him to-day, would write, that night, a letter to him, or three or four, not alone to the solicitor, but to Counsellor Harding, who will depose to my kindness to him.

10508. Were you aware of the contents of the letter?—I was not.

10509. Is it true a notice of ejectment was served upon him in this house?—Some legal paper, of which I have a copy, was served upon him.

10510. Did you detain any letters he wrote to his solicitor subsequent to that?—I do not know.

10511. You will not say you did not?—No.

10512. Did you, after having detained one of the letters he wrote, transmit it to any person?—No. I may have seen a letter lying on the table for Counsellor Harding. He came here sometimes to see him. In the commencement he was here almost every day to see him, and when I saw that letter I said to the messenger, you may as well take this letter to Counsellor Harding, it is lying here a couple of days.

10513. Were you aware of the contents of that letter?—I was not.

10514. I observe, with respect to the report made by you on the 10th February, relative to complaints of Mr. Barry, that the chairman merely signed the report; what is the meaning of the chairman signing the document?—If there is any thing important arises upon the report, or that it states any thing they assent to, it is signed by the chairman.

10515. You stated in one of your reports that Mr. Barry had made a complaint of having been severely beaten by two of the attendants, that you inquired minutely into the matter, and found his representations to be grossly exaggerated and malicious, and that you came to the conclusion that he had not been used more harshly than his own conduct and the order of the establishment required, and that document is signed by the chairman?—Yes, I take it that it is an assent to my statement.

10516. Does your recollection enable you to state what was the treatment he received on the occasion referred to in your report?—He was fighting with another man named Dempsey, another patient, who he told me was employed by some of the attendants he told stories of to annoy him. The attendants wanted to separate the two of them, and they were obliged to take Mr. Barry and put him into a padded cell, and keep him there for some time. One of the two attendants against whom Mr. Barry has so much animosity now, namely Sullivan, produced before the Board on the last day a character given him by Mr. Barry to enable him to get a place for which he was looking. Mr. Barry gave him the highest character he could give any man.

10517. You have heard the evidence about there being an insufficiency of towels?—I went through the house, as I tell you when, he first complained, and I found towels in the place; and on another occasion when he came here, after being liberated, I allowed him to go through the house and point out all the things he said were abused. We went through, and he said there was one place deficient of towels, and it was found hanging up.

10518. Did you ascertain whether the towels were used?—Yes.

10519. Mr. Barry, in his statement, referred to the case of a man who fell into the bath and died?—That man died of ramollissement of the brain.

10520. Did he sustain any of the injuries stated by Mr. Barry?—I never perceived any injuries about him.

10521. You stated that Mr. Barry was very ill in the hospital and was blistered?—Yes.

10522. How long was he in the hospital?—About a fortnight or three weeks; he was bled while in the hospital. He had numerous friends, and I never interfered with any one going to see him.

Mr. Wm. Reunick.
"Steward and General Superintendent."

Mr. William Reunick, sworn and examined.

10523. What appointment do you hold in this institution?—Steward and general superintendent.

10524. What duties do you perform in that capacity?—I receive the orders from the manager and resident physician, and see them executed. I see all the wants of the establishment supplied; I superintend the meals given out. I must be up in the morning at six o'clock and open all the doors, and see that the men are at their different duties.

10525. Your office is distinct from that of storekeeper?—Quite distinct.

10527. You discharge those duties in checking the storekeeper which, under ordinary circumstances, the manager would perform?—Just so.

10528. Was there any office such as you now hold previous to your appointment?—No; but there was a regular manager. I was then between the manager and the servants.

10529. How far does the medical manager exercise control over you?—I must obey all his orders, and see them executed regarding the working of the establishment. I receive the orders from Dr. Power.

10530. Do you report to him with reference to any thing that might be wrong in the storekeeper's department?—Certainly, or in any other part of the house. I go through the house every night to see that the patients are carefully looked up.

10531. Do you keep what are called the provision books?—Yes.

10532. Do you keep a register?—No, the register is kept in the office.

10533. Who keeps the book of the delivery of clothing?—The storekeeper.

10534. Who makes out the Morning Statement Book?—The clerk.

10535. Does the one person discharge the duties of clerk and storekeeper?—Not in this establishment; it is too extensive. That arrangement would never do here.

10536. Who writes out the Minute Book?—The clerk.

10537. You keep only the provision books?—That is all. The clerk acts in the capacity of secretary to the Board.

10538. Do you exercise any control over the farm outside?—No, the house steward does that.

10539. With regard to the duties which you discharge, will you sketch your daily performance of duties?—I commence at six o'clock in the morning, and I go through the whole house; I see that all the persons are attending to their business. I attend at eight o'clock in the kitchen, and see the breakfast filled out fairly. About ten o'clock I come into the office and receive any orders Dr. Power may have, and I then go through the house and inspect it.

10540. Do you mean the male side of the house?—The male and female side. I look after the state of the house, and the locks, keys, and the glass, in fact every thing in it. I attend the dinner in the evening, I check the books of the storekeeper, and again frequently go through the house. I go through at nine o'clock at night, after the hour for going to bed, and see that every man is in bed.

10541. In fact you perform all the civil duties of the manager?—Yes.

10542. Do you make any written reports to the manager?—In case of there being any thing wrong I do.

10543. Did you ever inquire into the complaint made by Mr. Nicholas Barry to the resident physician?—I did not.

10544. Did you ever inquire, by the direction of the manager or any other person, into any complaint made by Mr. Barry respecting the conduct of the servants in this establishment?—Yes. One time he told me that Sullivan used to get up after going to bed, and used to be playing cards. He told me he had reported it to Dr. Power, and I did not think of the matter after he said he had so reported it.

10545. Being the person chiefly in charge of the institution, were you ever instructed by Dr. Power to be on the look out to see if there was any truth in these statements?—No.

Mr. Nicholas Barry's charges.

His position in relation to the Manager;
his duties.

10546. Did you ever hear any complaint of there not being a sufficient quantity of water in the bath for the patients?—I think I heard Mr. Barry say so.

10547. Did you take any means to ascertain whether there was a sufficient quantity of water in the bath when the patients were washing?—I did not.

10548. Do you know where the inmates of each ward are washed; are they washed in their respective galleries, or brought down to one gallery?—They are washed in their respective galleries.

10549. Do you know that of your own knowledge?—I do not; that is the order.

10550. As you go round the house so constantly, do you see the patients taking their baths or washing?—I often see them washing.

10551. What quantity of water was in the baths you saw the patients in?—About half full.

10552. With reference to the lavatories, are the corks all in good order?—Generally; they have been so for some time past; they used to leak a little.

10553. What number of towels are used in each division in each week?—I could not exactly say.

10554. How many towels are allowed to each lavatory in the week?—They have about six for each lavatory.

10555. Do you know whether the six are used in each week?—I should say six at least.

10556. Do you know whether they are used or not?—Yes; they are hung up every day.

10557. Are they used?—Yes, sometimes they are wet.

10558. With regard to gambling, did you make any examination as to whether there might have been gambling going on amongst the servants?—I inquired, and was told there was not.

10559. You asked the servants?—Yes. Mr. Barry said it took place after ten o'clock at night.

10560. Did you ever ascertain from any of the more sane inmates whether there was any reason to believe such was the case?—I did not. The lights are out at ten o'clock every night, and the gas is turned off.

Mr. W. Connell.

10561. What appointment do you hold in this asylum?—Clerk.

10562. How long have you held that appointment?—Nearly seventeen years.

10563. What duties do you perform?—I keep the entire accounts of the office department.

10564. Do you keep the minutes of the Board?—Yes.

10565. You have nothing to do with the stores?—Nothing.

10566. Do you keep the farm account?—Yes.

10567. That is, you keep it from the statements made to you by those in charge of the farm?—Yes.

10568. Do you keep the account for clothing?—No; the storekeeper keeps the clothing account.

10569. What particular books do you keep?—I keep all the accounts and books of the financial department, and they are very numerous—different registers of admissions and discharges, application book, minute book, letter book, and others which I cannot recollect.

10570. When supplies are furnished by the contractors, is it the storekeeper takes an account of the delivery?—Yes.

10571. Does he furnish that to you?—I write the order for them on the requisition of the storekeeper, and the goods are delivered into the store, and the vouchers which are received by the storekeeper accompany the bills to my office afterwards.

10572. From that you are enabled to make out your account as against the county of Cork and city of Cork?—Yes; I make out the contractors' bills.

10573. You know what amount of each article is received?—Yes.

10574. With regard to the house itself, do you take charge of any part of the house?—No; I have no connection with any part of the institution; I do not consider it within my province at all. While I am here I would like to say that there is an omission with respect to clerks and storekeepers in asylums, in the bill brought in by Mr. Horsman and the Attorney-General for Ireland, in reference to superannuation. There was a clause defining the meaning of the word "officer," and it appears to me that it may militate against a person in my position after long service, if the bill is adopted in that form.

The Clerk; his duties.

Superannuation.

10575. Who keeps the account of the articles that are made up in the house?—The storekeeper.

10576. What is the meaning of this book in your list, "the shoemaking department account book," which I have before me?—I got a list from the storekeeper and I compare that with the shoemaker's account, that is the shoemaking department in the house. The storekeeper merely keeps an account of the articles delivered to store by the shoemaker, and I keep a debtor and creditor account of the shoemaking department.

Shoemaking department.

10577. Have you any thing to do with the attendants or servants of the institution in investigating matters?—I have not.

Mr. John Percival Duggan, sworn and examined.

Mr. J. P. Duggan.

The Storekeeper; his duties; stores.

10578. What appointment do you hold here?—Storekeeper.

10579. How long have you held that office?—About two years this month.

10580. Do you live in the house?—I do not exactly live in the house, but I live within the walls, or on the premises.

10581. Do you take charge of all the stores that are received in the house?—I do.

Chair.

10582. Do you receive, in the first instance, the raw material that comes in to be made up into articles in the house?—Yes, I receive the raw material in the first instance. The matron takes it in pieces from me according as she wants it; and when the goods are made up I receive them, such as shirting, women's dresses, and wrappers.

10583. You keep such an account as enables you to check the consumption or use of the raw material?—I do. I have both a debtor and creditor account, besides a daily issue book of same.

10584. When the articles are made up are they stored by you?—Yes, they are received again into store by me.

10585. When issuing these articles again, any shoes and clothes, do you take up the old articles?—I appoint a day in the week for the purpose, and I receive the old articles into store, and on the Thursday following the matron receives them, and has them repaired when it can be done, and at stated times sends them in to me.

10586. With regard to the shoes?—I receive the shoes new from the shoemaker, and I receive them repaired. I mean by that when there is only a piece wanted or a few stitches.

Condemned stores.

10587. Is there any arrangement with respect to condemned stores?—The condemned stores are kept underneath the house; any thing we think we can repair, such as tin, quartz, or case, we get done; but there are some other old things which are not worth any thing, and they lie in the store.

10588. It has been stated that all the articles required for the use of the asylum are obtained from contractors, except some trifling things purchased for cash?—I cannot say that. All I do is, receive the goods as they come into me. I get an order signed by Dr. Power, and on that I get the articles.

10589. And you are not cognizant whether there is any contract for all the articles or not?—Decidedly not.

10590. Do you exercise any superintendence over any of the officers of the house?—Not directly.

Bedding.

10591. Is the bedding made up in the house?—We receive a great deal of ticking which is made up in the house.

10592. What is principally used to fill the ticking for beds?—Straw is generally used.

10593. Do you know are there straw-closets on the various lobbies?—There has been lately a straw-house erected near the back of the laundry, though I cannot say it has been erected; the place has rather been converted into a straw-store.

10594. With regard to the hospital supplies, wine and so on, do they come through your hands?—No, the wine does not come through my hands, except what I issue for church purposes.

10595. How is the wine obtained for the infirmary?—It does not come through my store; very little comes through my store for the infirmary, except some lemon-juice, vinegar, and a few articles of that description.

10596. Do you issue what furnishes the rations to the officers?—I do, and to all the house, likewise. I see the meat cut up and sent out to the kitchen; and when the business of the house will permit me, I see it put into the boiler; but the amount of business is sometimes so great, that it will not permit me to do that.

10597. Do all the groceries pass through your hands?—All the groceries pass through my hands.

10598. Who has charge of the farm?—The resident physician manages the farm.

10599. When the produce of the farm is stored, have you any knowledge of what is the amount of that produce?—I keep a book containing an account of all the potatoes.

10600. That is according as they are brought in?—Yes.

10601. Is the produce of the farm here housed and pitted, or secured in the ordinary way?—At the latter end of the year the potatoes that remain are not so abundant as they would be if we received the entire in at one time.

T. Power, Esq., M.D.

10602. Do you manage the farm?—I do.

10603. How is the produce of the farm eventually secured?—There is scarcely any to secure, for the potatoes, forming the chief part of the produce, are consumed before the winter comes on, in fact, as fast as they are dug.

The head of the Asylum.

10604. What quantity of land have you under culture altogether?—About twenty-five acres.

10605. What becomes of the rest of the fifty-seven statute acres belonging to the asylum?—It is used for hay, and that is sold.

*Removal of cured

10606. Are there any pigs kept?—None.

10607. Are there any suggestions you would like to offer to the Commissioners?—With regard to the patients who are not removed when notice is given to their securities, the Board were speaking at one of their meetings of seeking for the power to transmit them to the nearest union workhouse.

10608. Do you refer to cured or incurable cases?—I refer to cured cases whose friends will not take them, that is, who will not reply to our letters, and we cannot turn the persons out on the road. With regard to the hiring of servants, my opinion is, that such a large establishment as this cannot be properly carried on unless the head man, or resident physician, who governs the asylum, has full power of appointing and discharging servants.

Appointment and dismissal of servants.

10609. Are you aware of the 66th Regulation of the Privy Council which states, that, as the manager is responsible for the character, conduct, and qualifications of the servants of the asylum, he is to have the appointment of them, subject to the approval of the Board?—I am aware of that, but the Board try to assume the power. That is of comparative little service, however, unless there is also given the power of discharging. I think the Inspectors, or whatever officers would discharge their duty, would be more suitable persons to judge in such matters, and I would give them a veto upon the appointment and dismissal of servants. The Governors here feel that they want a power of transmitting cases from this asylum to their respective districts.

10610. How would you propose that the settlement of a pauper lunatic should be fixed or ascertained?—I would say that seven years' residence in a place would be a good test. As I stated before, I think the admission should be as easy as possible, and that the moment a person became insane, means should be taken to transmit him to the asylum, and nowhere else, as quickly as possible.

10611. Would you be in a condition, in this asylum, to meet all the commitments of the magistrates, if the law was at once altered, and the power of committal to the gaol done away with?—I think so.

10612. Supposing the asylum full, and a case to come on a magistrate's committal, do you think, under an emergency, you could make room for a single case?—We could in our present state.

10613. With reference to the allegations, respecting which we were making inquiries to-day, that the servants of the establishment were constantly drunk, it appears, in the memorandum book of a meeting of the Board on the 13th January, that four of the servants were on that day fined for being drunk, and that another was dismissed for bringing in bottles, which, on examining her room, were found to contain whisky, does not that indicate that the statements as to the drunkenness of the servants had some foundation?—That refers to particular persons. If I was asked as to any particular servant, I would have told whether the man was drunk or not. That occurrence was rather looked over at that particular time, it being at Christmas.

10614. Is it the habit of the Governors to allow drunkenness at Christmas?—I cannot answer for the Governors.

SLIGO, 23rd SEPTEMBER, 1857.

Present:—Sir T. N. REMINGTON, Chairman; Dr. ANDREWS, Dr. CORRIGAN, and Mr. BARRY, Secretary.

Sligo District Asylum.

SLIGO DISTRICT ASYLUM.

John McManus, Esq., M.D.

John McManus, Esq., M.D., sworn and examined.

10615. What office do you hold in the Sligo District Lunatic Asylum?—Resident physician and superintendent.

10616. How long have you held that office?—I was appointed in 1852; the asylum was not opened till 1853.

Counties in the district; extent of Asylum accommodation; number of patients; class of cases.

10617. For what district was the asylum erected?—The counties of Sligo and Leitrim.

10618. What is the amount of accommodation provided in the asylum?—For 250 patients.

10619. Has the asylum ever contained that number?—Never.

10620. What is the actual number in the asylum at present?—One hundred and forty-two.

10621. What proportion of the 142 are considered to be incurable cases?—One hundred and thirteen.

10622. Do you find that the proportion of incurable cases is increasing or diminishing?—I think it is increasing. The cases are not sent in early enough.

10623. Did you receive any large number of patients here from Ballinasloe asylum when this asylum was first opened?—About eighty-nine.

10624. Were those cases generally incurable?—Generally speaking, almost all.

Form of admission.

10625. What forms are gone through on the admission of patients?—We have an admission form to be filled up, and patients are sent also from gaols under warrants from the Lord Lieutenant. [Copy of admission form is exhibited.]

10626. Cases admitted under this form would appear to be considered curable at the time of admission?—Generally considered curable.

10627. The certificate contains a statement that the patient is curable and a fit subject for admission?—We admit incurable cases who are very violent and refractory, and who could not be managed elsewhere.

10628. Are epileptic and idiotic cases admitted?—Yes, they are.

10629. Do you find, generally speaking, that this series of queries is usually answered in a satisfactory manner?—No, not generally.

10631. There is, in fact, no obligation on the authorities of the gaol to furnish you with any information whatever?—None whatever.

10632. Are patients ever sent here direct from the workhouse?—Yes, under the admission form.

10633. Do you find, with respect to those cases, that the queries can be always answered?—Not satisfactorily.

Removal of patients; from idiots.

10634. In the case of an admission from the workhouse, who enters into an engagement for the removal of the patient if incurable or cured?—I think it is generally signed by the chairman of the Board of Guardians.

10635. Have you experienced any difficulty in getting patients removed by persons who were bound under that engagement to remove them?—None as yet; I scarcely think there is any difficulty. There might be a very rare case in which there would be difficulty.

10636. Are born idiots admitted into the asylum?—Yes. There is a boy here a congenital idiot.

Applications for admission.

10637. The affidavit, therefore, declaring the patient who seeks admission not to be a born idiot, cannot have been required in that case?—It is not generally required.

10638. Has the number of applications for admission been increasing or diminishing?—Increasing.

10639. Do you think that has at all arisen from the facilities which the erection of an asylum in this, a remote part of the Connaught district has afforded?—I rather think so. The country people take advantage of the asylum, and send in a case earlier than they otherwise would, and perhaps send cases here that they would not send at all if they had to send to Ballinasloe.

10640. Do you find they generally send the cases in the earlier stages?—Latterly I think they do, because I have endeavoured to impress the importance of doing so upon the country people in my reports, and in every way I possibly can.

10641. Do you think there is an indisposition on the part of the country people to send their relatives afflicted with insanity to this institution?—I think not. That feeling is wearing away a good deal; they see the advantage of the institution, and it is doing away considerably with that indisposition.

10642. Were you in practice in the district as a physician previous to your connexion with the asylum?—Yes, I was physician to the workhouse.

Insanity in the district.

10643. From your experience, therefore, officially as well as non-officially, do you consider lunacy to be on the increase in this part of Ireland?—Well, I cannot say exactly; my experience is not sufficient as yet to enable me to answer that question.

10644. Has the fearful visitation of famine which afflicted this county in 1846 led, according to your experience, to an increase in lunacy?—I think it has led to a great many cases of insanity, arising from scrofulous disease of the brain. I have seen a good many cases of that description.

10645. Do you find that the cases transmitted from the gaols have generally been detained there for any considerable time?—A number of them have been detained a long time in prison, but not latterly.

10646. What is your opinion as to the fitness of the accommodation provided in gaols for lunatic patients?—It is very imperfect.

10647. Does it materially retard the chance of recovery?—Materially.

10648. You have had experience of workhouses—what is your opinion as to the accommodation provided in them for lunatics generally?—The accommodation we have had in the Sligo workhouse for tranquil patients is very good.

10649. Were they accommodated in any particular wards of the building, or in the general house accommodation?—When I was connected with the workhouse we had a small house three miles from the town, on the sea side, for the lunatics. Dr. Nugent, on his inspection, said he would much prefer having that house for those than this or any other asylum, they were so well taken care of in it.

10650. Was it an auxiliary workhouse?—Yes, an auxiliary workhouse; but for lunatics only.

10651. Were the lunatic wards in the workhouse used?—I went there at the time of the famine, and we were obliged to convert every available part of the house into accommodation for the paupers, and the guardians took this house I speak of for the lunatics.

10652. In this house to which the lunatics were transferred were the attendants paupers or hired servants?—Two male and female were hired servants; the others were pauper attendants.

10653. How far do you consider that the workhouses generally, not speaking now of that auxiliary building, hired, as you have mentioned, could be either in whole or in part made available for the accommodation of lunatics?—I think the association of lunatics with sane paupers is not at all advisable; they should be entirely separated, and I do not think a workhouse a suitable place for lunatics, under any circumstances.

10654. I believe the workhouses in Ireland are generally built pretty much on the same plan?—Generally.

10656. Supposing, what has not arisen in this asylum as yet, but has in other asylums, that the accommodation was not adequate to the wants of the district, have you ever considered the most advisable mode for providing additional accommodation—whether, for instance, you would prefer the erection of additional buildings, for all classes of lunatics, or the separation of any one class and its location in a distinct building?—I would prefer separation in an incurable hospital. As pauperism is declining in Ireland, I think some of the workhouses might be made available for incurable hospitals.

10657. Then you would have it for all classes of incurable lunatics, whether they were violent or quiet?—No; only for the tranquil and quiet cases.

10658. Would you limit it to quiet incurable cases?—Yes; and for idiots and incurable epileptics. I would have the present asylum altogether for curable and refractory cases.

10659. Do you think that a distinction between curables and incurables can, with perfect confidence, be drawn in all cases?—I think so.

10661. Do you consider the removal of incurable cases from the asylum would be an advantage to the curable cases?—I do. I think the incurables annoy the other patients very much, particularly when they are convalescent.

10662. Do you think it would be more advisable to have the hospitals for this distinct class of incurables away from the present asylums, or to have them on the same ground or contiguous?—I think it would be more advisable to have them away from the asylums; for this reason, that if you have too large a number of patients in an asylum they cannot be so well attended to.

10663. You are speaking now of the medical attendance and treatment?—Yes; of the medical attendance and treatment.

10664. If this establishment for incurables were located in a different district altogether, do you think it likely there would be the same anxiety and zeal on the part of the Governors in looking after such an institution, now looking after what might be called the more interesting one, because for curable cases?—I think so; at least from what I have seen of the Governors of this asylum, I am of opinion that, no matter where the incurable cases were located, the same attention would be given them.

10665. How far does this building enable you to carry out any system of classification?—I think it is very well adapted for classification.

Classification.

Paying patients;
quarters of difference in treatment of paying and pauper
patients.

10666. To what extent is classification carried out?—They are divided into the refractory, the moderately tranquil, and the tranquil.

10667. There appear to be only two airing courts and only two wards occupied on each side—how is the third class made out?—The third class are convalescent patients who walk about the entire grounds and require no airing court.

10668. Do they associate after dark with the other patients in the asylum?—Not with the refractory cases.

10669. Do they with the other classes?—They have separate wards up stairs; they do not associate with the others at all.

10670. Have you any patients in this establishment who pay?—There are three.

10671. Have there been paying patients here since the opening of the asylum?—A few from time to time.

10672. Under what regulation are they admitted by the Board of Governors?—They pay according to their means.

10673. Is it, I presume, a fixed payment, regulated by the cost of maintenance?—Exactly.

10674. Are they clothed by their friends or by the institution?—Generally by their friends.

10675. What is the highest sum that has been paid?—There have been some cases here for a short time that paid, I think, about £1 a week, in one or two instances. They were respectable patients who became violent, and they remained here until they were removed to a private asylum.

10676. Had they any additional comforts for that payment?—Every comfort they were accustomed to.

10677. Was there a distinct attendant allocated to them?—There was a distinct attendant in some cases; where the cases were refractory there were two attendants taken up with them.

10678. Were they accommodated with the other patients?—They were in a ward up stairs, a separate room altogether. One of the unoccupied day-rooms was appropriated and fitted up for the purpose.

10679. That is accommodation you would not have been able to afford if the house was full?—Not at all; neither do I think it at all advisable to bring such a class of patients into the asylum.

10680. State the reason why you do not think it advisable?—Persons of that class require others of their own class to associate with them, in order to make them comfortable. It is most annoying to them to associate with persons of a lower class, which association, I think, materially retards their recovery. I think a pauper asylum totally unsuited to persons of a different class.

10681. What is the lowest sum you have received from paying patients?—£10 per annum.

10682. Did the patients paying £10 per annum belong to a distinct class from those in the asylum?—Yes.

10683. Was there that difference in social position which rendered it inadvisable they should be treated in the same hospital?—I think so.

10684. Is it your opinion, from your knowledge of the country, that there is a considerable class of cases in that grade of society who could not be considered paupers, and who at the same time would be unable to pay for their maintenance in a private asylum?—Yes; I believe there is a considerable number of cases of that kind.

10685. How do you think could these cases be best provided for?—I think there should be portions of the asylum fitted up for persons of that class, where they should be kept distinct, and there should be separate attendants for them suited to their position or their former comforts. They should be kept as nearly as possible according to their former habits and comforts.

10686. Have you had any difficulty in obtaining payment from the parties who engaged to pay for patients?—None whatever.

10687. Have you found patients admitted as paying patients who, after a while, sought to be placed upon the pauper list?—They have not made any distinct application to the Governors, but I have heard one or two complaining of having to pay. There was no formal application to the Governors on the subject.

10688. Has it occurred that patients who were admitted as paying patients were transferred to the non-paying side of the house?—No, not as yet.

10689. Are you aware whether there are many lunatics still retained in the workhouses of the counties of Sligo and Leitrim?—There are some I know in the Sligo workhouse, incurable cases, idiots and epileptics.

10690. Do you know why they are not removed to the asylum?—They were considered not fit cases for it—they were incurable cases, and the Governors did not like to admit them; they were afraid of filling up the institution too quickly. We have ascertained that other asylums that were very few years in existence had been filled up with incurable cases to the exclusion of curables. The Governors thought that it would be better, until some other provision was made, to keep these cases in the workhouse.

10691. It appears that on the first January last there were twenty-four such cases in the Sligo workhouse—do you suppose they are all incurable or idiotic?—Yes, I do; I have seen them. They are cases that, under the circumstances, it would be better not to admit here.

10692. Is it your opinion there is any considerable number of lunatics at large in the counties of Sligo and Leitrim?—I do not think there are.

10693. Do you apply that observation to idiots?—No, I do not; there are, perhaps, a good many idiots at large.

Idiotism in the workhouses of the District and at large.

10696. From a return we have received it would appear that on the 1st of January there were forty-one insane persons and ninety-two idiots at large in the two counties—do you consider 133 such cases to be more than the number you suppose are at large?—I rather think not.

10695. Did you find the building, when taken up, suitably finished, and in every way fit for the reception of lunatics?—No; it was very unsuited in many respects.

10696. What were the chief faults you had to find with it?—Defective ventilation, defective hospital accommodation, defective window sashes, dampness, scanty supply of furniture, a very bad description of bedsteads, very unsuited for a place of the kind.

10697. Have any steps been taken to improve the ventilation?—Yes; the Governors appointed an architect some time ago to settle the matter.—Sir Thomas Denno, who was carrying out a system of ventilation by flues connected with a main shaft at the top of the building, and stores with large fire-places to carry off the impure air through the ventilating shaft at either side of the building. It is proposed also with that fire to heat water cisterns, so as to keep up a constant supply of hot water which is most necessary, and for which no provision at all was made.

10698. I believe all the cells look to the north?—Yes, they look to the north.

10699. Is there any means of heating these cells?—None whatever.

10700. Are the sick in the institution treated in their separate cells or in the infirmary?—From the defective state of the sewerage in the infirmary we were unable to occupy it since the house opened; consequently we were obliged to keep the patients in cells, and we got a dormitory where there was no fire-place. Where we had more than one patient we were obliged to put them into the dormitory, in which there was no fire-place, and where their comforts could not be attended to.

10701. Is there any means of heating the long corridors and separate rooms except by the fire-places in the day-rooms and corridors?—None whatever, and they are in the outer walls.

10702. Are they of any use whatever in heating the cells or dormitories?—None, nor for heating the corridors.

10703. You spoke of defective sewerage having prevented the infirmary from being used—state the defects?—The main sewer ran through the infirmary under the floor, and from some imperfection in the joining of the pipes there was an escape of noxious gas which got up through the flooring, and rendered the infirmary totally uninhabitable. The stoker or the fireman slept for a short time there and got diseased immediately, and was very near losing his life from sleeping there.

10704. At what depth under the floor of the infirmary did the sewerage run?—I cannot say exactly, but it was perhaps three feet.

10705. This arrangement of the main sewer passing under the infirmary was part of the original plan?—Yes, it was part of the original plan.

10706. Are the Governors taking steps to alter that?—Yes.

10707. Do you find that the patients suffer much from cold in winter?—They do. The want of heat in the corridors and cells, and through, in fact, the entire building, is very great in cold weather. It is a very great defect I consider in the building. The patients suffer greatly from the intense cold in the winter.

10708. Are the day-rooms comfortable?—Yes, the day-rooms are tolerably comfortable.

10709. Are there not large folding doors at each side opening into the corridors?—Yes; but they are constantly closed, and we put in slaps to keep out the cold.

10710. Are measures being taken to supply the deficiencies of furniture in the corridors and apartments?—To a certain extent. There are a few tables and chairs supplied, but the Governors, I have no doubt, will supply any furniture that will be necessary. They have been most anxious to attend to the comforts of the patients in every respect suggested.

10711. I believe the Governors are also taking steps to remedy the defects in the windows?—They are. The fact was, the Governors did not like to take any steps till they saw what the Treasury would do. They delayed ordering a better supply of furniture until they ascertained how the Treasury would act.

10712. The decision of the Treasury has been given in the present year?—The decision of the Treasury has been given in the present year, and I have no doubt, now that the Governors have got that decision, that they will make the house as comfortable as possible.

10713. Where do the patients dine?—The female patients in the recreation-hall, a large room in front of the chapel; the male patients dine in separate rooms.

10714. Have you found that the association of the patients at their meals has been advantageous?—Most advantageous. At my suggestion the Governors are about erecting a large dining-hall, where all the patients both male and female can associate at meal-time, which, I think, will contribute very much to their comfort.

10715. What was the proportion of separate cells in the building, as originally designed?—one-fifth.

10716. Did you find that was not sufficient?—It was not at all sufficient.

10717. What measures have been taken to provide additional separate accommodation?—The Treasury allowed a separate sum for separate cells, and the Governors have ordered the architect to provide additional cells, both in the infirmary and in the lower portions of the building; but the sum allowed would not be at all sufficient to provide the necessary number of cells. They are providing the single cells, however, as far as the money would allow them to go.

10718. Are you favourable to the use of associated dormitories for the more convalescent class?—Yes, I am.

10719. Then the desire to erect an additional number of separate cells has not arisen from any objection to the association of patients who may be so classed in dormitories?—No; there was not a single cell for a refractory case.

10720. Was the infirmary a collection of separate cells?—There were two dormitories in the infirmary at each side, two for males and two for females; twelve beds at each side, making twenty-four beds altogether in the infirmary. There was no day-room attached to it for the convalescent patients to sit in, which was another want.

10721. In the new arrangements which are being made, will that part of the building originally intended for an infirmary be made available for the sick?—Yes.

10722. Is the supply of water sufficient?—At present it is. It was defective some time ago and the Governors ordered a new well to be sunk.

Supply of water;
baths; water-closets.

10723. Is there any difficulty in providing a sufficient amount of water for the institution, supposing it to be full?—Well, I believe there is some difficulty.

10724. How is the water derived?—From two spring wells.

10725. Have you found that the arrangements for baths and water-closets were perfect?—The baths were very imperfect. The pipe from the bath and the pipe from the water-closet were connected; one ran into the other, into the main pipe, and sometimes, when the water-closet pipe became stopped, there was a regurgitation into the bath. There should have been separate pipes. There was no way of giving a constant supply of water to the wards. I should state that the water-closets are in a very imperfect condition; they are very offensive to the attendants who take care of them.

10726. Does that arise from the construction of them?—They have pans with plugs in them. The attendants are obliged to go every morning to them, and if any thing is thrown into the pans they are obliged to take it out, which, I think, is very offensive. The plugs do not even retain the water in the pans; there is leather round them, and they get out of order generally very soon.

Amusements.

10727. When the new arrangements, which are being made, are completed, a constant supply of hot water will be available?—Yes.

10728. What amusements are provided for the patients?—There is a large hall-court erected for the male patients to play in; they have also occasional evening amusements—dancing and music in the recreation-hall.

10729. Are any of the attendants enabled to contribute to the amusement of the patients?—Yes; there is a band formed amongst the attendants, to which the Governors kindly contributed the sum of £20 to provide instruments. They also pay the gate porter an additional sum for his services as a musician. He contributes considerably to the amusement of the patients, occasionally. On that account the gate porter gets a larger sum than he would otherwise receive.

10730. Is there any library of books?—Yes; a subscription library; the officers of the house subscribe.

10731. I presume you have found the musical and other entertainments have had a most salutary effect?—Decidedly.

10732. What bedding is used generally in the house?—Cocoa fibre generally.

10733. Have you found that to answer?—So far I have found it to answer.

Bedding; clothing;
employment of patients; school instruction.

10734. Is the clothing of the patients made up in the house?—The female clothing is made up in the house, and part of the male clothing.

10735. Are there any trades amongst the patients?—Shoe-making, carpentering, and tailoring. The female patients are engaged at sewing and knitting.

10736. Is there a school in the asylum?—There is no school.

10737. Do you think it would be an advantage to have a school where instruction would be given to those capable of reading and writing, as a means of occupation?—I think it would. We had it in contemplation. I mentioned some time ago to the Governors that we intended to get up a school, and that the clerk would instruct those who attended as soon as we got the house in order.

Arrangements for religious worship.

10738. What are the arrangements for religious worship?—Morning and evening prayers are read by one of the officers of the house. The Protestant and the Roman Catholic clergymen attend on Sundays.

10739. Do you mean that morning and evening prayer is read to the inmates of all persuasions?—Yes; to the Protestants and Roman Catholics at certain hours.

10740. Not one prayer for all?—No; separate prayers for each denomination. The matron reads the prayers for Protestants, in the morning and evening, and the clerk and storekeeper, who is a Roman Catholic, reads prayers for the Roman Catholics, morning and evening.

10741. Is there a chapel attached to the building?—There is a chapel attached to the building.

The Chaplain.

10742. Are the chaplains allowed admission to patients in the establishment whenever they require, or do you exercise a control over their admission?—Yes; if it is not right for them to see a patient, I mention it to them, and they are always guided by me in that respect.

10743. If a chaplain desired to see a patient, whom you considered was in such a state of mind that he would not profit by the visit, or would be excited on religious subjects, would you feel it your duty to prevent the visit?—Certainly.

10744. What proportion of the inmates usually attend divine service.—More than two-thirds.

10745. Have you found that they have been orderly or otherwise?—Generally very orderly. There is an occasional case of a person becoming excited, but, generally speaking, they are very orderly.

10746. Are the chaplains in the habit of preaching?—Yes, the Protestant chaplain preaches generally a sermon.

10747. Does the Roman Catholic chaplain preach?—No, he does not.

10748. What is your opinion of the advantage or otherwise of having chaplains attached to these institutions?—I think it is most desirable; I think it would be a great mistake not to have chaplains in an institution of the kind.

10749. I believe there is a visiting physician attached to the institution although you are a medical man?—Yes.

10750. What portion of the medical duties falls to him?—He generally prescribes for the patients; keeps the case book, and performs all the post mortem examinations.

10751. When a patient is first admitted is his case considered by the visiting physician or by you?—We generally both see him.

10752. You are, of course, aware that the office you hold is not necessarily, by law, held by a medical man?—I am aware of that.

10753. Has the fact of your being a medical man led to any different arrangement of the duties of manager and visiting physician in this institution?—I think it has; of course the visiting physician has not so much duty to do as he would where there was not a resident medical man.

10754. Do you prescribe as well as the visiting physician for cases?—I do, in his absence.

10755. In point of fact, is there any distinct line marking your respective duties, or are they so associated that they might possibly clash?—There is no distinct line of demarcation between our duties; we generally do our business conjointly.

10756. Do you think it desirable there should be a more distinct specification of the duties of each officer?—Not as the medical officers are at present; the more they do their duty in conjunction with one another the better.

10757. Supposing a difference of opinion existed between you and the visiting physician as to the way a particular case of insanity should be treated, whose opinion should guide the practice to be pursued?—I do not think that case is likely to arise.

10758. Supposing it did?—I being resident medical officer, I think I would treat the patient as I myself thought desirable.

10759. You are aware that the title of resident medical officer is not yet a title acknowledged by the Privy Council regulations, and that your appointment is a non-professional one?—Yes.

10760. That being the case, do you suppose if the visiting physician insisted upon treating a patient according to his own views you could resist that?—According to the present law I could not resist that.

10761. Supposing the law altered, and the office you now hold should be distinctly regulated as an office for the medical and moral treatment of the insane, how far do you consider it would be advisable to have a second medical person attached to this institution?—I think cases will arise from time to time where consultation is indispensable in hospitals. Consulting physicians are attached to all the Dublin hospitals.

10762. In cases requiring surgical operations, are the operations performed by you or by the visiting physician?—We have not had cases requiring actual surgical operations since the opening of the institution, but Dr. Little, the visiting physician, would, of course, perform any operation required to be done. Any trivial operations that have been required, he has generally performed them.

10763. You stated that previous to being connected with this institution you were a medical attendant of the workhouse?—Yes.

10764. Do you now hold that office?—I do not.

10765. Do you engage in any private practice?—Occasionally I do.

10766. Is that practice merely connected with insanity, or is it general medical practice?—General medical practice.

10767. How frequently are inspections of the asylum made by the Inspectors?—I think it is about three months since Dr. Nugent was here; I could not exactly say how often they visit.

10768. Do they visit twice a year?—More than twice a year.

10769. Do they generally visit without giving you notice of their intended visit?—Generally; they have given me notice occasionally, not always.

10770. Do they make any record of their visit in the books of the institution?—They do.

10771. Is that a mere record of having visited, or does it contain any opinion as to the state of the institution?—Sometimes they merely make an entry of having visited, and sometimes they give a report upon the general state of the institution.

10772. Do they attend the meetings of the Board of Governors?—Occasionally.

10773. Do they take part in the proceedings like the other Governors, voting when a division takes place?—I do not remember that any division occurred when the Inspectors were here, but they take part in the proceedings and make suggestions.

10774. What officers are connected with the institution besides yourself, the chaplains, and visiting physician?—The matron, clerk and storekeeper, steward, gardener, and the attendants.

10775. Does the clerk and storekeeper live on the premises?—Yes.

10776. Does the steward?—Yes.

10777. Does he superintend the farm accounts?—Yes.

10778. Who keeps account of the work done by tradesmen?—The clerk and storekeeper.

10779. The accounts, I believe, are audited by the Board of Audit?—Yes.

The Apothecary.

10780. Have you found any long interval to elapse between the period at which the accounts are made out and the time of audit?—It is only within the last two months, I think, that they have been auditing the first accounts of the institution.

10781. Have you found any inconvenience to arise from the control exercised by the Privy Council over your expenditure?—No, I think not.

10782. There is also an apothecary attached to the institution?—Yes.

10783. Does he reside on the premises?—He does not.

10784. Are the medicines provided by him, or are they provided by the Governors?—They are purchased by the Board of Governors in Dublin, and compounded by him.

10785. How often does the apothecary visit?—Generally every day; occasionally he may not, but he mentions to us when he cannot come.

10786. Supposing the charge of the sick was placed in your hands, would you approve of having an attending physician paid by salary or merely for his visit whenever his attendance was required?—That would be a matter for the consideration of the Governors altogether.

10787. Are the persons who fall sick, independently of being afflicted with insanity, directly under your care, or under the care of the visiting physician?—We both attend them.

10788. Do you see them first?—We see them together, and I see them frequently in the day from time to time.

10789. What are the means by which you or the visiting physician is informed of the occurrence of any sickness?—By the attendants; they have orders to report to me the slightest accident or illness, and they report it also in the book; but I desire them, notwithstanding that, to come and report to me at once, personally, at the same time that they have to note it in their book. I do not wait to see that book, but, as I have mentioned, give orders to them to have word sent to my room of any sudden illness.

10790. Does every attendant keep a day-book in which to enter such occurrences?—Yes.

10791. You have stated your opinion that it would be better to establish separate asylums for incurable cases, than to have the incurables mixed up with curables in those asylums throughout the country?—Yes; that is as a remedy for the asylum becoming overcrowded.

10792. Supposing that objection or difficulty were met by the extension of the asylum, so as to receive increased numbers, would you still be of opinion that there should be separate institutions for incurable cases?—Yes; in any asylum that exceeded 300 patients. I do not think it advisable to have more than from 250 to 300 patients in an asylum.

10793. That is merely as regards the size of the asylum; independently of any other consideration, would you deem it well to have the incurable separated from the curable cases?—I think I would; my experience leads me to that opinion.

10794. Would there be any economy in the arrangement?—I doubt that there would be much economy. I think it is a bad principle to economize with lunatic patients.

10795. How would you propose to distinguish the curable from the incurable cases?—For instance, cases of dementia and cases of very long standing from physical disease.

10796. You would regulate the distinction by the duration of the disease?—In a great measure.

10797. Then would you lay down any definite time at the end of which it would be advisable to remove a patient from an asylum like this to an establishment for incurables?—I would not depend altogether upon time; I would depend upon the general appearance and symptoms of the patients.

10798. But still you are aware patients recover after several years?—I am aware that there are rare instances, exceptional cases.

10799. But still patients who might be removed to an incurable asylum might afterwards recover?—It is possible.

10801. Then what are the advantages that would result from removing the incurables to a separate establishment—you have stated none that would not be attached to the district asylum?—I think the patients would not be so well attended to if they were all together in the one asylum, and I think that many of the patients who are becoming convalescent do not like to associate with incurable cases, who annoy them considerably and retard their recovery.

10802. Is it not the fact that the curable cases are very frequently more violent and noisy in their demeanour than the incurable cases?—I say when the curable cases are convalescent, then I think it is not judicious to mix them up with the incurable cases. They have become quiet and tranquil at that stage and are aware of their former state, and I do not, therefore, like mixing them with the incurables.

10803. But will they not be mixed with cases that are very often more violent and offensive in their language than the incurables?—They can be classified and they need not be mixed with such cases.

10804. Suppose a ward in which there are five curable cases and five incurable cases, may not any of the curable cases that are convalescent be as much annoyed by any of the other curable cases as by the incurables?—I would not mix convalescent patients up with curable cases that would annoy them; I would keep them separate.

10805. You think the presence of incurable cases injurious to convalescent patients?—I think so.

Attendance upon the sick; modes of resorting to medical relief in cases of sickness.

Asylum accommodation; the subject of placing curable and incurable cases in separate establishments.

Objection to mixing convalescent with other cases.

10806. Do you think the convalescent patients in a lunatic asylum are capable of distinguishing between those who are curable and those who are incurable?—No; I do not think they are.

10807. Then, if they are not, how can they be more annoyed by the incurables than the curables?—What I wish to convey is, that convalescent patients should not be mixed up with those that are violent and refractory, and that I am of opinion it would be better to have a separate establishment for curables and incurable cases, and to confine the asylum proper for the care of the curable and violent cases, as otherwise, in a few years the asylum will be filled with incurables to the exclusion of those who are likely to be benefited by early treatment.

10808. You said you would think it advisable, if there were separate wards in separate portions of the building set apart for them, to receive paying patients?—Yes.

10809. Would not that involve the expense and trouble of having two separate establishments?—It would to a certain extent, so far as furniture and accommodation.

10810. And attendants?—There would be very few such cases.

10811. Do you think it would be practicable to carry out that arrangement in a public asylum, to have two separate establishments, which they really would be?—There might be a separate house on the grounds for that class.

10812. Supposing it were deemed advisable to admit paying patients, do you think it would be well to leave the payment to be required for the support of the patients to the discretion of the Board of Governors, or to have a fixed sum, that sum being exactly the cost of maintenance?—Perhaps it would be better to have a fixed sum.

10813. If paying patients were to be admitted into the asylum, that is, from the class not able to pay in a private asylum and who do not wish to be classed as paupers, is it your opinion they should be treated in the same way as the other patients in the house?—I do not think they should; if that class of patients are not treated as they were accustomed to be treated you will interfere very much with them. You must assimilate their condition in the asylum as much as possible to the comforts they were accustomed to.

10814. How would you propose to provide for that class who are not able to pay in private asylums, and, on the other hand, do not desire to be received as paupers, and are really forbidden under the present law to be received into district asylums?—I think there should be some portion of the asylum set apart for them.

10815. Who orders wine and extras for the patients?—I generally order them myself, and the visiting physician also orders them.

10816. Are these wines and extras ordered every day for the patients, or having been once ordered are they then continued until discontinued by special direction?—Both wine and extras are continued until they are ordered by myself or the visiting physician to be discontinued.

10817. Do you think it might be more advisable to have an order made every day, so as to prevent abuse?—I think it would.

10818. In the form of admission which is issued you require it to be certified that the patient is not a born idiot—are you aware that is not in accordance with the orders of the Privy Council?—I am not aware.

10819. Who decides whether a patient is fit to attend religious worship or not?—I do generally; I give the order.

10820. Do you do that for each patient on each day on which there is religious worship?—I do not.

10821. Do you yourself attend religious worship when the patients are there?—I do not, generally. I am a Protestant, and I do not attend the Roman Catholic worship. I go into the gallery occasionally, and look in to see how the patients are conducting themselves; I do not remain there during the service; I do, occasionally, at the Protestant service, and I occasionally read the prayers myself for the Protestants.

10822. Do you ever converse with any of the patients who have attended religious service, afterwards upon the subject?—Yes.

10823. Have you ever conversed with the Protestant patients after there has been a discourse or sermon addressed to them?—I have.

10824. Have you by conversation with them found that any large proportion of the patients who attended at the service were capable of appreciating what was said to them?—I have not by individual conversations.

10825. You have but one chapel?—Only one chapel.

10826. Have you observed any dissatisfaction manifested by any of the patients at being obliged to use a place of worship also used by persons of a different religious persuasion?—None.

10827. Have you never heard of any thing of that sort in the asylum?—I have not.

10828. How are the hours for religious service on Sundays arranged?—The Roman Catholic clergyman has service in the morning between nine and ten o'clock, generally at half-past nine; and the Protestant chaplain in the afternoon, from three to four o'clock.

10829. Then there is a considerable interval between the two services?—A considerable interval between the two services.

10830. Do the chaplains attend during the week frequently?—Not frequently; occasionally they do; whenever they are sent for. The Protestant chaplain comes frequently when he is not sent for at all. The Roman Catholic chaplain generally does not come unless he is sent for.

10831. Are you aware whether or not the Protestant clergyman does converse with the patients on religious subjects?—I am not aware of that; I am not generally with him on his visits. I have been occasionally with him when he attended sick patients.

- Stucco. 10832. Then you cannot speak from personal observation of the moral influence upon the patients from the clergyman's conversation with these?—I cannot speak of the moral influence arising from his conversations with them individually.
- Stucco District Asylum. 10833. Is restraint practised at all in this asylum?—Very rarely.
- John McMeek, Esq., M.D. 10834. What instruments of restraint are used?—Merely the "chancellor," a jacket with sleeves.
- Restraint. 10835. Are the instruments of restraint kept in your custody or in that of attendants?—In mine.
- The attendants. 10836. They cannot be used without your authority?—Impossible.
10837. Does any examination take place of the candidates for the appointment of attendants in this institution?—No examination.
10838. Are they required to read and write?—Yes.
10839. In fact, at present do all the attendants in this asylum know how to read and write?—Yes, all read and write.
10840. Have you found that the wages allowed are sufficient to secure the services of competent persons?—So far I have found them sufficient.
10841. Do you keep all the books required by the regulations, the Registry Book and the Daily Statement Book?—Yes.
10842. In what way do you communicate any thing you may require, your wants or otherwise, to the Board of Governors—is it in writing in a distinct book for the purpose, or by a verbal statement?—Generally by a verbal statement.
- Question of rate of payment for paying patients; their treatment. 10843. Of course there will be no record if the application is refused?—No. I wish here to explain evidence I have given relative to paying patients. I think the sum to be paid should be fixed, and that it should be the actual cost of maintaining a patient in the asylum. Persons who could not pay that and could afford only £5 or £10 should not be required to pay. For instance, a poor struggling farmer might, in a prosperous year, be able to give £5 or £10, and the next year he might not be able to give any thing. From such a man I would not take the money.
10844. You also seemed to be of opinion that those patients who pay should have superior comforts in the asylum?—As near as possible to what they were accustomed to.
10846. You would not carry this principle so far as to allow a man a carriage to drive in because he had been accustomed to one?—No.
10847. Supposing a discretion was left to the Board of Governors as to the sum that should be received from patients, would you consider that a man paying £5 or £10 a year should have additional comforts, or should be treated as he was accustomed to be treated at home?—Yes.
10848. Do you consider that the existence of a class of patients in the institution treated differently from the other inmates would not lead to jealousy?—No, we would take the precaution of keeping them separate.
10849. Your asylum not being at present fully occupied you are enabled to give that accommodation, but supposing the asylum, as is the case in other parts of Ireland, was quite full, you would not be able to afford that separate accommodation?—We would be always able to afford it; the day-rooms at present could be appropriated for the purpose.
10850. In any case you consider that paying patients should have those additional comforts you speak of?—Yes.
10851. And that it would not lead to any jealousy amongst the other patients?—I think not.
10852. Do you not think the patients would communicate with each other in some way?—They might.
10853. If you were to treat the patients who paid merely the cost of maintenance better than you would treat the other patients in the house how would the expense to the institution be borne?—Of course the rate-payers must pay the additional expense.
10854. Do you think it would be possible to carry on without great injury and dissatisfaction a large establishment where any proportion of the patients would be better treated than other patients under the same roof?—Quite possible; no matter how full the house was it could be carried on without any injury or disturbance. It has a very injurious effect upon patients to deprive them of comforts they were accustomed to, and it retards their recovery more or less.

W. Little, Esq., M.D.

The Visiting Physician; the discharge of his duties.

William Little, Esq., M.D., sworn and examined.

10855. What appointment do you hold in this asylum?—Visiting physician.
10856. Have you held that appointment since the opening of the institution?—Yes.
10857. As visiting physician, what attendance do you give the institution, and what duties do you discharge?—Practically, I attend on the whole oftener than every second day; there may be days on which, from other engagements, I may be absent, but I more than pull that up afterwards, and I am never absent without Dr. McMeek's consent and approbation.
10858. Do you attend on admission days when the patients are being received?—No, not regularly, because I sometimes come at indefinite periods, but I am sure either to be here that day or the next day, and I become acquainted with the cases. I enter the name in a book, and I conceive it more judicious to wait for a short time and observe the species of insanity, after which I can give more details. I do not take down the case fully till the patient is in the house a fortnight or three weeks, and till I have had several conversations with him, and then I can judge of him better than I could at the time of his admission.

10850. Then you practically make it your duty to consider the case as regards the treatment of insanity as well as the treatment for any bodily disease the patient may be afflicted with?—Certainly; at the same time the moral management is carried out more particularly by Dr. McMunn, I frequently consulting with him.

10850. Do the patients generally arrive at the asylum in a very neglected state, or do they present any appearance of having been well-treated?—Sometimes, but not generally. Fierce patients are brought here very often with marks of violence upon them, restrained by ropes and in the custody of the police, and all that sort of thing, but the moment they are admitted all the restraint is removed, and they calm down.

10851. Are you enabled to judge by the condition of the cases generally whether they have been long detained by their friends previous to their being sent here?—I think they are generally not long detained; I would say so from their appearances.

10852. What is your opinion as to the willingness or unwillingness of the people to avail themselves of the asylum for their afflicted relatives?—I think they are glad to avail themselves of it in most cases; in some cases we find it not easy to get rid of cured patients.

10853. Why?—Sometimes the friends have not appeared very anxious to come for them.

10854. From your knowledge of the country generally, do you consider lunacy is on the increase or otherwise?—Well, I could not say.

10855. Do you keep a Case Book?—Yes.

10856. Are you acquainted with the provision made in goals for the care of lunatics?—Not very well, indeed. I am honorary surgeon to the goal, and only go when sent for by the physician, and that is very seldom indeed.

10857. Is there, in point of fact, any special arrangement for the treatment of lunatic prisoners in the goal?—I do not think there is for the medical treatment of insanity per se. The incidental diseases of lunatics are treated by the physician the same as those of any other patient in the goal.

10858. It has been stated that from certain causes a portion of this building originally intended for an infirmary could not be used—are you in favour of treating lunatics who are suffering from bodily ailments in an infirmary or in separate cells?—I should prefer the infirmary; it is more regular, and more consonant with the usual practice, and I think it would be more comfortable for the patients, and certainly more convenient for the physician and surgeon.

10859. In the event of the number of lunatic poor of the district exceeding the accommodation which this asylum affords, have you ever thought in what way the additional accommodation might be afforded?—I have not thought upon the subject.

10860. You have heard the evidence given with reference to the arrangements for religious worship and the ministrations of chaplains in this asylum—what is your opinion as to the necessity of having chaplains attached to this institution?—Well, I would be very much inclined to take Dr. McMunn's opinion on the subject; I have not thought much on it myself. I would say there is a large class of lunatics who would be influenced very much by religious discourses. I have not spoken to them on the subject.

10861. Do you find that your representations with reference to the wants of the establishment in any way are cordially received by the Board of Governors, and acted upon?—I make any representations of that kind through Dr. McMunn. I have no immediate connection with the Board of Governors on any subject except by a monthly sanitary return which I make to them.

10862. Is that a report from yourself or a joint report?—A joint report; we both sign it. I read it to Dr. McMunn, and he gives a suggestion or makes corrections.

10863. Do you consider yourself responsible for the care of patients who are attacked with any illness?—I consider myself responsible conjointly with Dr. McMunn. We have always acted together very well, and we have endeavoured to do our duty conjointly with as little individual responsibility as possible. Some short time ago we made an arrangement whereby we should visit the house conjointly every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Although that has not been very regularly carried out, yet it has been to a certain extent, and we continue it. There has never been a question between us as to individual responsibility. We have acted cordially together. If I am absent Dr. McMunn takes the care of a case, and if he has any thing particular to suggest to me he makes the suggestion and I receive it, and vice versa; in that way we manage it.

10864. You have heard the evidence of Dr. McMunn with reference to placing incurable cases in a separate asylum, what is your opinion on that subject?—I have always been of opinion that it would more conduce to the recovery of those who are curable not to have them mixing indiscriminately with incurable cases.

10865. Do you think there is any class of incurables who might, without injury to themselves in any way, be detained in workhouses?—I think there are very many, indeed; harmless, quiet patients, who are decidedly incurable.

10866. You have expressed an opinion in favour of having separate asylums for incurables?—I thought the separation of curables and incurables would be desirable; I am not prepared to say that separate asylums should be built for them. In a large asylum a separation might be made between them. The quiet and tractable patients are associated together as much as possible.

10867. I thought I understood you to say that the presence of an incurable patient would be more injurious than the presence of a curable patient to a convalescent patient?—I do not say as to curables or incurables, but as to violent or general demeanour, for, as you properly remarked, there may be many curable patients more likely than incurables to annoy other patients.

10878. Do I understand you to agree with Dr. McMann, that if the incurables were removed from this asylum there should still be a separation of those who were convalescent from the others in the same asylum?—I think a separation would be desirable, but I do not think it could be carried out. You would not like a convalescent friend to herd with another patient who was violent. There is a species of mimicry or infection or contagion in the disease, and the manner and demeanour of an excited violent patient may influence the manner and demeanour of a curable patient, who would not be violent except from example and the influence of others.

10879. I think you have joined Dr. McMann in subscribing to this return of the number of curables and incurables in this asylum on the 1st January last?—Yes.

10880. By that return it appears that only twenty-four cases, out of 131, were curable—nine males and fifteen females?—That is the return of the supposed curables. There are many who may not be so, and I am afraid some of those called curables are not so.

10881. Then this is even a favourable return?—Yes.

B. O. Coggin, Esq.,

Bernard Owen Coggin, Esq., J.P., sworn and examined.

10882. How long have you been a Governor of the Sligo District Asylum?—Since the asylum was established.

10883. Are you a frequent attendant at the Board?—I am.

10884. Is there usually a quorum assembled?—I am not aware that there was ever an adjournment from want of a sufficient attendance, except upon one occasion.

10885. Do you find that the attendance of Governors is more from Sligo than from the more distant county of Leitrim?—It is almost altogether from Sligo; some of the Leitrim gentlemen attend, but very rarely.

10886. Some of the Governors are connected with Sligo and Leitrim by property?—Yes; some of them, the chairmen, for instance, and a few others.

10887. Do the Governors appoint a visiting committee to inspect the house, or do they discharge that duty themselves?—There is a committee appointed by the Board, who visit from time to time.

10888. Practically is there an inspection of the house, we will say once a month, by the Governors?—Yes; whenever there is a meeting of the Board, some two or three of the members go visit the house also.

10889. What is your opinion as to the propriety or otherwise of the Inspectors of Lunatics being members of the Board?—I think it is very advisable that they should be members of the Board, so that whenever they attended they could take part in the proceedings and give any assistance in their power to the local Governors.

10890. Do you think they should sit at the Board with the same powers of voting and otherwise as the other members, or that they should attend merely as Poor Law Inspectors do at Boards of Guardians?—I think an attendance similar to that of Poor Law Inspectors at Boards of Guardians would be quite sufficient.

10891. What is your opinion as to the manner in which Governors are appointed, namely, by the Executive Government?—I am of opinion that they should not all be appointed by the Government, but that the rate-payers should have a voice in the appointment. The Board of Governors should be constituted much in the same way that Boards of Guardians are—one half should be ex officio, or nominated by the Government, and the other half elected by the rate-payers; that arrangement, I think, would give more satisfaction.

10892. Do you think if it were provided that a certain number of members of the Board should be chosen, say by the Grand Jury, and other members by the Town Council of the borough in the district, that such an arrangement would meet the difficulties which exist as to the rate-payers not being represented on the Board?—No; I would not think that sufficient; because I think the same Governors would be elected by the Grand Jury that would be chosen by the Lord Lieutenant.

10893. What is your opinion as to the control which is at present exercised by the Executive authority, or at least by the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council, with respect to the formation of districts and the erection of asylums?—I am not aware of any objection to that system.

10894. Do you consider it would be more advisable to leave it to the Board of Governors to erect the asylums and superintend the works, or leave it, as has heretofore been the case, in the hands of the Executive Government and Board of Works?—I think if it were in the hands of the local Governors there would be a greater saving, and the business would be much better managed altogether. A great many changes have been suggested and made by the Governors here since the building was given up. The general impression is, that the building is too expensive and has not been erected in a satisfactory or convenient manner.

10895. The cost of maintaining this institution, you are aware, is at present defrayed by the county rate?—I am.

10896. Are you satisfied with that mode of providing for the maintenance of the institution?—I think it is a very fair mode.

10897. You are aware that it differs from the mode in which paupers in workhouses are generally maintained, namely, by the poor rate?—My notion is that the asylum should be maintained in the same way as the poorhouses out of the poor rate, that is, that the owners of the fee and persons having an interest in property should contribute towards the maintenance of this institution. That, I think, would be the most equitable way of raising the money.

10898. Were not the existing arrangements with regard to land, made upon the faith of the present system, by which the occupier pays the whole cost?—The occupiers of land pay the whole of the county cess, and are under the impression that they are liable for all the items of which it is made up. Although we had not an asylum here until a few years since, yet we were contributing to the maintenance of one. The general class of occupiers, I may say, do not know of all the different items which go to make up the county cess, such as the cost of constabulary and the maintenance of the asylum.

10899. With whom do you consider that the appointment of the officers of this institution should rest?—With the Governors, I think.

Sligo.
Sligo District
Asylum.
B. O. Connor, Esq.,
J.P.

Appointment of officers.

10900. Do you include all the superior officers as well as the attendants?—I do.

10901. Would you leave any control or veto with the central authority respecting the appointments?—I would give such a control to the Executive as the Poor Law Commissioners exercise over the Boards of Guardians in such matters.

10902. It has been stated that some patients who pay have been admitted into this asylum, what is your opinion as to the propriety of patients who can pay for their support being maintained in an institution erected at the cost of the ratepayers in general?—I think that patients whose families or friends could not afford to send them to a private asylum, and who would not wish to be classed as paupers, ought to be received here on their paying a certain sum, the amount to be left to the discretion of the Governors, and never to exceed the actual cost of maintaining the patient. I would fix a maximum and not name a minimum sum, for I would receive any amount that could be afforded, though I should say, of course, that I would not have it less than about £5.

The question of the admission of patients for payment.

10903. If a sum were fixed which would be exactly commensurate with the cost of maintaining a lunatic in the asylum, and that all who were unable to pay that sum should be received as paupers, do you not think that arrangement would meet such cases?—It would not. We have in this house parties paying £10 a year, who could not pay £25; I know there are several cases of that kind.

10904. Do you think the Governors are enabled to exercise sufficient check so as to prevent the abuse of that indulgence, as it might be called?—I am quite certain they could in Sligo. There is no part of the county that is not generally represented here, and if there was no gentleman present belonging to a district from which an application was made the Board could communicate with parties who would be enabled to furnish information.

10905. Are more minute inquiries made with respect to patients applying for admission as paying patients than with respect to pauper patients?—A great deal more. The only inquiry would be as to the private means of the person.

10906. Is there any thing else you would wish to state relative to the subject of our inquiry?—It occurs to me that the certificate which it is necessary to send with a patient cannot be always complied with in all respects; for instance, you cannot always get a guarantee for the removal of cases, nor can you always get a medical certificate, and I think some alteration ought to be made, so as to apply a remedy. If a case arises in my neighbourhood, for instance, there is no relieving officer or no one connected with the lunatic asylum to look after the case. The patient may be in a bad way, and though the friends may be able to give me information with regard to him, they may not give me a guarantee for his removal, and a doctor may not be at hand to give a certificate; dispensary doctors, for instance, are not obliged to give a certificate. That document from the medical man certifies that he has visited the patient and that it is dangerous to allow him to be at liberty; that the patient is curable and a fit subject for admission to a lunatic asylum, and is likely to derive benefit from such admission. Of course if the physician sees the party the admission form can be filled up in this respect; but I think there ought to be another form of certificate for extreme cases, where such information as is now required could not be had, and where there was no relative or friend to guarantee the removal of the party when cured.

The form of admission.

10907. You are aware of the operation of the Dangerous Lunatic Act, by which a lunatic about to commit a crime may be committed to gaol—do you consider that that power of direct commitment to the gaol is a desirable one?—No; I disapprove of that, for I think it is injurious to the patient to be sent to gaol. If a patient could be sent at once to the asylum it would be much better.

Dangerous Lunatic
Act.

10908. Do you think it might be left to the discretion of one magistrate to commit a person direct to an asylum?—I do; it might be left to the discretion of magistrates or Governors, and if a patient was admitted the case might be brought forward at the next meeting of the Governors, and if the person was improperly admitted he could be turned out by order of the Board. With regard to the appointment of Governors, I would say that a preference should be given in selection to those living in the neighbourhood of the asylum, and who are likely to attend the meetings of the Board, rather than to gentlemen living at a distance and who are not likely to attend.

10909. If the appointment of Governors was to depend upon local selection, would the object you seem to desire be likely to be carried out?—No; I think it would be for the Lord Lieutenant to select after election by the rate-payers; he should select those who were likely to attend.

Peter O'Connor, Esq., J.P., sworn and examined.

Peter O'Connor,
Esq., J.P.

10910. How long have you been a Governor of this institution?—Since its opening.
10911. What is your opinion as to the manner in which the Governors are now appointed?—I think if we had an addition made to the Board from the largest rate-payers of the district, as they are represented at special sessions for the county, it would be an improvement,

Constitution of the Board of Governors.

Sligo.
Sligo District
Asylum.
Peter O'Connor,
Esq., J.P.

so as to give the rate-payers an opportunity of having persons to represent them in the expenditure of their money. The press is not admitted to the meetings of the Board, which, I believe, is generally the case; but some information for the rate-payers, as to the proceedings, would be desirable.

10912. And to understand you would wish each baronial sessions to nominate the Governors or to have it done by the county at large sessions?—Either at one or the other, or at the assizes. I think it would be better to have it done at the baronial sessions, each barony to name, according to its extent and taxation, persons to represent it. A certain number might be chosen so as to have the elected and nominated guardians equal.

10913. You suggest this as a mode of carrying out the representation of the rate-payers?—I do, and think it is a mode that would be likely to give satisfaction.

Appointment of officers.

10914. With regard to the appointment of the officers of the establishment, the resident and visiting physician and others, with whom do you think these appointments should rest?—With the Governors, under the control of the Executive, as is the case under the Poor Law system.

Paying patients.

10915. Are you in favour of paying patients being admitted into this establishment?—I am. It would be a great hardship upon the rate-payers of the county if they could not have accommodation for their lunatic relatives amongst those whom they are obliged to support. I think they should have the benefit of the institution for members of their own families when they require it, and the non-existence of an arrangement for the purpose is at present a great want in the institution.

10916. Do you consider it would be more advisable to fix the amount of the payment which the friends of patients should make, say at the actual cost of maintenance, or to leave it discretionary with the Governors to vary the amount according to the means of the parties?—I think it would be better to leave it discretionary with the Governors. Supposing a man who was just able to pay £38 for a relative, and was obliged to pay it, and that there was another man who could pay £15 or £20, I think it would be unjust to the first man to let off the second altogether, merely because he could not pay the whole £38. Those who could pay £10 or £15 a year towards the support of a relative should contribute that sum, and those who could pay the whole cost of maintenance should be required to pay it; but then there should be different classification, as Dr. McManus has suggested. The association of patients should be so regulated as not to prevent improvement in their cases.

10917. As long as you fix a minimum the same injustice you speak of must arise; if £5 was your minimum would it not be hard upon a man able to pay that sum only to require it from him, and to let free another man who could pay £4?—I think parties unable to pay £10 a year should be admitted free.

10918. Do you think fixing the sum would be a check upon parties getting friends admitted for less than they could afford to pay?—If the rate-payers who have to pay the money were represented at the Board they would take care that each party should pay according to his means for the support of the patient.

10919. You are not afraid that injurious consequences might result from perpetual solicitation going on on the part of friends to have the charge lowered to the minimum, and thus have the Board constantly exposed to various influences?—Very likely some persons might try to influence them, but I think it is better to chance that than to have the class I refer to unprovided for.

The chargeability of
the Asylum.

10920. What is your opinion as to the manner in which the maintenance of this institution is at present defrayed—do you think it should be defrayed out of the county rate or the poor rate?—I think out of the county rate; it is upon that understanding that owners of land have let land, and tenants have taken it; unless new circumstances arose and that rate became so excessive that tenants would be unable to pay them, I think then it might be judicious to so apportion it that the owners of property might pay a portion.

10921. You have stated that the occupiers of land took it on the understanding that they were to pay county cess, out of which the asylums are supported?—Yes.

10922. And therefore that the asylum should continue to be supported in that way?—Unless that from circumstances the rate became excessive, and then I think the matter should be reconsidered, so as to determine whether the proprietor should not pay a portion.

10923. Might it not be said on the other side that a few years ago the medical charities of the country were supported by county cess, and that their support has been within the last few years transferred to the poor rate—might not a similar course be adopted with respect to the cost of these asylums?—I think as to the medical charities the general portion of the cess-payers derive the benefit of them, and it was extending them on the principle of the poor law system brought the charge upon the proprietors.

10924. Were not dispensaries previously maintained by private subscriptions as well as by county rate?—Yes.

10925. Then the difference of transferring it to the poor rate is but slight, the proprietor, as in the former case, was supposed to be a subscriber, and now he contributes through the rate?—Yes.

10926. The medical charities a few years, although the legal support was derived through the county cess, yet practically they were maintained both by proprietors and occupiers?—Yes, there was an equal proportion; a sum was raised by taxation equal to what was subscribed.

10927. So that practically the difference caused by the alteration in the law as regards the support of the medical charities has been almost nothing?—Almost nothing, except that there is a difference in the amount. I concur with Mr. Cogan as to the form of admission; I think there is a great deal of difficulty in it, for instance, we require the signature of a magistrate for the removal of a pauper as a guarantee. The sooner this form of admission is amended, I think, the better. We find a great deal of difficulty in getting persons to give guarantees for the removal of patients. We might get such a guarantee in the case of paying patients, but not in cases of pauper patients.

Roger Charles Parks, Esq., J.P., sworn and examined.

10928. Are you a member of the Board of Governors of this asylum?—I am not.

10930. With regard to the manner in which the maintenance of these institutions is defrayed, out of the county rate, do you desire any change in that arrangement?—I should desire to have it charged the same as the poor rate, one half upon the landlord and one half upon the tenant. The asylum is an institution for the benefit of pauper persons, and should be placed upon the same footing as the workhouses, and on the same account I think the rate-payers should exercise a proper surveillance over what is done here. I would either have some of the largest rate-payers named as Governors, or else have them elected in the same manner as Poor Law Guardians are. I do not at all approve of the Governors being exclusively appointed by the Executive Government.

10931. How do you consider that the principal officers of the institution should be appointed?—I think by the Governors, with a power of veto in the Government. With respect to paying patients, I think it would be better to have them admitted, and let the minimum sum to be received be £10. Whatever patients were paid for I think would be better looked after by their relatives.

KILLARNEY.

KILLARNEY, OCTOBER 22nd, 1857.

Present:—Sir T. N. REDINGTON, Chairman; Dr. CONNIGAN, and Mr. BARRY, Secretary.

KILLARNEY DISTRICT ASYLUM.

Killarney District Asylum.Martin S. Lawler, Esq., M.D.Martin S. Lawler, Esq., M.D., sworn and examined.The Resident Physician; his share in the medical treatment.

10932. What appointment do you hold in the Killarney District Asylum?—Resident physician and governor.

10933. In point of fact you hold the office of manager, and are styled resident physician under the recent arrangement?—Yes.

10934. Have you held that office since the opening of the asylum?—Yes; since December, 1853.

10935. For what district was this asylum built?—For the county of Kerry only.

10936. What share do you take in the medical treatment of the patients with the visiting physician?—We treat them entirely in common. The visiting physician comes regularly four times a week, and he frequently comes oftener if there is necessity. If any case of difficulty arises I send for him and consult him, and we treat the patients, as I have stated, in common.

10937. Did you receive any instruction upon your appointment, as to your duties in relation to those of the visiting physician?—No, I did not. I received the instruction given to the managers in the old asylums, where the manager was not a medical man.

10938. I presume those instructions are not suited to the appointment which you now hold?—No, they are not.

The Asylum accommodation; number of patients.

10939. Is the asylum full?—No; there are only 172 patients at present in it, and it is capable of holding, with a little pressure, 240. In making that statement I include in my estimate of accommodation the infirmary, which is a detached building; and it would be also necessary to have about twenty beds in the new large wide corridor at the top of the house. Without that the total number we could receive would be 220.

10940. From the Daily Statement Book of yesterday it appears that you consider 124 out of 171 cases to be incurable?—Yes; that is an approximation.

10941. I presume a considerable number of patients were transferred here from the Limerick Asylum, at the opening of this institution?—Yes; seventy-two were transferred here, and twenty-four from Tralee gaol.

10942. You have not had occasion to consider in this district what arrangement could be made in the event of your asylum being full?—No.

10943. Have you yourself ever considered that subject?—No. My idea is that we have no such accommodation as we require. There are many patients in the asylum that, if pressed for room, we could send to the workhouse. They are demented, but are perfectly quiet and tranquil.

Locuties in Workhouse and Gaol.

10944. I presume you are acquainted with the arrangements for lunatics in the workhouse here?—Yes.

10945. Do you consider a workhouse a place in which any class of lunatics could be properly confined?—I think demented quiet cases could be kept there, except that I do not consider the dietary sufficiently good.

10946. As there are so many vacancies in the asylum, I presume no lunatics are now allowed to remain any time in Tralee gaol?—The present arrangement is, that they must remain in the gaol when committed there until communication is made to Dublin, and then a warrant is sent down to the governor of the gaol for their transmission here.

10947. Does any considerable delay arise in procuring the warrant?—Occasionally.

10948. Do you see any objection to committing a lunatic in the first instance to the asylum?—No; on the contrary, I am a great advocate for it.

10949. Do you receive any paying patients?—We do.

10950. At what rate of payment?—The Board of Governors fix the rate when they ascertain the income or means of the party; they decide whether the sum should be £5, or £10, or the whole amount of the cost of maintenance per head for the year. They have never charged more than the actual cost of maintenance.

10951. From your knowledge of the county do you suppose there is a considerable class who, while they would not wish to have their afflicted relatives admitted into public asylums exactly as paupers, would, at the same time, desire to pay a portion of the cost of maintaining these relatives in this institution?—I do; I think there is a good number of such persons.

10952. Then you are in favour of the admission of those paying patients?—I am; and the arrangement would be much easier if the number of paying patients was more numerous.

10953. Is there any distinction made between the paying patients and the paupers in the way of dress?—There is a distinction made, more in the way of food. The paying patients, so far as we have gone, four or five out of the ten in the asylum are supplied with clothes by their own relatives; and with respect to food there is, as I have said, a distinction.

10954. That is that they get a better class of food?—They do. I do not give it from any previous design or determination, but I find that it infallibly results in my being obliged to do so; for instance, there may be a paying patient who filled the rank of a gentleman, and who will not eat oatmeal gruel for breakfast, and I am obliged to give him a more luxurious or better class of food.

10955. Do you not find jealousies to arise amongst the other patients in consequence of that?—Yes; in a few instances, but not as often as I would expect; and those instances have arisen amongst persons who have been in a better position of life themselves, not amongst the humbler or poorer class.

10956. Have the Board of Governors had reason to complain of the manner in which the asylum has been constructed?—Yes; there has been great expense and outlay of money upon external ornamentation. The two principal grounds of complaint are, the imperfect state of the work, and the not having been consulted with respect to the outlay.

10957. In point of fact, did any communication take place between the Board of Governors and the Board of Works during the erection of the building?—Not that I am aware of.

10958. Have those defects been remedied?—They are in course of being remedied; but not all the defects that have been pointed out by the Board of Governors.

10959. I believe the site is a salubrious one?—Very salubrious. There, in fact, has never been any epidemic here.

10960. How is the supply of water?—The water is bad as to quality, and the means of supplying it are very onerous on the patients, particularly in summer and in the cold period of winter.

10961. You mean that the labour imposed on the patients in working up the water is more than they probably can perform without injury to themselves?—I think so; I think it is labour calculated to be injurious to lunatic patients.

10962. Is the supply of water sufficient?—It is sufficient if we had enough of labour to command it. There has never been a dearth of water in the well.

10963. Is there a considerable extent of ground attached to the asylum?—Thirty acres within the walls.

10964. Is there any of that under cultivation?—We have twenty acres under cultivation; the rest is taken up with the building, the airing-courts, and roads.

10965. Are the airing-courts on the northern or southern side of the building?—On the northern.

10966. Are they much used by the patients?—Yes; particularly on the male side.

10967. Do you find them cold and cheerless in winter?—Yes, cold and cheerless; but a new one has been constructed that will give more sun at the female side.

10968. How are the long galleries heated?—Just at present they have been putting up stoves to heat them; before that the cold was very great in the winter. It was only yesterday that we commenced to try how the stoves answered.

10969. Are the fire-places in the outer walls of the galleries?—Yes; they are in the outer walls. There was no means of putting them in the inner walls.

10970. Are there any artificial means of ventilation?—There is a fire at the top of the house which heats one of the bed-rooms, and consumes the foul air which comes up through the air-pipe.

10971. Has that been found effective?—It varies in its effects very often; sometimes it seems to take up the foul air well, and at other times not. That is judging by the test of a candle, but by the test of smell on going into the dormitories and the rooms of the patients it does not seem to work very well.

10972. Is that fire lighted every day in the week?—Every day, to supply hot water for baths, and at the same time it consumes the foul air.

10973. Is there a supply of hot water laid on?—Yes, every day; it is not laid on until it is called for, but it is always there.

10974. Are there hot water pipes?—There are; we do not turn it on, in order to check the consumption.

10975. How is the sewerage?—Very good; and now that we have new water-works put up in connexion with the water-closets we have very good means, indeed, of flushing.

10976. Then you are satisfied with the existing arrangements in this respect?—Yes.

10977. Were the bedding and furniture that were supplied suitable?—The bedsteads I did not think were at all suitable; the beds and bedding were very good; but they supplied us with iron bedsteads, which are easily broken, and which tend very much to accident.

10978. Have you had any accidents?—We have had no accidents; but the patients have broken off the limbs of the stools.

10979. Are there baths in each wing?—There are baths in the four divisions of each wing.

10980. How often does each of the patients get a bath?—As a general rule they are all washed and bathed once a-week; any patient that requires it gets it oftener; soiled patients get it as a matter of cleanliness and health.

10981. Have you any school in the asylum?—We had a school; but I unfortunately have been obliged to be away from the asylum, and I do not know how it has been working. It was only in its infancy when I went away, and it was going on pretty well.

10982. What means are there of amusing the patients?—Their principal amusement is in the open air; they have a ball-sley, and the agricultural labour is a great amusement to the great majority of them. For indoor amusements there are books, newspapers, backgammon, and cards; but I find they do not make much use of any of them, with few exceptions.

10983. Is there a recreation-hall?—There is; but we have not used it up to the present. There is no furniture for it.

10984. Do the patients dine in their several divisions?—They dine in their divisions.

EMERSON.
*Killarney District
 Asylum.*
 Martin S. Lavelle,
 Esq., M.D.
 Chaplain.

10985. Have you ever thought of associated dining?—I have; and it has been very often suggested to me, but it has not been adopted. We sent up a request with an estimate to the Board of Works, when the last money was granted, for an allowance of funds to furnish and fit up a hall for dining, and the Government refused it.

10986. Are there chaplains attached to the institution?—There are.

10987. Is there a place of worship?—There is a chapel available for all persuasions.

10988. What is your opinion as to the necessity of having chaplains attached to this institution?—I think it is a great comfort to the patients; and, as far as this asylum goes, I think it has worked exceedingly well; and, moreover, I find great assistance from the Catholic chaplain in keeping the attendants, who are Catholics, orderly and regular.

10989. Have there always been chaplains attached to this institution?—For a month or six weeks after the opening of the asylum there was no chaplain, in consequence of some dispute between the bishop and the Governors about the appointment.

10990. Did the patients during that time complain of the want of a chaplain?—Yes; some patients who came from Tralee goal expressed great dissatisfaction at not having mass on Sundays; they said they considered they were treated more like savages than Christians, as they had no chaplain.

10991. Has any difficulty arisen from the one chapel being used by the two persuasions?—None.

10992. I believe it is the case in all the gaols of the county that the one chapel is used by the different persuasions?—I believe so.

The Governors; the Inspectors.

10993. Is the attendance of Governors pretty regular?—It is pretty regular. We have meetings, I should think, for ten months out of the twelve, on an average. The Board meet once a month, and special meetings are held, when necessary.

10994. Is there any visiting committee of the Governors appointed?—No; they have never appointed a visiting committee; they have taken the subject once or twice into their consideration. They said they would appoint a committee, but they have never done so.

10995. Do the Governors, or any number of them, on the days of their meeting, visit the house?—Occasionally.

10996. Do the Inspectors of Lunatics attend the Board?—When they are here they do.

10997. Do they vote at the Board like the other Governors?—We have never had a division when they were here.

10998. When the Inspectors make their visits, are they in the habit of communicating to you beforehand that they are likely to arrive on a certain day?—I generally get a note from them to say that they will be here, and stop here, they being private friends of mine.

10999. Are their visits of inspection to the asylum usually made on the same days on which meetings of the Board are held?—No, I think not; they have been two or three times here on the occasion of meetings.

11000. Do they enter in any book any record of their visits?—They do, in a Minute Book.

Manager's confidential relations to Board; Privy Council considered.

11001. When you desire to bring matters under the notice of the Board of Governors, do you do so in writing, or verbally?—In writing, in a Memorandum Book.

11002. Have you found that any inconvenient delays have arisen from communication with the Privy Council with respect to contracts?—Not with respect to contracts; but occasionally with respect to money advances. It was no great inconvenience, it was only a question of paying a few shillings interest.

Clerk and storekeeper; infirmary.

11003. Have you a clerk and storekeeper?—Yes.

11004. Does he reside in the house?—He resides, at present, in the infirmary, which is detached from the house.

11005. Is the infirmary used as such?—It is not used as an infirmary, and he has gone there to keep it dried.

11006. Why is it not used as an infirmary?—We have not had a staff of attendants sufficient to enable us to use it as an infirmary.

11007. What is your opinion as to the advisability of there being a separate place for treating sick cases?—I think it very desirable; but I also think it desirable to have it more attached to the asylum than our infirmary is. The infirmary building is some distance away from the asylum.

The attendants.

11008. With whom does the appointment of the inferior officers rest?—The appointment of the superior officers rests with the Government, and the appointment of the attendants and servants rests with me, subject to the approval of the Board of Governors.

11009. Is there any examination as to their education or fitness, when they are being appointed?—I examine them as to their capacity to read and write. I am sometimes obliged to take in people who are very inferior in point of education.

11010. Do you find that the salaries allowed are sufficient to insure the services of competent persons?—I think the salaries are too small.

11011. What are the salaries of the ordinary attendants?—The males enter at £9 a-year, and, after three years' service, rise to £11, with rations and clothing. The females enter at £7, and, after three years' service, rise to £9, with rations and clothing. I am now speaking of the ordinary attendants. We have a head attendant, who has £26 a-year, with rations and clothing.

Structural improvement of the house.

11012. In the observations which Dr. Nugent entered in this Minute Book now before me, on the 11th April last, I find the following sentence:—"I trust the works undertaken for the structural improvement of the house will be successful; at the same time, I cannot but regret that the propositions made by the Board of Governors, about three months since, were not acceded to by the Treasury, so, I feel convinced, it would have been most beneficial to the institution, had the wishes of the Board been carried out." To what did that refer?—To an application from the Board of Governors to the Treasury, to allow them to apply a sum, that had been granted, to works that they thought most judicious.

11013. You mean a sum reported for this asylum by the Commissioners of 1855?—Yes.

11014. By a return which we have received, it would appear that there are thirty-seven lunatics and idiots in the workhouses of this county; have you frequent applications from the Boards of Guardians for the admission of lunatics?—Very rarely. Killyarny and Kenmare are the only workhouses from which we had applications.

11015. It appears there were on the 1st January last fifteen idiots in the Killyarny workhouse; do you think a workhouse a suitable place for the detention of idiots?—I think it would be better to have them in the asylum, if there is room for them; though, if they are tranquil, they might remain in the workhouse.

11016. Do you find any difficulty in getting the usual heads signed in the cases of patients coming from workhouses?—No, not in the cases of patients coming from workhouses.

11017. Who usually undertakes to remove those patients?—The master of the workhouse.

11018. In the case of patients coming from gaols and workhouses, you do not usually receive, I believe, the same amount of information that you do with cases coming from the county at large?—We do not.

11019. Do you find that a great inconvenience?—Yes; but their friends generally come in the course of time, and we get information about them in that way.

11020. It also appears, from a return which we have received, that there were in this county ninety-seven insane persons at large on the 1st January last; from your knowledge of the county, do you think that a reasonably correct return?—The number of insane in this county appears to have been so greatly developed since the establishment of this asylum that I should not be surprised if it was a correct return. Before the establishment of this asylum, I would not have thought there were so many.

11021. I saw two sick patients in bed this morning, one named Darley, with discharging abscess in the neck, in bed eighteen months; the other, named Scollard, in the same room, three weeks in bed; is there any special nurse for those persons?—No special nurse.

11022. At the female side, Anne Roche has been in bed for four months, in dormitory number five, with five other patients; she has offensive discharging abscess in the groin, open for four months; are you provided with any special nurse for her?—No.

11023. It appears from the statement of the nurse in the division that she has herself been obliged to be up for the greater part of the last two nights, in attendance on Anne Roche?—Yes.

11024. Do you think she is capable of doing both day and night duty?—She is not; but she is relieved in the course of the day.

11025. Eddy Shen, in division number ten, is suffering from extensive scrofulous disease of the skin, and has been in bed for two years, always in a single cell, and, therefore, without sufficient warmth?—Yes.

11026. These cases are proofs to your mind that an infirmary would be desirable?—Certainly.

11027. You have said that it would be desirable to admit paying patients; would you propose to admit them at a fixed rate of payment, or would you leave the amount to be paid, to the discretion of the Board of Governors?—I would leave it at the discretion of the Board of Governors.

11028. Do you think that might give rise to jealousy in any cases?—I think not; it has not done so as yet.

11029. Do you use any mechanical restraint?—None.

11030. Have you padded rooms?—We have padded rooms.

11031. Have you ever turned your attention to the consideration whether if the asylum became very much pressed for room, it would be more desirable to establish a separate asylum for incurables, or to enlarge the district asylum?—Speaking with reference to this district, in my opinion, it would be more desirable to enlarge the district asylum than to erect a separate building for incurables.

11032. Be kind enough to mention the grounds on which you consider enlarging the district asylum preferable to erecting a separate asylum for incurables?—I think it could be worked more economically.

11033. Have you any other ground for your opinion?—That is the principal ground.

11034. With whom do you consider the main responsibility of treating the patients rests, with you or with the visiting physician?—I have always considered that we had a mutual responsibility; but, as I am here more during the twenty-four hours of the day, I presume, a greater responsibility rests with me; so far as the forming of the diagnosis, and the treatment of patients, it has been perfectly mutual; we consult.

11035. Supposing a difference of opinion did occur, with whom do you think the main responsibility ought to rest?—That would be a question in reference to the relative experience of the physicians; for my own part, I would yield to the visiting physician here, as the more experienced in practice, but, I think, as a general principle, the responsibility ought to rest with the resident physician.

11036. Would you extend that responsibility, not only as far as the treatment of insanity, but the treatment of ordinary diseases, in addition to insanity?—Yes, I would.

11037. Would your view be, that the visiting physician should be in the light of a consulting physician, and give the resident physician the benefit of his advice and experience?—I find it difficult to answer that question; for, as far as my experience goes, that has not been the arrangement here. The visiting physician has taken an equal part in the treatment with me.

- KILLARNEY.
Killarney District Asylum.
Marin S. Lawlor, Esq., M.D.
11038. Is there much labour given by the inmates towards the making up of articles for use?—All the clothes in the house are made up by the patients, with the exception of the labour of one shoemaker, whom we employ.
11039. Have you any other occupation besides that of manager of this asylum?—No.
11040. When you were appointed did you receive any instruction with respect to any other occupations?—I received instructions from the Inspectors informing me that I should have no other medical practice.
- Chargeability of the inmates.
11041. Are there any general suggestions you would wish to address to the Commissioners with reference to the subject of this inquiry?—Yes; I have made a note of a few. With respect to the chargeability of the inmates, I may observe, that I have occasionally to take in lunatics who have been found wandering about the county, but who belong to the neighbouring counties, Limerick, for instance. I am directed to write, then, to the asylum belonging to the native county of the lunatic, to request that they will have the lunatic removed to that asylum, and the general answer we have received is, that the asylum is full. I would suggest that there should be some power given for the recovery from the counties of the expense of maintaining lunatics belonging to them, so long as they have been detained in other asylums.
- Dangerous Lunatics.
11042. Are the cases you refer to admitted as urgent cases, or are they admitted by the Board?—They are generally admitted as urgent cases. The last was a woman, who, it was suspected, had a design upon the life of a gentleman in the neighbourhood. With respect to the commitment of dangerous lunatics, I believe the regulation is that they should be sent to the gaol on the warrant of two magistrates; but they are frequently brought here, and sometimes, in such a state, tied to a cart, and so cold and prostrated, that I could not possibly think of sending them to the gaol. I would suggest, that there should be a power of immediate commitment to the asylum.
- The staff of attendants.
11043. Is it your opinion the detention of such cases in the gaol materially retards their cure?—I think it is injurious to them; but so far as a few days go, it cannot materially retard their cure. The gaol here, so far as I know, is well managed.
11044. Do you think the management of this asylum could be improved in any way?—The principal defect I find here, managing under the control of the Board of Governors, is that the staff is not sufficiently large; but, knowing as I do the general feeling of the Board that great expense has already been incurred in connection with this asylum, and that it is their wish to economize, I have not urged on them the necessity of increasing the staff as much as I otherwise would. I think the principal want is a larger and better paid staff. I find that I can get more value from a man who has been here four years than from two men who are newly taken in. The great thing is to have trained men, and you cannot expect to have such persons unless they are better paid. I would suggest, that the salaries should rise up to a certain amount, in proportion to the length of service. I would also wish to call attention to the question as to whether there is a power to detain lunatics against the wish of their relatives. As well as I understand the law, the relatives, or next of kin, of a lunatic have a right to remove him whenever they choose. They very often come here, and desire to remove persons from the asylum who are dangerous, or who are in a state of health that ought to forbid their removal at the time; and I think it would be very desirable if the resident officer, or the Board, had the power of detaining such lunatics until they were in a condition to be removed.
- Removal from the Asylum of uncurd patients by their relatives.
11045. Then your opinion is that you could not refuse to give up a patient?—I have refused, but I felt I was rather running a risk in doing so.
11046. To what do you attribute the desire of friends and relatives to take out of the asylum insane patients?—I would attribute it sometimes to such a thing as a dream; they come here and say they had a dream the night before last, or the night before that, and the result of which is, that they would like to remove the patient. At another time they say the patient is not getting well, and that it would be better to bring him round the holy well.
11047. Do you ever find, that when patients recover, there is any difficulty in getting their friends to take them away?—Yes, sometimes; and we have no compulsory power to oblige relatives to take away lunatics.
11048. Have you not a bond?—The bond is very uncertain; it is often signed by a pauper.
11049. Do you not think that, if you were to refuse in many instances to deliver up a patient to his friends, it might cause general dissatisfaction and distrust with respect to the institution throughout the country?—It might, no doubt, if such a power was judiciously exercised; but the great probability is that would not be so; because, of course, the ambition of the resident medical officer in a place of this sort would be to send out his patients cured or improved as much as possible to their friends.
11050. Does it not happen much more frequently that the relatives refuse to take out their friends than that they seek to remove them when they are not cured?—In this asylum the contrary has been the case; they more frequently demand to remove patients not cured.
11051. You are aware that, in hospitals for the cure of ordinary sick patients, friends occasionally come and remove them, even when the physician or surgeon in attendance thinks the removal may be most dangerous to the patient?—Yes.
11052. And you are aware that practice has never been interfered with, because it is felt that the attempt to carry out the forcible detention of the patients would be an evil of greater magnitude than that of permitting them to be taken away?—Yes.
11053. Do you think the evil of allowing them to go out uncured is of such magnitude that it is worth taking measures against, when compared with the injurious results that would arise from the distrust occasioned by detaining in the asylum patients, who it was demanded, should be given up?—Where a lunatic would be dangerous to himself or others, I would be for detaining him.

11054. In that case only you would detain him?—Yes; but I would detain lunatics in other cases. If a man is taken out of the asylum in a state of extreme illness, and that that man dies on the road, it would cause a great sensation and feeling against the administration of the asylum in a remote county like this.

11055. Are not dangerous lunatics sent to this asylum under warrant, and does not the law provide that they are to be confined here?—Dangerous lunatics from the gaols are sent under warrants. The meaning of a dangerous lunatic I take to be one who is violent.

11056. But if a man becomes a dangerous lunatic, does not the law deal with him and return him back to the asylum?—Yes.

Walter William Murphy, Esq., M.D. sworn and examined.

11057. What appointment do you hold in this asylum?—Visiting physician.

11058. Have you held that appointment since the opening of the institution?—Yes.

11059. How frequently in the week do you attend?—As a rule four times a week, and oftener if necessary.

11060. Do you attend on board days when patients are admitted?—I do.

11061. How soon after patients are admitted do you see them—is any communication made to you respecting them?—Not unless there is something very striking in the case.

11062. Then a patient may be admitted into the asylum without your seeing him for some time?—For a day only.

11063. How far do you consider that you are at all responsible for the moral treatment of the patients?—I consider myself just in the same position as Dr. Lawler. If any thing occurs to my mind with regard to their moral treatment I suggest it to him.

11064. When you attend at the asylum do you visit all the wards, or merely such cases as your services are required for?—I visit all the divisions, and all the airing courts.

11065. Are you and Dr. Lawler in the habit of consulting about the insanity of a patient when he is first admitted?—Yes.

11066. Do you jointly determine upon the course of treatment to be pursued?—Yes.

11067. Supposing a difference of opinion to arise between you, how do you propose to decide that?—I could not answer the question; I have never anticipated any difference arising between us.

11068. From your knowledge of the county of Kerry, is it your opinion that insanity is on the increase?—I have hitherto come to the conclusion that there is a greater number of insane persons in the county than I could have supposed heretofore.

11069. Do you think that is in any way connected with the scenes of the recent famine?—I think the famine might have exercised an influence on it.

11070. I believe there is an apothecary attached to this asylum?—Yes.

11071. Are the drugs purchased by the Governors or provided by him?—They are provided by the Governors.

11072. Is it your opinion, that it would be desirable the infirmary should be used for the purposes for which it was erected?—I think so.

11073. Have you ever brought the matter under the notice of the Board of Governors?—I have not.

11074. Have any of the separate cells got fire-places?—None of the single cells have fire-places; they are in the dormitories.

11075. In point of fact, are fires ever lighted in the associated dormitories?—Yes; sometimes.

11076. Do you think separate cells suitable places for treating sick patients?—I have found it preferable to attend them in an infirmary.

11077. With the limited number of attendants, is it possible for the nurse having charge of a ward to attend on sick patients in separate cells?—Certainly not.

11078. You have heard Dr. Lawler's evidence with reference to the quality of the water here?—Yes.

11079. Do you concur in the opinion that it is of bad quality?—Yes; there is some iron in it; there is a taste of iron on it. Whether that is a natural impregnation, or arises from passing through iron pipes I cannot say. It was proposed to send some of the water to Cork for analysis.

11080. Are you acquainted with the workhouse?—Yes; I am medical officer of the workhouse.

11081. How far do you consider the workhouse a fit place for the detention of lunatics?—I think the asylums are preferable. There was a period when the asylum would be more desirable than it is now, for then there was a greater pressure upon the workhouses.

11082. Do you think there is any class of lunatics, such as harmless and quiet lunatics, who might with propriety be detained in workhouses?—I do.

11083. Have you ever turned your attention to the subject of admitting paying patients into the asylum?—I have.

11084. Do you think it desirable?—I think it most desirable.

11085. Why?—They are secure of being paid proper attention with the means that are here for treating insanity. They can be taken in here at a low rate, and I think it of the greatest benefit to the community at large, to receive a certain class of persons with limited means.

11086. You would not, of course, include such a class of persons as pay in private asylums?—

Assuredly not.

11087. Would you propose they should be paid for on a scale commensurate with the opinion which the Board of Governors might form of their means, or that they should be admitted on payment of a fixed sum?—I should leave it to the Governors to settle the amount to be paid, for they are acquainted with the means of almost every person in the county, and they would tax those parties just according to their means.

11088. Might not that uncertainty as to the amount lead to perpetual solicitation on the part of friends of patients to have them admitted at a low charge, and thus place individual Governors in the disagreeable position of resisting those applications?—The Governors must take upon them that responsibility and inconvenience.

Difference in treatment of paying and pauper patients.

11089. Do you think that if paying patients were admitted into this asylum they ought to be in any degree treated differently from the ordinary patients in the house?—I do. I think their position requires a different mode of treatment with regard to nourishment and, if possible, clothing. Their morale, I think, would be influenced very much, and injured if they were treated in the same manner as persons who could not appreciate comforts to which they were not accustomed.

11090. But if they paid a sum much below the average cost of maintenance, would not their position approximate to that of the pauper class?—That may be; but independently of that, I would feel it my duty as an officer of the house, to supply them with better food, in order to keep up their health and lead to quicker recovery, even supposing they did not pay any thing.

11091. Would you manage that under the head of medical diet without giving rise to any jealousy?—Certainly. I would avoid creating jealousy as much as possible.

11092. Do you think pursuing the course you propose would give rise to jealousy amongst the patients?—It might.

11093. You do not think that of much consequence?—No; I think it could be so managed that they would see as little of it as possible.

Question of separate accommodation for insane.

11094. Have you ever turned your attention to the consideration of the question as to whether it would be more advisable to erect separate or provincial asylums for incurables, if the present asylums become overcrowded, or to enlarge these asylums?—I have heard Dr. Lawler's evidence on that point, and I fully concur with him in his opinion.

Medical extras.

11095. How is the extra dietary for the sick, and those who might require better than the ordinary diet, entered?—In going round through the building I suggest to Dr. Lawler, or he suggests to me, as the case may be, that this man or the other will require porter or wine, or a mutton chop, or broth; he takes a note of it, and reports it to the clerk when he comes down, and there is a Dietary Book in which the extras are entered. [Same is exhibited.]

11096. Is there any book in which the names of the patients are entered to whom these extra diets are to go?—I am not aware. We point the person out to the keeper in the ward, and tell him that person is to get such a diet. Dr. Lawler comes down here and orders it to be sent to that particular division for the patient.

11097. Then you merely trust to the memory of the keepers for carrying out your arrangements with respect to the dietary for the sick?—Yes.

11098. Do you consider that a good plan?—If there was a book for the purpose it would be better, but no mistake has occurred on the subject.

11099. Are mistakes not likely to occur when there is no book of direction?—Mistakes would be better avoided by keeping a book.

The McGillicuddy,
J.P., &c.

Richard McGillicuddy, Esq., J.P., &c., commonly called The McGillicuddy, sworn and examined.

11100. You have been a Governor of this asylum from its commencement?—Yes.

11101. You have been regular in your attendance?—As regular as my health would permit me.

The Governors.

11102. Do you find there is usually a good attendance of Governors here?—When I have attended here there have been generally from three to four or five present; some days not so many.

11103. It has been stated that the question of appointing a visiting committee has been more than once under the consideration of the Governors, but that they did not determine to appoint one; do you know on what ground they considered it inadvisable to do so?—I do not.

11104. Are any arrangements made by the Governors for inspecting the house?—Not that I am aware of; but they generally go through the house when they come here, to see if there is any thing astray, and they question the patients. I think there is an insufficient number of keepers in the house for the increased number of patients.

The erection of the Asylum.

11105. Are you enabled to state to the Commissioners whether at the time it was determined to erect a separate asylum for the county of Kerry, any communication took place between the gentry of the county and the Government, with reference to the situation of the asylum?—I am not aware, for I think I was absent from the country at the time.

11106. I believe practically the Governors have not been allowed any control with regard to the erection of the asylum?—They have not.

11107. Do you consider that satisfactory?—I think it very unsatisfactory. Where taxation exists, every man in the country should have a voice in the levying and disposal of that tation. You should not put your hand into a man's pocket and take out his purse without asking his leave.

11108. I believe the gaols and courthouses and other public buildings are erected under the control of the county authorities?—Yes. If the county had the control of the building of this asylum, vast expense would have been saved. It is a fact that must be patent to yourselves, that a great deal of money has been sadly wasted. A building more suited to our wants could have been erected for half the expense.

11109. It has been stated that the Board of Governors are in the habit of admitting paying patients; are you favourable to the admission of that class?—Quite so.

11110. Do you consider there is a considerable portion of the population who are in a position to pay some of the cost of maintaining their afflicted relatives, and who at the same time would not like to place them as paupers in an asylum?—Certainly. Taxation is very heavy, and there are certain classes whose families are afflicted with the disease, which we must all deplore, and whose means do not enable them to give their afflicted relatives that care, protection, and attention their cases require. If you tax them heavily for the support of lunatic asylums it is but common equity to give them something of the benefit of this taxation. There are families who are endangered by such cases being at large. I was very near being shot myself the day before yesterday by a lunatic.

11111. What is your opinion of the manner in which the Governors are appointed?—I do not know that you could substitute a better plan than the present; it is one so decidedly without partiality. I think if the Governors here recommended the appointment of gentlemen to the Lord Lieutenant, his Excellency would attend to the recommendation, and would appoint the additional Governors. He might not know the locality so well as the Governors here, who would be, from their local knowledge, better qualified to select suitable persons. There are Governors who never appear here, and the whole management is left to the members of the Board living in the neighbourhood of Kilmurray. These from Dingle and other parts of the county do not attend.

11112. Have you ever considered whether it would not be advisable to leave the appointment of a portion of the Board to the Grand Jury?—I do not see any objection to that arrangement; I think it would be advisable.

11113. Are the Grand Jury of Kerry in the habit of appointing a committee to visit the asylum?—No.

11114. We understand that the Inspectors of Lunatics attend the Board pretty regularly?—They do.

11115. What is your opinion as to the propriety or otherwise of the Inspectors being members of the Board?—I do not see any objection to their attending the Board; but some of the Inspectors, when I met here, I do not think did much good, and I do not think they afforded any assistance.

11116. Do you think their position at the Board might be assimilated more to that of Poor Law Inspectors at Boards of Guardians, where they cannot vote?—I think it would be a better arrangement.

11117. You are aware that the cost of maintaining this institution is paid out of the county rate?—Yes. I would prefer having it transferred to the Consolidated Fund.

11118. Are you of opinion that it would be desirable to make any alteration, so as to transfer the cost to the poor rate?—No; I do not see any advantage in that at all.

11119. I believe the inmates of this institution are all chargeable upon the county at large?—Yes.

11120. Do you think the chargeability should be fixed upon a smaller area?—I would say not. I would prefer having it upon the county at large.

11121. The superior officers of this institution are at present appointed by the Executive Government?—Yes.

11122. Do you consider that arrangement satisfactory?—I see no objection to it at all. I think it would lead to unpleasantness in the county if we were authorized to appoint these officers. I would rather leave the appointment in the hands of the Government. The fewer causes for bickering and disagreement we have been the better.

11123. With reference to the admission of paying patients, would you approve of a fixed scale of payment, or a graduated scale?—I would approve of a graduated scale according to their means; it would work better, and there would be more equity in it.

11124. Have you had any opportunity of observing whether the system of religious instruction has worked well?—There are few of my religious persuasion here, and it is not part of my duty to interfere in the religious concerns of others. I am not aware that the persons coupled with me in religious persuasion have benefited by the arrangement much, but I think it is an arrangement that ought to be continued. I would be one of the strongest opponents to the withdrawal of religious instruction from any class; and I am as much in favour of the priest attending at this asylum as I am in favour of the Protestant clergyman attending.

11125. You think the attendance of both desirable?—Decidedly. I think it would be a crying shame to deprive the inmates of either persuasion of the benefit of religious instruction.

11126. Is there any observation you wish to make with respect to the building?—The building, when given up, was really not habitable by the patients. The water streamed in through the walls in buckets full; mops were used every day soaking it up, and this was so for the first year here. The asylum was obliged to be pointed every winter to try and exclude the damp. So great was the damp, that every joint running across the corridors became rotten as a pear. The Board of Works found it necessary to make additions in order to correct the evils, and they sought to throw it upon the Board of Governors after they got the responsibility off their own shoulders. You will allow me now to say one word with respect to the granting of leave of absence to the manager. I agree in the opinion that a month's leave of absence would be necessary for him, and I do not think you could possibly get a more suitable officer than Dr. Lawler. I do not think any one could discharge the responsible duties of his position efficiently throughout the year, unless he had some little relaxation. You may imagine the amount of labour and anxiety he has to undergo; and when he is granted leave of absence, it is most unfair to make him for the payment of his substitute.

11127. Do you concur in the opinion that some competent medical person should be left in the asylum during the absence of the manager?—Yes; but, as I have before said, I would not visit the manager with the coat.

11128. Who, practically, is the principal person resident in the house in the absence of the manager; is it the storekeeper?—Yes; there could not be a better man than the storekeeper; and there is also Mr. Rickard, the head turnkey, who is also a most efficient officer. No accident or loss of any description has occurred in the asylum.

11129. Have you been a Governor of this institution since its opening?—Yes.

11130. What is your opinion as to the manner in which the Governors are now appointed?—Well, I think the present mode of appointment is a very good one; but I think when the Governors suggest the appointment of any additional members from the locality, in consequence of the want of sufficient attendance or otherwise, that their suggestion or recommendation should receive an almost absolute confirmation from the Government. I think the Government should appoint the persons the Board of Governors would recommend. I am of opinion that it is better to leave the appointment of Governors in the hands of the Government, and I do not incline to the opinion that it would be well to confer upon the Grand Jury the power of appointing, and I will state my reason for that. The result of my experience of Grand Jury appointments is this, that though very respectable men are appointed, there is very often a jealousy created by the omission of some name, the passing over particular persons. Gentlemen are frequently put on the list who do not really attend to the business, but who, if they did attend, would be very good members of the Board. With respect to the attendance of Governors, I feel that in this particular part of the district we do not receive sufficient assistance from the Governors belonging to the other parts of the county. As a general rule, the Governors residing at a distance do not attend, in point of fact, at all, at this asylum. The asylum, so far as the duties of Governors are concerned, is worked by those living in the immediate locality.

11131. Do you think a more suitable and central situation might have been chosen for the asylum?—No; I do not think there could have been a better situation than the present.

11132. What is your opinion as to the Inspectors of Asylums being members of the Board of Governors?—In the working of this asylum, I see no objection whatsoever to it. They appear to have gone on with the Governors in a very fair and amicable manner hitherto. We have never had any difference of opinion whenever they attended here. The Inspectors appear to carry out their own views, and they pay every attention to the suggestions of the Governors.

Paying patients.

11133. Do you concur in the opinion that it is desirable to make provision for paying patients in these institutions?—I do; I fully concur in what The McGilleuddy, who is our principal acting Governor here, has said upon that subject, and I consider that a graduated scale of payment is better than a fixed amount. From what I have seen here, I do not think that any improper admissions would be made by the Governors. They inquire strictly and fully into the circumstances of each person.

Chargeability of the Asylum and the Inmates.

11134. Are you favourable to the transferring of the maintenance of this institution from the county rate to the poor rate?—No; I think the reasons applicable to district rating for poor law purposes do not apply at all to institutions like this. The rates for the supporting of paupers ought to be confined very much to districts, so as to create in each district an inclination or desire on the part of proprietors and occupiers of land to decrease the amount of the tax by doing what is in their power to reduce the amount of pauperism; but the same principle does not apply at all with respect to lunacy. So far as my judgment goes, I do not see how they bear upon each other at all.

11136. With respect to dangerous lunatics, do you see any objection to giving a power to the magistrates to commit them direct to the asylum?—Not at all, I think it wise; and regulations that have been made in reference to communication with Dublin and other quarters in relation to the committal of lunatics, are quite unnecessary, and cause delay, and very often lead to dangerous results. The most speedy means should be provided for committing a lunatic at once to the asylum, subject to the proper control of a magistrate, as is already provided by the law, and upon the certificate of a medical man. I do not see any reason for the delays that at present arise.

11137. Do you concur with The McGillicuddy, as to the expediency of leaving the appointment of the superior officers of the asylum in the hands of the Government?—As to the superior officers of the asylum, certainly; such as the Governor and the visiting physician. I think it better to leave such appointments to the Government, though, as a general rule, I am for local control. I think it would be better, however, that the other officers in the asylum should be appointed by the Governors.

KILLASNOY.
Kilberry District
Asylum.
J. Leahy, Esq., M.P.

11138. Is there any statement or suggestion you would wish to make to the Commissioners?—I wish to make a suggestion with reference to what has been given on two or three matters. You asked questions relative to the idiots who remain in the workhouse here, and inquired how it was that so many appeared to remain in the workhouses of the county. I thought something had occurred on the subject at this Board, and on referring to the minutes, I found at page 40, under date 2nd March, 1853, this resolution, to which I wish to direct your attention:—"The Board proceeded to consider the question of receiving idiots into the asylum, and after mature discussion came to the following resolution, which they directed to be forwarded to the various Boards of Guardians in the county: 'Resolved—That with the view to retain the existing available accommodation in this establishment as far as possible for curable cases of lunacy, we are anxious to impress on the several Boards of Guardians in this county, the advisability of not seeking to have idiots forwarded to the new county asylum, unless such idiots are dangerous ones; and that we trust the Guardians will co-operate in carrying out this course generally throughout the county at large, as the expense of dieting lunatics and idiots will be probably 2s. 6d. per head per week; whereas in the workhouses, the cost of dietary is only one shilling per head per week. We trust the necessity of exercising every economy, consistent with the carrying out of the law, will be admitted by all. That the resident physician be directed to forward a copy of this resolution to the Chairmen of each Union, with the view to place same before the Guardians.'" To that I attribute the fact of there being so many of that class of idiots in the workhouses as appears from the return you have referred to.

Idiots.

11139. What is your opinion with respect to the increase, or otherwise, of insanity in this county?—So far as my experience goes, I am not aware that there is any increase. I go through the county a good deal, I visit different parts of it, and I am not aware that insanity has been on the increase. The attention of persons of late, since the asylum was opened, is directed to cases of insanity more than heretofore, in consequence of the desire to induce the relatives of lunatics to forward them to the asylum. The gentlemen of the county now turn their attention more to the finding out of cases, in order to have them sent to the asylum; whereas, practically speaking, before the establishment of this asylum, by reason of the distance of the Limerick asylum, we were deprived of the benefit of any such establishment. The expense of sending to Limerick was so great, and there was so much trouble and difficulty in writing for orders, and communicating with Limerick and with magistrates and constables, and in getting doctors' certificates, the result was, that practically, the state of things led to the depriving this county of the benefit of the asylum. The opening of this asylum has been of the greatest possible advantage to the county.

Extent of insanity
in the county.

11140. Can you explain why the infirmary has not been used?—At a meeting of the Board here, I understood the reason it was not used was that there was not a sufficient number of cases to occupy it. The doctors, of course, know best about these matters; but the opinion of the Governors was, that there were so few cases fit for an infirmary, that they would not be justified in imposing upon the county the expense of an additional staff for the infirmary. We did not think it led to any grievance in the asylum. In consequence of the great expense for this building, an expense incurred without the assent of the gentry of the county, or without any communication with them, the taxation upon the county has been enormous; and the Governors have, therefore, been trying to keep the working expenses as low as they could, of course, always taking care to provide for the patients in a suitable manner. If an infirmary is required, I think the one we have ought to be used. I have heard the objection stated, that it is a building detached from the house, and in reference to that I would suggest that we should not be subjected to any more outlay for building, by the erection of another infirmary attached to the asylum, which would render the present infirmary useless. The Governors feel strongly against any more expense being incurred in the way of building, which would be charged to the county.

11141. How does it appear that the large cost incurred in the original erection of the asylum is any very valid reason for not using a portion of the building considered essential?—It is no reason why the building should not be used if it is necessary. You have asked whether the attention of the Governors was directed to the fact of the infirmary not being used, and Dr. Murphy stated that he was not aware the question was ever brought before the Board. I wish to say my opinion of the Governors is, that if it was shown to us that it was essential for the benefit of the patients that this infirmary should be used, we would provide an additional staff for the purpose. At the same time, we have always impressed upon the officers to try and keep down the expense as much as possible, in consequence of the enormous charge already upon the county for the asylum.

11142. Does your information bear out the statement which has been made, that no communication ever took place between the gentry of this county and the Government, with regard to the erection of this asylum?—My information bears me out in this, that except with reference to the site, there was no communication. The Grand Jury and the gentry of this county were communicated with as to that, but with reference to the plans or the estimates of the cost of the building, the gentry of the county were never consulted in any way whatsoever, until the asylum was given up to us and it has been the subject of almost universal complaint amongst the gentry of the county, that such an enormous sum as £43,000 or £44,000 should have been expended upon a building to contain 200 patients without their ever having consulted on the subject, or as to the mode of carrying out the object in view, and particularly when we have here at the opposite side of the road, and within a few yards, a poorhouse built for £10,000, to accommodate 800 persons, and which, during the famine, contained nearly 4,000. With such a fact before us, it is considered a grievance of a serious character that the ratepayers should be taxed to the extent of £44,000 to provide accommodation for 200 lunatics, and that without even consulting those who pay.

11143. If the Governors desired to have a new building now, would they be allowed to erect it themselves, or would the Board of Works undertake it?—The Board are now doing the new works, and with respect to these we have cause of complaint, because suggestions we made as to the expenditure of money, have been totally disregarded by the Board of Works, or by the members of the Government in connexion with them. As you have heard stated, when it was proposed to apply the money, awarded to us under the report of the Commissioners of 1855, in a particular way as we thought best upon consideration here for the benefit of the asylum, our suggestions in that respect were totally disregarded. You asked whether complaints were made from the Governors to the Board of Works during the progress of the building, or whether any remonstrance was addressed to them; on that subject I wish to state, that this being a new district, and a new asylum, no Board of Governors existed during the progress of the building, and there was no one who could remonstrate or complain, unless some county gentleman wished to volunteer. In other places, where Boards of Governors existed, there was also an already existing asylum of some sort, and in those places, I believe, the Board of Works were in communication with the existing Boards of Governors respecting the new asylums that were erected. The Board of Governors here, however, came first into existence when the building was completed, and we then did remonstrate as to alterations required, and also as to the great expense incurred without the sanction of the gentry of the county, or without communication with the Grand Jury.

11144. You have read the resolution of the Board of Governors proposing to exclude idiots from the asylum; are you aware that resolution is not in accordance with the regulations of the Privy Council for the government of lunatic asylums?—I am not.

11145. Be kind enough to read regulation number four?—I have read the regulation, and I do not consider it is quite inconsistent with our resolution, because we have never decided here, nor did we ever put forward the opinion that idiots are not admissible. It was only in order to render available as long as possible the accommodation in the asylum for the more pressing class of patients that we recommended the Boards of Guardians not to forward to the asylum harmless idiots at that time, because we calculated on requiring the room that would be occupied by them for other cases in which it might be hoped a cure would be effected. I am almost certain I heard one of the Inspectors who attended here state, and I am certain that it was the opinion of the Board of Governors, that in admissions to the asylum, we should always consider most and give a preference to the cases of persons likely to be cured. The rule to which you have referred me states that idiots are admissible as well as others, and our object in adopting the resolution I have read was, not to have idiots sent in as a general rule by the Boards of Guardians, inasmuch as the asylum might be crowded to such an extent as to render it impossible to admit curable cases. We did not lay down the rule against the admission of idiots, and idiots who were not in workhouses were never refused admission here, because they were such; on the contrary, we consider idiots entitled to admission; but we did not want to get all the idiots of the county sent in upon us at once from the workhouses. The resolution to which I have referred was adopted in 1853, before the institution was long working, and we were then afraid that if all those idiots came in upon us in a batch, there would be no room for the patients who could be cured and restored to their families and friends.

11146. The ground assigned in the resolution for recommending that the idiots be retained in the workhouses is that of economy?—Yes; that is one ground, and also with the view to retaining the existing accommodation for curable cases of lunacy.

11147. But the contingency proposed to be provided against, of the accommodation being very much pressed upon, has never arisen in this asylum?—It never arose; but at that time in 1853, I take it for granted, the Governors were afraid of an overcrowding of the asylum.

11148. In reference to that resolution, I may ask you, have you formed any opinion as to whether or not workhouses are proper places for idiots to be retained in?—I am an ex-officio member of several poor law boards in this county—of four of them; and I frequently visit them, and I have seen a class of healthy, able-bodied idiots in those workhouses, and they appeared to me to get on very well, and not to require any special treatment in a medical point of view. On that point I am not competent to give any opinion respecting them; but as an ordinary guardian it appeared to me they might remain in those workhouses with advantage.

11149. Are you aware whether any special attendants are provided for the care of lunatics in workhouses?—I am not aware that there are any special attendants, but I have remarked that the idiots appeared to have been very much looked after from motives of kindness or humanity—from that kind feeling which appears to exist out of doors amongst the poorer classes towards persons of weak minds. I have seen the paupers apparently looking after them and taking care of them.

11150. Are you aware, on the other hand, that they have occasionally been subjected to ill treatment at the hands of other paupers?—I have not heard that; but, as you direct my attention to it, I think it likely, if there was an idiot of a particular class causing merriment,

Question of the admission of idiots from Workhouses.Detention of lunatics in Work-

or amusement, he might be worried. I would say that could be hardly avoided, for we see out of doors persons of that class very often annoyed by boys and girls. The discipline of a workhouse establishment may tend to prevent that. With respect to the erection of another asylum for incurables in the province, I am not aware how it would bear or operate in a medical point of view; but, on the part of the Governors, so far as I have heard them express their opinions, I would press upon the Commissioners that nothing could exceed the strong feeling of opposition they have to any further buildings being erected for such a purpose, after such an enormous sum has been already expended upon this asylum, which they think could be made available for the incurable lunatics existing in the county. I have no doubt there would be great opposition to any further building, or any further staff, even for the province; for we would, of course, have to pay our share towards it. You see the size of this house, and it appears to me quite as a matter of course that accommodation could be obtained here for 100 patients above what the building was calculated to contain. With respect to the appointment of Governors, and the questions you asked me on that subject, I have now before me a list of the Governors of this asylum, numbering twenty-eight, chosen from all parts of the county; and, on looking over it, I can say, from my own personal knowledge, that not more than eleven out of the twenty-eight have ever attended. I may observe, in relation to the appointment of superior officers, such as the manager, who may be selected from any part of Ireland, that if the Governors were empowered to elect persons to those offices, the gentlemen who do not usually attend would come in to vote for particular candidates on the occasions when offices of such value were to be disposed of. To avoid any difficulty on that subject, and to guard against any supposition that the right man was not chosen for the right place, I think it might be better to leave, as at present, the appointment of the superior officers with the Government. At the same time, I think the observations as to local control that have been made cannot in my opinion, be too fully attended to.

James Bland Hewson, Esq., J.R., sworn and examined.

11151. How long have you been a Governor of this asylum?—For the last three or four years.

11152. Have you been a constant attendant?—When I am in the county, I constantly attend.

11153. What is your opinion as to the manner in which the Governors are now appointed; do you consider the power of appointment should be left with the Lord Lieutenant?—I do.

11154. Have you ever considered whether it would be advisable to give a representative character to the Board by allowing local bodies to nominate?—I have never been able to see how that could be effectually carried out. I agree in the observation Mr. Leahy has made, that it would be desirable if, from time to time, gentlemen resident in the vicinity of the institution were appointed Governors; and as to appointing Governors generally throughout the county, I do not see the least use in it, because they do not attend, nor could they be expected to attend, living as they do at such distances from the asylum. The great object, I think, would be to secure a body of respectable persons in the neighborhood to attend here, so as to prevent the business of the institution from falling into arrear, as sometimes happens from the non-attendance of a sufficient number of Governors.

11155. I believe portions of the county are upwards of forty miles from the asylum?—Certainly, and more.

11156. Do you desire to see any alteration in the manner in which the funds for the maintenance of the institution are raised?—I do not see how they could be more fairly charged.

11157. Do you think the chargeability of the lunatics could, with more propriety and fairness, be fixed on electoral divisions or unions, or remain upon the county at large?—I think it ought to remain upon the county at large.

11158. With regard to the chief medical officers at present appointed by the Executive Government, would you leave the power to appoint with the Lord Lieutenant?—I certainly would; I do not see any better mode of appointing.

11159. Do you think the appointment of matron, storekeeper, and so on, should be left to the Executive Government?—I think those appointments might, perhaps, with more propriety, be confided to the Governors. They are much better able, I should say, to judge from a personal examination of the parties, on seeing them, as to their fitness for those offices, and from their general knowledge of the parties.

11160. I presume you consider the asylum is at present fully adequate to the wants of the district?—It is more than adequate at present. The asylum was built to accommodate 250 patients, giving a very large allowance of room. There are not more than 170, or from that to 180, in the house; and I believe there is a ready reception for every person considered at all a proper subject for admission.

11161. Do you concur in the opinion expressed, that there is no real increase of lunacy in the county of late years?—I have no means of forming any opinion on that subject; but, so far as my observation goes, I think there is no increase.

11162. What is your opinion as to the Inspectors of Lunatics being members of the Board of Governors, and voting in the proceedings?—I should prefer that their part in the proceedings of the Board was precisely analogous to that of Poor Law Inspectors at Boards of Guardians, to advise and offer suggestions.

11163. With regard to the control hitherto exercised by the Board of Works, would you propose that should continue, or that the Governors should be at liberty to erect their own buildings?—I think the Governors would be totally incompetent to do any thing of that sort; I think it would be impossible for them to work out the system.

11164. Do not the Grand Jurors build the gaols under their own inspection?—They do, under the inspection of the County Surveyor. I should say, if the Board of Governors were to be intrusted with such a duty as that, it would necessitate the creation of a staff under them of professionals, persons fit for such duties. They could not otherwise be fairly made responsible for the due execution of the work; and I do not see any advantage in incurring that expense, when there is a Board of Works at present in existence, whose duty it is to look after those things.

11165. Are you favourable, or otherwise, to the admission of paying patients?—I am favourable to the admission of paying patients.

11166. Upon a fixed or graduated scale?—Upon a scale proportioned to the means of the parties. I believe we got permission from the Lord Lieutenant to admit paying patients; but previous to admitting them we have always entered into a very close investigation of their means, and the means of their families to support them, and our plan has been to require a payment in proportion to what we ascertain to be the means of the parties.

11167. On what grounds do you think it would be better to leave the appointment of the chief officers of the asylum with the Executive rather than confer it on the Board of Governors?—In order to avoid the canvassing or the rivalry that would arise in the latter case. I think bad feeling and great dissatisfaction, and even distrust, would be created in the county if, when one of those offices was to be filled up, there was canvassing amongst the Governors scattered over the county, who would then come in and vote, although they never attended except upon such occasions. Those gentlemen would come in, I think, to support persons for whom they were interested; and I think their coming on such occasions and acting in the management of affairs then, would create a great deal of distrust and dissatisfaction.

11168. Are you aware the surgeons of the county infirmaries are appointed by the local Boards of Governors of the infirmaries?—I am not aware of that. What I mean with regard to my last answer is, that it would be desirable to avoid as much as possible having any kind of personal interest in being a Governor of the institution such as having patronage; and I am sure there would be greater confidence in officers appointed by the Government, who, I presume, would be quite impartial between all the candidates.

11169. You do not think it would be well to hold out any inducement, beyond the mere performance of duty, to gentlemen to become Governors of the asylum?—I should think not. No man is compelled to be a Governor of the institution; and I presume, if a gentleman seeks the appointment, he does so from a disinterested desire to benefit the county.

11170. As a general principle, do you think it is a wholesome state of things to leave to the central authority that portion of the duty which may be considered irksome to local parties?—I do not see that any person who undertakes a public office has any reason to complain of the irksomeness of the office; he is bound to discharge the duties of the position he has undertaken; but, as I understand the question with regard to the appointment of the officers, it is more a privilege than an irksome duty. Personally, one would rather have the patronage of these situations; but I do not think it would be so well for the interests of the institution that individuals residing in the immediate locality should have the power of appointing.

11172. Do you not think it would be a good principle that the parties who have to pay officers should have the power to elect them; I mean as a general principle?—Yes; but I do not think the Governors should, in that case, be the persons having the appointment. The Governors in their individual capacity no doubt pay their quota of the taxation; but not being elected they do not represent the general ratepayers. I wish to state that, in my opinion, the duties of the Governors of this institution ought to be better defined. I have endeavoured, as far as I possibly could, to learn what my duties as a Governor are, from the rules of the Privy Council, which have been published from time to time, and which I think are exceedingly defective. There is one I would instance; it is the practice—and I think a most salutary and desirable practice—that the resident physician of this institution should have leave of absence for a certain period of the year, for the purpose of recreation and health, and I cannot see any rule on the subject. The manager of the institution is in the habit of applying to the Governors for that permission, which they have always, of course, granted him with the greatest pleasure; but I do not think that according to the rules, as they stand at present, they have the power of giving that permission. The only rule that can be said to apply is that stating that he is not permitted to sleep a night out of the institution without the permission of the Governors; but it is very questionable whether that can be construed into giving a power to the Governors to grant him leave of absence for a month or six weeks. I am clearly of opinion that it is for the interest of the institution itself that any officer who gives such constant attendance here as the manager does, should have leave of absence every year for the purpose of recreation; and being of that opinion, I think it desirable that some provision should be made for the appointing of some person to reside here, and discharge his duty during his absence. The practice now is, to have the visiting physician undertake the responsibility of the establishment during the absence of the resident physician. That is not enough. The visiting physician does not reside upon the premises, and we know how very particular the rules are with regard to having some central authority resident in the house; and it so happens that during the absence of the resident physician there is no person in the house filling a similar position; and I am of opinion that some one of the same character and position should be always here for the purpose of controlling the inferior officers.

duties and powers of

11173. What mode occurs to you of meeting that difficulty?—I suppose further taxation to pay his substitute. I do not think the payment of that substitute ought to be charged upon the resident physician; I think it ought to be provided for out of the funds of the county. That is merely with reference to one matter; but I think the duties generally of the Governors ought to be more strictly defined.

11174. You are the Established Church chaplain to this institution?—I am.

11175. How long have you held that appointment?—Just a year and a-half.

11176. What proportion of the Protestant inmates are usually in a condition to attend divine service?—There are fifteen in the house, and I have generally from ten to twelve at service; sometimes I have as many as fourteen.

Religious ministrations;

11177. Are you in the habit of addressing a discourse to them?—Yes.

11178. Do you find generally that they are attentive?—I do.

11179. From your occasional conversations with individuals, do you find they appreciate your ministrations?—I think I can say so as to some.

11180. Do you think, as regards the greater number, they would feel it to be a great deprivation if not allowed to attend divine service?—I do indeed.

11181. Have you been allowed at all times to attend in the house freely, and to discharge your duties?—Always.

11182. In the event of a patient being in an excited state, and that the manager said he did not consider it would be desirable you should visit the patient at that time, would you consider yourself debarred from visiting?—Certainly. I might say if that was continuous for any length of time I would have a wish to see the patient; I have been always asked to do so. Every possible assistance is given me in the performance of my duties.

11183. After the evidence you have given, I need scarcely ask you whether you consider such institutions as this should be left without chaplains?—I think they should not.

11184. Have you had a supply of religious books, Bibles, and prayer books?—I have not; I never applied for them. I was not aware that they would be supplied. I have supplied the inmates myself; at least I have got them prayer books. I found it difficult to get them to take care of them. It occurred to me, that the keepers should hand them to them on the Sabbath.

11185. Do you keep any journal or monthly book of the duties you perform, and the visits you make to the patients?—Yes; I enter in the Chaplain's Book, and in the Daily Statement Book, on every day that I attend. [The Chaplain's Book is produced.]

The Chaplain's book.

11186. You do not seem to enter in this book any statement as regards the result of your ministrations?—I have never done so; I was not aware till lately, of the way in which I should keep the book. I saw in one of the rules it was required I should state the numbers who attended service, distinguishing male and female.

11187. It would be desirable the fifth regulation should be more fully complied with?—I have looked to the regulation, I have heretofore overlooked it.

General Question of Chancery Lunatic.
Thomas Rice Henn,
 Esq.

*Commissioners de

11188. I believe you have acted for some years, on different occasions, as a Commissioner de Lunaticis?—I have acted since the present Lord Justice of Appeal, Mr. Blackburne, was Chancellor; he appointed me during Lord Derby's administration.

11189. You have not acted since that period under a general Commission, but under a separate Commission issued in each case?—Under a separate Commission issued in each case, I apprehend. There is a writ directed to two Commissioners, who are named in the writ; but it has been the custom, I believe, to name in all those writs, the persons who have been appointed by the Chancellor for the time being.

11190. Are the proceedings with regard to the issue of those writs, and the proceedings with regard to the courts of inquiry held under them, regulated by statute law?—I apprehend not by statute; but according to the practice of the Court of Chancery.

11191. Are the inquiries invariably conducted before a jury?—Invariably.

11192. Is that a jury of twelve, or a lesser number?—A jury of twelve always in Ireland.

Made of proceeding.

11193. Be kind enough to state the course of proceeding in the holding of those inquiries?—The course of proceeding is, that a writ is issued out of the Hanaper Office, directed to Commissioners, calling upon them to hold an inquiry as to the state of mind of the person named in the writ, and also as to the state of that person's property—and who are his heir-at-law and next of kin. It then becomes the duty of the Commissioners named in the writ to issue a precept to the sheriff, directing him to summon a jury, and that jury is either a special jury or a common jury, according as the Lord Chancellor directs. As a general rule, a special jury is summoned by the sheriff; a day is named, and the Commission of Inquiry is held in the ordinary way. The jury is sworn by the Commissioners to try, in the words of the writ, whether the person named in the writ is a person of unsound mind, so as to be incapable of managing his own affairs; and if so, when he became so; who is his heir; who are his next of kin; and what is the nature and amount of his property, both real and personal.

The writs of inquiry.

11194. Are the terms of the writs always uniform?—Always uniform; so far as I have had experience, invariably uniform. It states that the inquiry is to ascertain whether the person is an idiot, lunatic, or person of unsound mind, so as to be incapable of managing his own affairs; and it is very important, indeed, that there should be that distinction taken in the writ, for there are many cases of unsoundness, that do not fall within the legal definition of idiocy or lunacy, and which, nevertheless, involve legal incapacity.

Notice of the inquiry.

11195. What notification is made to the parties who may be interested for the lunatic, previous to the inquiry?—It is invariably required to be proved before us that notice has been served upon the alleged lunatic himself; also upon the heir-at-law and next of kin, so far as they can be ascertained or known to be in this country. The first proof given before us is, that all those notices have been served upon the parties interested in resisting or maintaining the Commission.

11196. At what period before the inquiry is it usual for such notices to be served?—Well, that depends very much upon the time fixed for the holding of the Commission after the issue of the writ. The only answer I can make to that is this, that we always give direction to have notices served in sufficient time to enable the parties to be duly prepared with defenses, if necessary, or to instruct counsel to attend for the different parties who wish to be represented at the inquiry. I can only answer, in a general way, that sufficient notice is given. As a general rule, from a week to ten days' notice is always given.

11197. Those Commissions usually originate in petitions to the Lord Chancellor?—Invariably originate in petitions to the Chancellor; generally speaking, presented to the Chancellor by the next of kin, or somebody deeply interested in the welfare of the alleged lunatic.

11198. Do you think that, practically, sufficient precautions are taken to prevent those inquiries being held without due notice being given to all the parties?—So far as I know, the Lord Chancellor will never make an order unless he is satisfied that all the parties who ought to have notice of the petition have had the notice. In point of fact, we, as Commissioners, have little to do with the matter; we merely obey the writ issued from the Hanaper Office. We take care, upon the proceeding held before us, to ascertain that due notice has been given to the parties interested in the Commission. I believe the practice is, that the Chancellor will not make an order upon such a petition unless the parties interested are brought before him in the first instance.

11199. What parties have a right to appear before the court which you hold?—The next of kin have a right; the heir-at-law has a right; and, of course, the alleged lunatic himself has a right to appear by counsel or in person.

11200. I presume that the original petitioner to the Chancellor is usually in one or other

of those relations to the alleged lunatic, heir-at-law or next of kin?—So far as I know, he is generally heir-at-law or next of kin.

11201. The case may have arisen where the wife or husband may have been petitioner also?—Certainly.

11202. What is the smallest case, as regards property, which you have had to investigate, as a Commissioner?—I cannot charge my memory with any thing under £100 a-year, but I think I may safely say I recollect cases in which the property was not more than £100 a-year; I can also state, that the Chancellor himself will scarcely make an order, unless he thinks the property is sufficient to bear the expense of the Commission. According to my recollection, we seldom had a case before us in which the property was less than £100 a-year.

11203. Are you enabled to state to the Commissioners in what way the expense of a Commission de Lunatico is defrayed?—Yes, I think so; it is defrayed out of the lunatic's own property. The Lord Chancellor makes an order for taxing the costs of the Commission, and the order for payment so soon as the costs are ascertained, and they invariably come out of the lunatic's own property.

11204. Have you any idea of what the cost would be of an ordinary case?—I will tell you as far as I know myself. I think the special jury get a guinea each man for a verdict—that is twelve guineas, which, I think, is all that is given, no matter how long the inquiry lasts; but that is a matter I cannot be certain of. The Commissioners, I know, have no jurisdiction to interfere in the matter. The Commissioners get four guineas each per day; and, of course, the counsel employed in the case are paid their fees. I cannot state positively what the expenses are, except so far as what we ourselves are paid; and our fee, as fixed by the Lord Chancellor, is four guineas a day each.

11205. The costs incurred in protecting the case of a lunatic are, I believe, also defrayed out of the estate?—Defrayed out of the estate; I recollect one remarkable case, which I may mention, in which the lunatic succeeded in getting a verdict of sanity. It was an extremely bad verdict. Shortly after there was a second Commission issued with respect to the same person; and the second jury, without much difficulty, found him insane. Then the Lord Chancellor, after solemn argument as to his power so to do, ordered the expenses of the first inquiry, when the verdict was in favour of the lunatic, to be defrayed out of the lunatic's estate. That was the case of Leve Clogg, a lunatic. The first verdict was a very bad one.

11206. Can you give the Commissioners an idea of what might have been the cost of carrying out the Commission in that case?—As well as I recollect, the first inquiry lasted four days, and that was thirty-two guineas for the Commissioners alone. If I am right in saying the jury got only twelve guineas, that would make forty-four guineas. The counsel got refreshing fees every day, besides the fees on the briefs. On a rough guess, I may say the Commission could not have cost less than eighty guineas. But that is only a rough guess. That was the first case I knew of in which an alleged lunatic obtained a verdict of sanity.

11207. When a report is made to the Lord Chancellor of the insanity of a party respecting whom a Commission of Inquiry is held, are you enabled to state what is the next step that is taken?—The writ is returned to the Hancoper Office, and then, I apprehend, the course is for the parties who originally presented the petition to present another petition to the Lord Chancellor, stating the jury have found the party to be of unsound mind, so as to be incapable of managing his own affairs, and praying for a reference to one of the Masters in Chancery to ascertain what his property is. Though property is one of the subjects of our inquiry, still the verdict is not conclusive as to that subject. The Chancellor generally makes a reference to the Master to report as to the property, to appoint a committee of the person, a committee of the estate, and to settle with whom the lunatic ought to reside, so that he may receive proper treatment, due regard being had to the mental state of the party, and also to the amount of his property.

11208. Is that special reference made to any particular Master?—It is made to the Master in rotation. I am not certain as to whether it is ever made to the Receiver Master. The other three Masters take the business in turn, and the cases are distributed amongst them, according as each of them happens to be Master in rotation at the time.

11209. Are you aware whether the charges incidental to the administration of lunatics' estates are paid by fees, or if not, in what manner?—They are paid by fees.

11210. You have stated a case in which a lunatic succeeded in obtaining a verdict of sanity from the jury impanelled upon a Commission of Inquiry; supposing the lunatic to be dissatisfied with the verdict of the second jury, which found that he was insane, what opportunity has he, or have those interested for him, of traversing the proceedings?—A case of the kind has never occurred within my own actual experience.

11211. In the case of a lunatic who has been found insane by Commission in England, there is no second inquiry, I believe, in Ireland on the subject?—No; there is no second inquiry. There is a statute which regulates the transmission to this country of a transcript of the proceedings in England.

11212. You have stated that you believe a Commission of Lunacy is not usually issued by the Lord Chancellor in cases where the property would not be sufficient to bear the expense; are you enabled to state what becomes of the property of lunatics in cases where he does not direct a Commission of Inquiry?—I cannot state. By law, it remains still the property of the lunatic.

11213. From your knowledge of the country generally, would you say there is any necessity for an amendment of the law, or an amendment in the practice that exists with reference to these cases?—I would say myself, as far as my own opinion is worth any thing, that it would be more for the public advantage if every case of unsoundness of mind, whether the property was large or small, was investigated by a Commissioner who, from his experience, would be able to investigate each case properly.

11214. In disposing of the case, after the lunatic has been found insane upon a Commission of Inquiry, who is usually appointed committee of the person; is it the next of kin?—As a general rule one of the next of kin, but I do not think the rule is universal. I think the Master in Chancery has a discretion to appoint the person, whose appointment, he conceives, will conduce most to the interest of the lunatic.

11215. Who is usually appointed committee of the estate? is it the heir-at-law?—The heir-at-law, I think. I know cases, myself, in which the heir-at-law have been appointed.

11216. A lunatic, having thus come under the guardianship of the Court of Chancery, both as to his person and his estate, are you aware on what principle the allowance is made for his maintenance?—I think the principle is this: his property, so far as is necessary to conduce to his own comfort and happiness, will be applied, even to the last shilling, in providing for his wants; but at the same time every thing will depend upon the amount of his property. If his property is larger than is necessary for his comfort, of course, the difference between what is actually required for keeping him in a comfortable condition and the whole amount of his property, will be funded by the Court for the benefit of the next of kin. I have heard Lord St. Leonards say, as a general rule, that he saw no limit to the expense to be incurred for the maintenance of a lunatic, in order to secure his comfort and his happiness, except the amount of the property.

11217. In cases where the property of the lunatic is more than sufficient simply to provide for his comfort and his wants, is it usual to make a large allowance to the heir-at-law, who may be in possession of the family seat, as the committee of the estate?—Allowances are made, I am aware, by the Court to the nearest relations of the lunatic; but, so far as my experience goes, the Courts are guided by the poverty and need of the relations more than any thing else. Allowances are made to poor relations of lunatics when there is a surplus over and above what is required for the lunatic; but I do not think, so far as my experience goes, any allowance is made to the heir-at-law as such, because he is heir-at-law. As I have said, the Courts are guided more by the actual wants of the relations, and by the consideration, of what the lunatic himself would in all probability do for them if he were in his right mind.

11218. Allowances are, therefore, made to parties who, upon the death of the lunatic, would not inherit any portion of his estate?—I think not. The allowances are confined to the next of kin out of the personal estate. The savings of landed property become personal estate when funded, and go to the next of kin, those who would be entitled to take the fund among them.

11219. In cases where the allowance for the lunatic is paid over to the committee of the person to provide for his wants and secure his comfort, are you aware whether any and what securities are taken by the Court of Chancery with respect to the money so applied?—I do not know of my own knowledge, but I think recognisances are taken from the committee just in the same way that recognisances are taken from receivers. I can give you only my professional opinion as to that.

11220. Are you enabled to state whether the committee accounts directly to the Master, or whether he merely gives a receipt to the receiver for the sums paid to him?—I do not know that of my own knowledge. I know a case in which the same man is both committee of the estate and receiver; and I do not think that is an unusual practice in the Court of Chancery, that is, to appoint the same person both receiver and committee, in which case he must account to the Court as receiver.

11221. In the course of the Commissioners' investigations they have had a case brought before them of a lunatic, for whom, although there was an allowance made far beyond the cost of his maintenance at the asylum at which he had been placed by the committee, the money was not paid by the committee, and the proprietor of the asylum stated that he had no redress, as the Court of Chancery did not take any security from the committee for the proper application of the money?—I have myself a recollection that not long ago the doctor of an asylum, where a lunatic was confined, made some such statement as you mention. We stated we had nothing to do with that at all, that it was beyond our power to interfere; I do recollect some such statement having been made in a case before us.

11222. Is there any amendment of the law with reference to proceedings which come before you as Commissioners, or with reference to the issuing of Commissions like those in which you have been engaged, that you would suggest?—It has occurred to my mind, more than once, that it might be desirable to assimilate the practice in this country to what it is in England, with respect to the number of jurors; to have the number fixed by the Lord Chancellor, and a verdict from not less than twelve. In that case of Clegg, a lunatic, the first verdict, as I have already stated, was an extremely bad one. The jury found Mr. Clegg to be sane, when, in my opinion, and in the opinion of my brother Brady, and also of the second jury, he was insane at the time.

11223. Is it the practice in Ireland to require unanimity on the part of the twelve jurors?—It is.

11224. Has it been the practice recently to speed Commissions of inquiry in the provinces?—I think it has.

11225. How have you found that to work?—Remarkably well. I presided at one interesting and important case in Belfast, which attracted great attention there; and which I myself disposal of allowances.

Suggestions to the

think would hardly have been tried so well, unless men experienced and accustomed to the duties of such an inquiry had been sent there.

11226. Are the jurors always selected from the ordinary panel?—I believe they are selected from the ordinary panel that try all cases now, both criminal and civil. It is always a special jury, unless the Lord Chancellor directs the inquiry to be held before a common jury; that is the practice.

11227. In some cases the jury is a special jury, in others a common jury?—Yes; when the Lord Chancellor directs a common jury, a common jury is impanelled.

11228. Have you found the common juries to discharge their duty on the Commissions of inquiry as satisfactorily as special jurors?—I have. So far as my experience goes they have been just as satisfactory as the others.

11229. Do you think that a jurisdiction could properly be given to the assistant barristers of counties, with reference to the cases of lunatics having small properties, and with respect to whom Commissions are not usually issued?—I do not think there is any reason why there should not. I have never considered the question until you put it to me now; but I see no reason why the assistant barristers should not discharge a duty of the kind in cases of small property.

Justification of Assistant Barristers.

11230. From your knowledge of the country, would you say there is a considerable class of the farming population, whose means are such as would not justify the Lord Chancellor in issuing a Commission, if lunacy was alleged in those cases?—I should say so.

11231. You are aware, that by the existing law a provision is made in district asylums for pauper lunatics, and that with regard to persons of property, the Lord Chancellor, in the exercise of his power, issues Commissions to inquire into the sanity of the parties—do you consider that it is the proper duty of the state to cause inquiries to be made into the cases of all lunatics, although their means would not justify the expense of a Commission de lunaticis inquirendis?—I do decidedly.

Proposed extension of Lord Chancellor's controlling power in lunacy cases.

11232. What is your opinion as to the propriety of cases of single patients being brought under the control of the Court of Chancery more fully than at present—cases of lunatics who may not have been found lunatic by Commission, but may be in charge of some person for the sake of health and proper treatment, and not detained in any private lunatic asylum?—I think that if there was such an arrangement there would be greater security that such persons would be treated as they ought to be treated. We all know there have been great abuses in the treatment of lunatics; and, I think, the fact of the Lord Chancellor exercising a control over every case, would be of the greatest possible benefit to the parties under care and treatment.

11233. I believe there is no legal visitor appointed by the Lord Chancellor to visit lunatics as is the case in England?—Not that I am aware of.

11234. Neither is there a medical visitor?—Not that I am aware of, further than that Dr. Nugent and Dr. Hatchell have certain duties to perform in that way; the exact amount of them I do not know. I am sure there is no legally authorized visitor, save that the Chancellor himself occasionally visits. Lord St. Leonard, when he was Chancellor here, constantly visited private asylums.

11235. The duties discharged by the Inspectors of Asylums, to which you refer, are those under the Private Lunatic Asylums Act, when the Chancellor directs a special visitation?—Yes.

11236. Is it your opinion, that without any particular direction for each case, there should be an annual or half-yearly inspection of each Chancery lunatic by an official person?—I think it would be most judicious that there should.

DUBLIN, 18TH DECEMBER, 1857.

Present:—Sir T. N. REDINGTON, Chairman; Dr. ANDREWS, Dr. CORRIGAN, and Mr. BARRY, Secretary.

GENERAL QUESTION OF LUNATIC POOR IN WORKHOUSES.

Alfred Power, Esq., sworn and examined.

General Question of Lunatic Poor in Workhouses.

Alfred Power, Esq.

11237. What appointment do you hold in the Poor Law Commission?—Chief Commissioner.

11238. I believe you have been connected with the administration of the Poor Law in Ireland for several years?—About fifteen years.

Arrangements in Workhouses for Lunatics.

11239. You are aware, therefore, of the arrangements made in the workhouses in Ireland for the lunatic poor?—I am.

11240. Were the workhouses first erected after the introduction of the Poor Law, generally built upon the same plan?—They were.

11241. Were any extensive arrangements made in those workhouses for lunatics?—In some of the larger workhouses there were extensive arrangements made for lunatics, and in the smaller workhouses proportionate arrangements. I believe some provision was made for lunatics in all.

11242. Having inspected those portions of the workhouses appropriated to the lunatic poor, called lunatic wards, do you consider that they were allocated more with a view to the safe custody of the lunatics, or with a view to the treatment of their lunacy?—They are connected with the hospital department in every instance. I believe that in every case they have always been considered part of the hospital department of a workhouse. I certainly never thought them at all proper places for the treatment of that class of patients, on account of the want of means for exercise, and employment, and the want of sufficient airing grounds.

11243. I believe the opinion was generally entertained that workhouses were merely temporary places of abode for lunatics, there being district asylums throughout the country?—I dare say that was the view taken of the matter and acted upon in the construction of the lunatic wards in workhouses.

Opinion of Poor Law Commissioners on the subject.

11244. Are you aware of the communication addressed by the Poor Law Commissioners on this subject, to the Guardians of the Clogheen Union, and quoted in the report of the Local Committee of 1843?—I have seen that letter; it was written before my time.

11245. Is the opinion therein expressed, entertained by the present Board of Commissioners, with reference to the propriety of workhouses being made places of detention for the lunatic poor?—That has been always the opinion of the Board of Commissioners, however constituted at any time, and there have been, from time to time, communications with the guardians on the subject; I recollect one particularly, in the year 1845.

Medical charge of Lunatics in Workhouses.

11246. Are the patients in the lunatic wards of a workhouse considered to be under the charge of the doctor, as regards dietary?—They are. They are placed by the regulations of the Commissioners under the special charge of the medical officer as to their dietary.

11247. Are you aware whether lunatics have been detained for any considerable time in workhouses without being removed to asylums?—I am aware that has been the case, but I am not aware of any particular instance having been brought under our notice.

Cases of Idiots.

11248. Does your objection to lunatics being detained in workhouses apply to perfectly imbecile cases?—I think not to all cases; I believe that some of the imbecile cases, those of harmless idiots, such as can safely mix with the other classes in a workhouse, may properly do so. I have not, in my experience, known any objection arise, or any serious inconvenience occur from that source.

11249. I presume you would not be favourable to idiots being allowed to mix generally with the inmates of the workhouses in all cases?—Not in all cases; some cases should be certainly kept separate, and are kept separate from the rest of the inmates, on account of their habits and bodily weakness. There is this objection to mixing them, which may apply more or less in certain cases, that they may be exposed to be teased by the inmates, or they may be themselves an annoyance to the inmates generally; but I should think that, generally speaking, that class of patients are kindly treated; that there is a sympathy evinced for them, both by the officers and the other inmates of the house; and I am not sure whether it is not more, perhaps, for their own individual happiness and comfort to be classed with the inmates who are of sound mind than to be classed with those only of their own description.

11250. In what respect do you consider that their comfort would be greater if they were allowed to mix with the ordinary inmates of the workhouse?—I think it may be possible—I am not speaking with any confidence—I think it possible they might take more pleasure in the society of sane persons than in the society of insane persons; just as I fancy, the blind take more pleasure in the society of those who can see; but, however, that is quite another matter.

11251. Are the attendants upon lunatics in workhouses paid officers or unpaid paupers?—There is a paid nurse in almost all the considerable workhouses, and it is only in those that you will find lunatics and idiots. I think, at present, in about one-half of the most considerable of the workhouses throughout the country, only will you find any lunatics or idiots; and, as I have stated, there is in each of these establishments a paid nurse in connexion with the hospital, and that paid nurse has pauper assistants. There is seldom more than one, except in large houses. The servants who are attendants upon the hospital are, generally speaking, the attendants upon the lunatics; I think that invariably is the case. In some cases there are persons specially appointed for the duty.

11252. A paid attendant of the hospital has considerable duties to perform in attending upon the hospital as well as upon the lunatic wards?—Yes; and I do not think it a proper arrangement, where there are many lunatics.

11253. Practically speaking, are those who are constantly in attendance upon the lunatics and attending to epileptic lunatics, paupers or paid servants?—Paupers, I believe. There is a great indisposition on the part of Boards of Guardians to incur the expense of separate keepers—of proper persons, in fact, for the care of the lunatics and idiots where they do not form a large class, which is not the case, except in something like eight or ten of the largest workhouses.

11254. From returns which the Commissioners have received, of the number of insane persons in workhouses on the 1st of January, 1857, it appears that 1,707 insane persons were in the workhouses at that date; have you reason to believe that that number has since diminished or increased?—I think the return of the 1st of January, 1857, must include epileptic patients. On our weekly copy of the minutes, we have a return of two classes, lunatics and idiots, distinguishing the number who are in separate wards from the number who are classed with the other inmates generally. The total number stated on the minutes of Saturday, 7th of November last, was 1,866, of whom 737 were in separate wards, and 509 were classed with the other inmates. Comparing that with the return you show me, of the 1st January last, I am unable to form an opinion, whether the number is now more or less. I am not sure that our recent return embraces epileptic patients. [The return is delivered in.]

11255. You have stated that the lunatic wards of the workhouse are, in fact, a portion of the hospital department of the workhouse?—They are.

11256. Am I to understand from that fact, that it is possible the lunatics may be associated in the same dormitories with persons who are labouring under bodily disease?—No, they are separated; they are put into a middle position, between the male and female wards of the hospital, with separate yards.

11257. Then if such an occurrence took place as, that persons labouring under offensive disease chosen to be placed in the same department with lunatics, or persons of imbecile mind in the lunatic wards, that would be contrary to the rules of the house?—Certainly.

11258. Have you ever had occasion to communicate with a Board of Guardians with reference to the practice which prevails of exchanging lunatics from the workhouse with the asylum?—I do not recollect any instance.

11259. You are not then aware of the practice which prevails, in some cases, of exchanging troublesome lunatics in the workhouses for quiet lunatics from the asylum?—No. That is the ordinary course of business would not appear on the minutes of the guardians, unless there was some speciality attached to the case.

11260. The parties in the case I refer to, might be so changed from one place to the other by process of law without there being any decided irregularity?—I presume they might.

11261. Does the position of an insane person in the workhouse, as regards freedom of egress, at all differ from that of the ordinary pauper?—There is no provision made in the Poor Law Acts on the subject; and I believe that in point of law a great deal of difficulty has been felt, and I know the question has been raised from time to time by the Commissioners, as to whether there is a legal power to keep in the workhouse any person whomsoever that wishes to return home out of it.

11262. Then, in point of fact, a demand to be allowed to leave the house may be equally valid if made by a person of unsound mind as by a person of sound mind?—I believe so.

11263. As your opinion appears to be, that the arrangements in the workhouses, generally, for the detention of insane persons, are not sufficient, are you of opinion that the selection for or admission of any insane persons into a workhouse, should be made on special examination of each individual case?—The admission of persons into a workhouse will depend more upon the question, whether, when applying for relief, or when relief is applied for on their behalf, they are destitute persons, coming within the provision of the Poor Law Acts as such. The propriety of retaining such persons, when admitted into the workhouse, would depend, no doubt, upon the special examination and the adjudication upon each individual case.

11264. You would not, of course, contemplate a state of the law by which an insane pauper, who might be destitute, would be debarred from getting relief by admission to the workhouse in consequence of the character of his insanity?—No, I should say not.

11265. Have any applications been made to the Poor Law Commissioners for the appropriation of workhouses solely for the lunatic poor, in consequence of the reduction of destitution in the country, and the idea that some workhouses might be dispensed with?—I know only one instance of that. It was a communication we received from the Chief Secretary's Office, at the Castle, bringing before us some resolutions of the Grand Jury of the county Donegal, and also resolutions of the Grand Jury of the county Derry; which county is associated with Donegal as a district for lunatic purposes. There was no particular workhouse specified in the resolutions of the Grand Juries, but in the letter of the Under Secretary, the workhouse of Listerkenney was mentioned. The answer that we gave was similar to the answer we had given on the subject of using workhouses for militia barracks, namely, that we did not believe the state of the law would enable us to part with the workhouses for any other purpose than that for which it was built.

11206. Supposing that legal difficulty overcome by legislation, what is your opinion as to the possibility of relief being given to the lunatic asylums by appropriating some one or more workhouses in Ireland for the reception of lunatics?—We are very unwilling to part with any of the workhouses. That is the unanimous feeling of the Poor Law Commissioners on the subject. Now that the workhouses are built, and unions organized around them, we think that they ought to be kept for their present purposes, and that there are not too many for an efficient working of the Poor Law.

11207. I understand, from your last answer, then, that you consider the increase which took place in the number of workhouses, some few years ago, has not made their number larger than the good working of the Poor Law requires?—No; I think the increase in the number of unions was a most salutary measure, and I would not willingly see the area of any of the unions enlarged.

11208. Is the opinion you have expressed in any great degree influenced by the difficulty of adjusting accounts and re-distributing the charges between the present unions and the unions into which they might be resolved?—My answer is not much influenced by that, though it would be a serious difficulty if we retain the unions as now formed, and parted with some workhouses; but the mode in which I should recommend it to be done would be to break up the unions, and reform them; that, I think, would be the better plan.

11209. In point of fact, you prefer that plan to a plan by which accommodation for the union, the workhouse of which was appropriated to other purposes, might be made in the adjoining workhouse?—I would very much prefer the plan of breaking up and reforming the unions. In our Tenth Annual Report we have entered very fully into the subject of the difficulties which attend an arrangement of the kind you mention.

11270. I believe that in many of the workhouses of Ireland, at present, the number of inmates is very far below that for which they were even originally erected?—The original number for which they were erected was 90,000. The present accommodation is about 194,000, and the present number of inmates is about 50,000, or about one-fourth of the whole accommodation.

11271. Have you ever had under consideration whether portions of workhouses, not being the lunatic wards, but portions of the larger workhouses, might not be entirely set apart for lunatics of a quiet and harmless class, supposed to be incurable, belonging to different surrounding unions, or who might be sent from asylums?—I have not much considered that question. If the whole building were to be then retained under the control and management of the Board of Guardians, it would be less objectionable than if a different body were established to manage the lunatics; but in either case I think the difficulty would arise of having proper grounds for exercise, for out-door exercise is essential in the case of lunatics. The grounds belonging to workhouses are used for the recreation and amusement of the younger boys and girls, and for the employment of the boys in cultivating the land. I think, therefore, we would find great difficulty in allotting a portion of the ground for string-ports for the lunatic inmates. The portion of our new workhouses which would be cut off for that purpose would be the rear of the building, which is generally near the outside of the site. I think it would be a very difficult measure to carry out.

11272. Is not the front of the building near the outside of the site?—The front of the building in all the workhouses is very near the outside of the site, and I think it would be very difficult to deal with the wings in such a way as to cut off a portion for the lunatic inmates, and to assign sufficient exercise ground to them. There would be a further difficulty which we saw would arise at the time it was sought to use some of the workhouses for militia barracks during the war, if we had parted with any of the workhouses for that purpose. There must have been an entirely new set of officers put up; and I presume, that if we had portions of the workhouses allocated for the reception of lunatics, that would be also required, if these portions so allocated, were under the management of a different body from the Board of Guardians, and different officers from the workhouse officers.

11273. Assuming the management of the wings of the workhouse building to be appropriated to lunatics was left entirely with the Board of Guardians, and that the county chargeable with the maintenance of the lunatics would only pay, say, a certain rate per head for their maintenance, which would include a fair proportion of the establishment charges, the same difficulties, I suppose, would not arise?—Those difficulties would not arise.

11274. Has any attempt been made by the Poor Law Commissioners to appropriate any portion of the workhouse accommodation in any union to patients labouring under a particular class of disease, and coming from different unions?—We were anxious to establish an institution for the blind poor who are scattered in the several workhouses; and having, in a particular union, an auxiliary which could be used for the purpose, we tried to obtain the consent of the Boards of Guardians of the unions in one province in Ireland—Munster, and also from some adjoining parts of the province of Leinster—to make this auxiliary, to which I refer, a common establishment for the reception of blind paupers from the different unions. We went so far as to have estimates prepared, which would show the Boards of Guardians what the care of the inmates would cost; and although, in the first instance, there was apparently a great tendency to embrace the proposal, finally we could not prevail upon the Guardians to send a sufficient number to enable us to form the establishment with advantage, although there are great numbers of blind paupers distributed in the several workhouses.

11275. What was the nature of the objection generally made?—An estimate was made of the cost per head, and it amounted to about five shillings a-week, including the establishment expenses. That estimate was made at a time when provisions were very dear, during the war. The cost, I believe, was the ground of objection; and I think there was also considerable doubt on the part of the proposed contributing unions, as to whether the institution would be managed properly by the particular Board of Guardians who were to have charge of it, it being an auxiliary to their workhouse.

11276. Do you think an objection of that character would arise in the case of lunatics if they were not maintained out of the poor rate?—I do not think the objection would arise. I may here state that there are several auxiliaries in Ireland—some still in the hands of the Boards of Guardians, and some occupied temporarily by the Ordnance Department for military purposes—extensive buildings, which might possibly be made available for the reception of lunatic paupers. In the county Limerick there are two. There is the Boher-bouy Auxiliary in the city of Limerick. I wish it to be understood that, in mentioning these places, I am not recommending them to be appropriated for lunatics, for I am not sufficiently well acquainted with them to enable me to do so. There is the auxiliary workhouse in the Croom union, in the same county, the Ballingarry Auxiliary which has accommodation for about 900 inmates. In the Cashel union, the Castlelake Auxiliary has accommodation for 700, and that building is still in the hands of the Guardians, as is also the Ballingserry Auxiliary. I would also mention the Castleland Auxiliary, in the Trillick union. There are, I think, on the whole, about six or eight such cases.

11277. When you speak of some of these auxiliaries being occupied by other departments, you mean they are occupied by them as tenants of the Boards of Guardians of the unions?—Yes.

11278. I believe there remained in the Hardwicke Cells attached to the House of Industry, in the city of Dublin, a considerable number of lunatics, even after the passing of the Poor Law Act?—Yes.

11279. Have those lunatics since been removed elsewhere?—They have.

11280. Do you know why it was those lunatics were not removed to the District Asylum at an earlier period?—I presume there was no room for them. There used to be received from the District Asylum, from time to time, innumerable lunatics, both in the Hardwicke Cells and in the Island-bridge Asylum.

11281. In point of fact, instead of there being accommodation for the House of Industry lunatics in the District Asylum at Richmond, the Governors of that asylum were obliged to make use of the accommodation which the House of Industry building afforded?—Yes, they did so since the year 1845.

11282. Are you aware, whether or not, the fact of the House of Industry lunatics being maintained out of a Parliamentary grant, and not out of the local rate, was the reason why they were not transferred to the Richmond Asylum?—I am not aware of that.

ACCOMMODATION FOR LUNATICS IN WORKHOUSES OR ASYLUMS.

George Wilkinson, Esq., sworn and examined.

Accommodation for Lunatics in Work-
houses or Asylums.
George Wilkinson,
Esq.

11283. I believe you were architect to the Poor Law Commissioners in Ireland at the time the Poor Law was introduced, and for some years subsequently?—Yes, till about two years ago.

11284. Were the first workhouses erected in Ireland erected according to your plans?—All erected according to my plans.

Provision in Workhouses for quiet
inmates.

11285. What was the extent of provision made in the workhouses for lunatic paupers?—There was no provision whatever in the original plans; it was an after provision.

11286. Previous to the workhouses being opened for the reception of paupers, were the additions you refer to made?—Yes, they were made in nearly all of them.

11287. Was that accommodation so provided, intended merely as a place of safe custody for those who might become lunatic in the workhouses, or was it with the view of becoming the permanent residence of lunatics?—No; it was intended to relieve the other inmates from a disagreeable class of persons, a few being found in each establishment. It was never thought they were proper places for them. They were, however, the only places. There was no room in any other institution.

11288. Have you ever considered whether the workhouses which are now comparatively unoccupied could, to any extent, be converted into places for the detention of a quiet class of lunatics?—I think they could, for the idiotic and harmless class of lunatics.

11289. My questions will refer only to the quiet and orderly class. Would you see any difficulty in being able to convert, say, a wing of a workhouse into a suitable place for the detention of that class of imbecile and quiet paupers?—There is no practical difficulty.

11290. Would any difficulty arise with reference to the provision of airing-courts?—I think that would be the greatest difficulty, to keep the different classes separated.

11291. I believe most of the workhouses have considerable grounds attached?—Well, not a great deal. The ground seldom exceeds five or six acres in extent. There are instances where there have been additional grounds taken for agricultural purposes.

11292. You are acquainted with the general designs and plans of the lunatic asylums which have been recently erected in Ireland?—Yes, I know them.

Erection of new buildings near existing Asylums for quiet inmates;
the cost.

11294. Supposing it became desirable to provide new and distinct buildings on the asylum grounds, though not connected with the asylum, for a quiet and orderly class of inmates, do you think they could be erected for less than the asylums cost?—Considerably less.

11295. State, generally, what has been about the average cost of asylums built within the last ten years?—Those erected within the last ten years have cost, according to official reports, from £100 to £140 per head.

11296. What would be the cost of buildings suited for the class of lunatics I refer to?—I think accommodation could be provided on the sites of the present asylums for from £30 to £40 per head. The sites are very large. They fitted up some places at Richmond for about £20 per head. They increased the accommodation there for about forty additional patients. That was done by appropriating existing buildings, and making the necessary alterations in them.

11297. Supposing a totally new building to be erected, what would be the cost for such a class?—Between £30 and £40 per head. A very large proportion of the inmates of the present building are persons who would be sufficiently well provided for in buildings costing between £30 and £40 per head. I make that statement from what I have seen of them.

Question of associated dormitories.

11298. Considering that a large number of the lunatics in the asylums, who are of a quiet and orderly class, sleep in associated dormitories, would not the long dormitories of a workhouse, with very little alteration, be available for the reception of this class of lunatics?—Still I apprehend you could not use them for that class of persons without having the means for occasional restraint. There are some lunatics also, of very dirty habits. At Island-bridge there was the greatest difficulty in satisfying the medical gentleman as to the arrangements for that particular class of people.

Island-bridge
Asylum.

11299. The class who were detained at Island-bridge, I believe, included all descriptions of lunatics, violent as well as quiet?—There were very few violent lunatics there originally, but the number was afterwards increased by the introduction of a number of violent cases. It was supposed that, as soon as some of the inmates died, the comfort of the others would be increased; but the Governors kept up the number to the full complement, by sending in additional cases. The Island-bridge Asylum was for the relief of the House of Industry Asylum.

11300. Island-bridge had been a barrack?—Yes, it was a barrack.

11301. I presume the cost per head of providing a building, such as you refer to, would diminish according as the number increased for which the building was erected?—Certainly.

11302. Is it your opinion, that if the wing of a workhouse were to be fitted up as an asylum to include all cases, that then the expense of the necessary alterations would be very little less than the cost of a new building erected on the site of any of the present asylums?—I think the cost would be very little less.

11303. If a class of lunatics were selected, of quiet and orderly habits, who could be associated together, would not then the cost of providing accommodation in the wings of the workhouse be much less than the cost of erecting a new building?—Yes. You would simply treat them as pauper inmates, if you reduce them to that condition, because they would cost very little more than the others. If they were that class of people that you could treat simply as paupers, they could occupy the wards as well as the other inmates, almost, and be placed under the ordinary discipline of the establishment. But amongst the quiet and imbecile classes the necessity for separation seems to be as great, with regard to dirty patients, as amongst the violent class. In the new establishment there is more difficulty in keeping up the order and system of the place, and making it less offensive to the other inmates, because of the dirty patients, than because of the violent patients. Of course, the wings of workhouses, having one or two stories, would admit of a classification if subdivided. That would meet the difficulties I refer to. In the Dunsinghilla workhouse, for instance, you would not get much accommodation; but some of the workhouses are very large in the wings. For instance, in Navan and Trim additional buildings were erected for school children; they are quite distinct altogether from the old building, and they might be made available for the purpose you speak of.

GENERAL QUESTION OF CHANCERY LUNACY.

11304. I believe you acted for some time as secretary to the Lord Chancellor of Ireland?—For between five and six years.

11305. You have been also engaged on Commissions de lunaticis inquirendo?—I am one of the Commissioners, and have been so for nearly three years.

11306. You are conversant, therefore, with the course of proceeding with reference to Commissions of lunacy in Chancery?—Yes.

11307. Can you give the Commissioners any idea of the expense usually attendant upon taking out a Commission of lunacy?—I can, and for that purpose I have brought with me a bill of costs, which has been taxed and paid in a case where the Commission was unopposed, and, therefore, the proceedings were in the simplest form. I find from that bill of costs that the preliminary expenses attendant on the application for the Commission, amounted to £9 18s. 10d.; that the cost of speeding the Commission down to the return of the inquisition, amounted to £47 5s. 11d., of which five guineas were for the sheriff's fees, eight guineas for the Commissioners, and twelve guineas for the jury.

11308. Was the Commission in that case held in Dublin or in the country?—The Commission in that case was held in Dublin.

11309. If held in the country, of course the expenses would vary according to the distance?—The only expense that would vary much, would be that of the Commissioners. They receive four guineas each, per day, in Dublin, and ten guineas each for the first day in the country, and five guineas each for every day after. The solicitor, of course, would have additional travelling expenses. I have not separated the other items of costs from the general bill of costs, which is made up to the appointment of the committee, when the Chancellor's jurisdiction was made complete. The whole bill of costs in that case as taxed, amounted to £113 17s. 10d.; but, of course, the amount would vary in every case according to the number of witnesses, and from various other causes.

11310. Can you state whether the proceedings in that case, after the finding of the Commission, were also unopposed?—I cannot. There was no opposition down to the appointment of the committee.

11311. Are you able to state what amount of property was involved in that case?—No; the bill of costs does not show it.

11312. When the Commission has been returned to the Lord Chancellor, and that there is a finding of lunacy against the party, is it a matter of course that a committee should be appointed for the property as well as for the person of the lunatic?—Yes; and very commonly it is one and the same person who is appointed committee of both person and property.

11313. On whose application is the allotment made of the sum to be allowed for the support of the lunatic?—On the application of whoever has the carriage of the proceedings; that is generally the same person who applies for the issuing of the Commission. The person who originally institutes the proceedings, generally has the carriage of them all through, unless for some particular reason it is withdrawn from him, and given to somebody else.

11314. In cases where the position of the family of the lunatic, and the state of their property would justify it, is it the practice to make an allowance out of the estate far beyond what is required to be applied for the wants of the lunatic?—In the case of a large property, it is very common, where there are numerous relatives, to allow a certain amount for the lunatic, and beyond that to allocate a large portion of the surplus income to the support of the next of kin, if they require it. The allowance given for the lunatic himself is intended to be for his support, and not for the support of anybody else.

11315. What security is taken that the money so allotted for the use of the lunatic will be really applied to meeting his wants and necessities?—There is, practically, no security. The Chancellor requires the committee of the person of every lunatic to make him a return once in every year, accompanied by a medical certificate, showing the state of health and general condition of the lunatic at the time, but beyond that, the Chancellor has little or no means of knowledge.

11316. I presume the proper officers in Chancery are always informed of the locale of the lunatic?—The Master in Chancery, in whose office the proceedings may be carried on, or the Chancellor occasionally, if the case comes by way of appeal, or in any other way before him, makes an order directing where the lunatic shall reside, and with whom he shall reside; and no person, without applying for a new order, has any authority to take the lunatic to reside anywhere else than is directed, and doing so is contempt of Court.

11317. When you say "anywhere else," do you mean out of Ireland, out of the jurisdiction, or from one part of Ireland to another?—I mean both.

11318. Am I to understand that when a committee of the person is first appointed, an order is made directing where the lunatic shall reside?—Yes; the first order made after the appointment of the committee is one of reference to the Master to inquire and report the nature and amount of the property of the lunatic, where and with whom the lunatic shall reside, what may be the fit and proper sum to allow for the maintenance of the lunatic, and the Master may state any other circumstance he thinks proper.

11319. It has been stated to the Commissioners that there are cases of Chancery lunatics detained in private asylums, the stipulated pension for whom has not been paid by the committee of the person, and that there are no means of redress. What precaution does the Court of Chancery take to secure that the sum allowed for the maintenance of the lunatic, and out of which this payment ought to be made, is properly applied?—If the keeper of the lunatic asylum is aware of the sum allowed for the support of the lunatic, and that he has not been paid, it is his duty to bring it under the notice of the Master in Chancery.

11320. By legal proceedings at his own cost?—On passing the committee's account, which is passed once in each year, the committee takes credit for the sums paid, and is obliged to produce vouchers to vouch each item; and it is a matter then of no expense for the person having a claim for the maintenance of the lunatic, to come before the Master and state the facts.

11321. If £300 a-year is allowed for the maintenance of a lunatic, and that the lunatic is placed in a private lunatic asylum where he will be kept for £150 a-year, would the receipt of the manager of the asylum for that £150 a-year be required to be produced before the Master?—I do not believe, in point of practice, it would. The receipt of the committee is generally taken by the Master as sufficient—that is, the receipt for the sum paid on account of maintenance.

11322. May it not happen that the proprietor of a private asylum would be indisposed to make an application adverse to the party who placed the lunatic in his charge?—No doubt.

11323. In cases where a committee is appointed for the property as well as for the person, is the committee of the property obliged to account for the rents and receipts annually?—Yes.

11324. He would be allowed, I presume, to take credit for the payment of the sum allowed for the maintenance of the lunatic, and the receipt of the committee of the person would be sufficient, and, therefore, the further receipt of the manager of the asylum would not be required?—Yes.

11325. You have spoken of a report, as to the state of the lunatic's health, which was required to be made; is that a report of the medical person in whose charge the lunatic was placed?—It is required to be a report of some medical person, but not of any particular medical person. In some instances the Chancellor has given special directions that a medical person, naming him, shall visit the lunatic and report; but he does not do so in all cases.

11326. Then I am to understand there is absolutely brought annually before the Chancellor a medical statement of the condition of the lunatic?—Yes.

11327. Are there any Chancery inspectors of lunatic cases?—No.

11328. Do you consider there would be any objection to an arrangement by which public officers, such as the Inspectors of Lunatics, or the Commissioners of Lunacy in England—if such a system was introduced here—would be obliged to visit periodically the Chancery lunatics, and make a private report to the Chancellor?—Quite the contrary.

11329. Do you think it would be attended with advantage, and that there would be no fear of objections on the part of families to such an arrangement?—I do not think too much supervision can be exercised over persons in that condition.

11330. I understand you to consider that the same principle which requires the Chancellor, acting for the State, to take charge of all lunatics, would justify that further care which the inspection would be likely to insure to them?—Yes, the same principle.

11331. Are you aware whether it has been the practice of the Lord Chancellor to issue commissions to magistrates or others in the country to inquire into the lunacy of persons?—It was the practice formerly, when Commissions of Lunacy were to be sped in the country.

to direct them to a barrister, if one could be found in the neighbourhood, and two magistrates. Latterly the Chancellor has directed those commissions to the permanent Commissioners, and not to the magistrates.

11332. Do you think that in cases of small farmers, whose incomes may be small, but comparatively large as regards their condition in society, it would be any advantage if their cases were inquired into by some local authority, such as the assistant barrister?—Do you mean to have Commissions of Inquiry held before them?

11333. Yes?—My own opinion is, that there should be one tribunal—one special tribunal for investigating all cases of persons of unsound mind, no matter what their condition may be.

11334. Do you think those experienced in such inquiries are more competent to conduct them than those who might occasionally be called upon to investigate such cases, as, for instance, assistant barristers?—I am in favour of having but one tribunal, not for that reason only, but for others also. I conceive that if the assistant barrister is to be the sole judge, without the intervention of a jury, that that would be too great a power to intrust to any assistant barrister, or to any one individual. If he is to call in the aid of a jury, I consider that tribunal of investigation—a jury, as at present constituted—is not one that ought to be constituted in such cases. I think the system might be amended very much.

11335. What course do you then suggest, objecting, in the one case, to an assistant barrister acting without a jury, and in the other case, to having a jury at all?—If the Commissioners allow me, I will state what I consider my objection to juries in such cases.

11336. We will be obliged to you for doing so?—As well as my experience has enabled me to form an opinion upon the subject, my objections are these:—In a very plain case, where the individual who is the subject of inquiry is, beyond all manner of question, out of his mind, a jury is cumbersome, and is a needless and useless expense. In the case of a person, the question of whose lunacy it may be a matter of difficulty to determine, I have found, in such cases, the calling in the assistance of twelve men, such as usually constitute the juries summoned—men who, from their education, their habits of life, and their pursuits, are totally unacquainted with the subject respecting which they are about to investigate—is, in fact, calling in the aid of a tribunal not well constituted or qualified to come to a right conclusion upon the subject of the inquiry; and I have seen juries exhibit such cunning before juries so constituted, that the jurors have refused to find that they were persons of unsound mind; in fact, they found them to be persons of sound mind, although, as events subsequently proved, they were wholly incapable of managing their own affairs. There is one very remarkable case, illustrative of this statement, which occurred to Mr. Henn and myself—the case of Mr. —. Mr. Henn has told me he mentioned that case to the Commissioners, and I shall not, therefore, repeat the facts. In two other cases I remember (one, a case in Belfast, of a Miss —; and the other, a case in Dublin, of the Rev. Mr. —) the Commissioners had very great difficulty in bringing the juries to the conclusion that these individuals were of unsound mind, although, beyond all manner of question, on the medical evidence, and on the appearance of the parties, such was the fact. For those reasons I think a jury not as good a tribunal as could be desired to investigate cases of the kind; but to provide a substitute is a very difficult matter. There are two suggestions occur to me; one of them, I understand, was mentioned by Mr. Henn, namely, that the number of jurors should be increased, and that an unanimous finding should be required from twelve of the number. That, to a certain extent, is open to the objections I have stated respecting the persons who form the jury not being accustomed to such investigations. The other suggestion I would like the liberty of making would involve a very extensive alteration in the management of lunatics under the Court of Chancery; but as the Commissioners have asked me, I will state it. I consider that the control which the Chancellor exercises over lunatics is exceedingly imperfect. Nominally, he is the guardian of all persons of unsound mind; in reality, he is only guardian of those whose property is of sufficient amount to warrant the expenses of the Court of Chancery being incurred in its management. I am of opinion, that if a permanent tribunal were established for managing all lunatics generally, that the lunatics at present under the care of the Chancellor, including their estates and property, might safely be transferred to such a body, giving a power of appeal from that tribunal to the Chancellor. If that body consisted of a sufficiently large number of persons—three, at least—I do not think there would be any practical danger in intrusting to them the whole inquiry as to the fact of unsoundness of mind; they hearing the evidence, and coming to their own conclusion upon it. But from their decision upon the question of lunacy or not, I would give an appeal, instead of to the Chancellor alone, to the Court of Appeal in Chancery, consisting of the Chancellor and the Judge of Appeal.

11337. Am I to understand you would contemplate this official body, who may be charged with lunatic affairs generally, coming to a conclusion upon the case without the intervention of a jury?—Yes. That would be a very striking alteration; but I consider it my duty to suggest what I think would improve the existing system.

11338. Your objection to the jury is, in fact, that they are not competent, generally speaking, to come to a proper conclusion upon such a very difficult matter as the sanity or insanity of a person?—In cases where the insanity could not be doubted for a moment by anybody, it is a useless expense to have a jury. In cases where it is a matter of difficulty to decide whether the party is sane or insane, the knowledge and experience of jurors in such cases are not generally sufficient to enable them to come to a satisfactory conclusion.

11339. Am I to understand you consider those proceedings should still originate in

General Question of Chancery Lunatics.
P. W. Brady, Esq.

The proposed Lunacy Board.

Chancery, where the Commission would issue, or that the Lunacy Board should be statutorily charged with the duty of investigating the cases?—I would give the Lunacy Board the power of investigating the cases of their own motion, without the intervention of the Chancellor at all, in the first instance; leaving it to the Legislature to decide and to regulate in what way the application should be made to them to hear the case.

11340. Any Board, such as exists in England, charged with the direction of executive matters, if it were to be charged with such investigations as these, would require to become more or less a court, with all the appendages and all the rules as to notices, mode of proceeding, and so on, belonging to the courts of law—would it not?—No, I do not think so. They would have only the two things to manage: one the care of the person of the lunatic, and the other the care of the property. The care of the property of a lunatic is not different from the care of the property of a sane person, and it would be only undertaking the receipt of rents, and the direction of their application, which does not necessarily involve the decision of any very difficult questions. The forms of proceeding in Chancery for the management of estates, the subject of hostile claims, are provided with a view of securing the fullest notice to all parties in the suit of every application respecting the estate in question; and thus considerable expense and delay are attendant upon all the proceedings. Those forms of procedure are, in my opinion, needlessly complicated and expensive when applied to estates not the subject of litigation, such as the estates of lunatics.

Investigation of cases in the country.

11341. Referring to the alteration which you say the Chancellor has made about the issuing of Commissions to magistrates and barristers in the country, are you enabled to state the reasons which induced him to make that alteration?—I believe he altered it on the ground that it was better to have persons who had considerable experience in conducting such investigations intrusted with them, than to commit them to individuals who were not alone not accustomed to such investigations at all, but were not aware of the legal forms of proceeding for the finding of the inquisition and the examining of witnesses. Under the new arrangement the expense is rather diminished, because you have only two Commissioners or sometimes one Commissioner, instead of three persons, acting.

Inspection of Chancery benefits.

11342. I think I understood you to say there is no systematic inspection of Chancery lunatics?—None.

11343. The Inspectors of Lunatics may, however, be charged by the Lord Chancellor, under particular circumstances with that duty?—They may.

11344. Are you aware whether that is ever done without the case having obtained some notoriety in court, which would serve as a warning to the parties in whose custody the lunatic was?—I have known the Chancellor, upon private communications made to him—communications not made in court—to request the Inspectors of Lunatics to visit the persons to whom the communications had reference, and to report to him; and they have done so.

11345. In point of fact, unless friends do interfere, there is no public officer charged or bound to go, from time to time, as he may see fit, at reasonable hours, to inspect lunatics under the Court of Chancery?—None.

Management of property.

11346. With regard to the property of the lunatic, is such property managed in the same manner as other estates under the Court, or is the committee of the estate enabled to make leases, or act as the proprietor would, or it might be supposed would act, if he was sane?—So far as the receipt of the rents and accounting for them is concerned, the property of the lunatic is managed in the same way as other properties are under the Court of Chancery. So far as the making of leases, and doing other acts relating to the property, the Chancellor has power, by special statutes, to grant leases—a power which he has not in reference to estates the subject of dispute in a cause in Chancery.

11347. In point of fact, are the lettings, pending the lunacy, submitted to the Master or other person?—Yes; the receiver must submit every thing respecting lettings, pending the lunacy, to the Master, as the receiver does pending a cause.

11348. Is the receiver always a distinct party from the committee?—Very commonly the committee of the estate is also the receiver, and when he is so, the Chancellor and Master may or may not allow him a poundage on the receipts, in consequence of his so acting without a receiver. Very often the committee of the estate is not considered a fit person to act as receiver, and a receiver is appointed.

11349. Is it the case that while the estate of a lunatic is in Chancery, the power of leasing, except in certain cases reserved by special statutes, is in abeyance?—Yes.

Leasing powers in abeyance.

11350. Then, although the lunatic might have had the power, if he remained sane, of giving leases for certain terms to tenants, the fact of his lunacy prevents the tenants on the estate of enjoying that benefit?—Yes. The Chancellor's jurisdiction being delegated to him from the Crown, he has, of course, only the same jurisdiction which the Crown itself has, unless when legislation has given increased jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the Crown in these cases was conferred by the statute of 17th Edward the Second, statute 1, chap. 10. These are the words of the statute by which the king has jurisdiction over lunatics. I do not mean that he had not jurisdiction before. He always had a jurisdiction, but this statute gave it formally:—

"Also, the king shall provide when any (that before time hath had his wit and memory), happen to fall of his wit, as there are many having lucid intervals, that their lands and tenements shall be safely kept without waste and destruction; and that they and their household shall live and be maintained competently from the issues of the same; and the residue beyond their reasonable maintenance shall be kept to their use, to be delivered unto them when they recover their right mind, so that such lands and tenements shall in no wise, within the time aforesaid, be aliened, nor shall the king take any thing to his own use. And if the party die in such estate, then the residue shall be distributed for his soul by the advice of the ordinary."

The ninth chapter applies to the case of idiots, and says:—

"The king shall leave the custody of the lands of natural fools, taking the profits of them without waste or destruction, and shall find them their necessities, of whose the sever the lands beholden. And after the death of such idiots, he shall render them to the right heirs; so that by such idiots no alienation shall be made, nor shall their heirs be disinherited."

Therefore, without special act of Parliament, the Chancellor exercising that jurisdiction, had no power to grant leases, or alienate the estate in any way.

11351. In a case where the committee of the estate is not the receiver, what benefit does the committee of the estate derive?—None at all.

11352. I understood you to say in a former answer, that you desire every thing connected with the property of a lunatic, as well as matters connected with the person, should be under the direction of the Lunacy Board, as we may call it. Would not that be mixing them up with matters for which the qualification looked to in the appointment of the Lunacy Board, would probably not be very suitable?—There are several instances of Boards constituted for the management of various public institutions, having incidentally the care and management of considerable estates.

The care of persons and properties of lunatics.

11353. You refer to the Charitable Corporations?—I refer to the Commissioners of Education, the Incorporated Society, and several other bodies which have the management of large estates.

11354. No doubt it is competent to Corporations to hold and manage properties according to their charters or trusts, but do you consider, generally, the management of landed estates, by charitable bodies, has been on the whole satisfactory?—I have known instances of property in the hands of public bodies not being well managed. The same has been said of estates in Chancery.

11355. Referring to an observation of yours—that the Chancellor, acting as the representative of the Crown, is supposed to be the guardian of all lunatics, while, in fact, he has no cognizance of lunatics, except such cases as are brought before him, where there is property involved—to what extent do you consider that parties having the custody of persons they thought were not of sound mind should be bound to notify that fact to the Chancellor or Lunacy Board?—I think a register should be in existence of the whereabouts of every person of unsound mind, or reputed to be of unsound mind; and the Central Board should take whatever steps Parliament might authorize, for the purpose of seeing that such persons were taken care of as well as circumstances would permit.

Cases of supposed lunatics.

11356. Do you see any objection to compelling parties who had living with them a lunatic or a person reputed to be a lunatic, to notify to the Commissioners that such a person was in their custody?—Quite the contrary.

11357. Do you see any objection to the Commissioners themselves directing an authorized officer of theirs to hold a secret inquiry, which would have no legal effect as regards the individual's custody or property, but a preliminary inquiry relative to his sanity or otherwise?—That would be a power that should be exercised very carefully.

11358. As the law at present stands, is it not the case that a person may be cruelly treated by his immediate relatives, and unless some one feels an interest in him, or feels called upon to bring his case formally, by application, before the Lord Chancellor, that person may remain unredressed?—It is quite possible.

11359. Do you think some farther power than exists is required to meet cases of that kind?—Certainly.

11360. Do you think, as the law at present stands, sufficient provision is made to enable a lunatic to take proceedings for superseding a Commission, in case of his recovering his reason?—I think, so far as the law is concerned, the lunatic is as free as he can be. There is nothing to prevent him doing what you state, if he can get anybody to bring the case before the Court.

Superseding Commissions.

11361. Do you not think that the Inspector's official and regular visits to Chancery lunatics, would afford them the means of communicating that they were sane, and their desire to be declared so?—Yes; that could be done by superseding the inquisition. In that case the Chancellor sees the person himself, and satisfies his own mind as to whether the Commission ought to be superseded or not.

11362. During the period that you were secretary to the Lord Chancellor, were there many inquiries directed by him under the Private Asylums Act?—Not many.

THE GENERAL QUESTION OF CHANCERY LUNATICS.

William Neilson Hancock, Esq., LL.D., sworn and examined.

General Question of Chancery Lunatics.
W. N. Hancock,
Esq., LL.D.

11863. What appointment do you hold under the Lord Chancellor in connexion with lunacy?—Clerk of the Custodies in the matter of lunatics and idiots in the Court of Chancery in Ireland.

Chancery proceeding in lunatic cases.

11864. Will you state how far the duties of that office have enabled you to become informed of the course of proceeding as regards lunatics under the care of the Lord Chancellor of Ireland?—All the orders of the Lord Chancellor, in lunacy matters, are drawn up and signed by me. His lordship makes minutes of orders upon petitions that are presented to him, and from those minutes the formal orders are drawn up, and they are signed by me, and the reports of the Masters are to be lodged in the office, and also the receiver's accounts, the affidavits and petitions and copies of those documents, if they are required, must be taken out from my office by the parties. They must be examined by my clerks and certified by me.

11865. Does a petition for a Commission de lunaticis inquirendo come at once under your cognizance?—Not until the Chancellor has made an order on it. It is lodged with the Chancellor's secretary, and I never see it until the Chancellor has made his order upon it.

11866. After the Lord Chancellor has ordered a Commission to issue, is the return upon that Commission brought immediately under your notice?—No; the return is not made to me. Supposing a person is found a lunatic, the next step is for the Lord Chancellor to make an order of reference to the Master to appoint a committee of the person, and a committee of the estate, to find what the property of the lunatic is, or what maintenance could be allowed, and in the case of a large estate, whether a receiver should be appointed. Such matters are referred to the Master.

11867. Then there is a receiver at times as well as a committee of the estate?—Sometimes. That is only in the case of very large estates.

11868. When that is not the case, the committee of the estate has to account?—Yes, the same as a receiver; they manage like receivers, and pass accounts in the same way.

Maintenance allowances.

11869. As regards the allowance for the maintenance of the lunatic, is that settled by the Master with reference to the amount of property?—Always with reference to the amount of property.

11870. Is it based upon any consideration of what is merely necessary for the maintenance and care of the lunatic in his then condition, or is the allowance made to the committee of the person with reference to the value of the estate?—Where the property is very small, the minimum is fixed with reference to it; but where the lunatic is well off, there is generally an allowance made for his maintenance, sufficient to keep him in the same position of life he was accustomed to live in. If the committee of the person undertakes the charge of the lunatic, he is allowed a certain advance out of the allowance as a kind of remuneration for taking the personal charge.

11871. Is that the case when the committee has parted with the charge of the lunatic by placing him in a private asylum?—No. Where they do that, the sum charged is the sum paid for the maintenance of the lunatic, that is, so far as my experience goes. I am not aware of any case of the kind.

The place of residence of a Chancery
lunatic.

11872. What means are taken to ascertain whether the committee of the person has placed the lunatic in a private asylum, or is still keeping him in his own domicile?—There is a general order of the Court of Chancery by which every person who has charge of a lunatic under the Court is bound once a year to make a return to the Court as the person in whose custody the lunatic is, with the certificate of a medical man, certifying he has seen the lunatic, and as to the state of the lunatic's health, and containing suggestions, if he thinks proper to make them, for a change of treatment. That is to be sent to the Chancellor's secretary. The Committee of the person must get the medical certificate, and the committee of the estate is to pay a fee to the doctor for that, and that payment appears before the Master when the account comes to be passed.

11873. The Master in considering those papers, would not necessarily conceive there was any irregularity in the patient being returned as in the custody of the keeper of a private asylum, because it would not be inconsistent with the rules of the Court?—I apprehend he could not be in a private asylum without an order to that effect.

11874. Supposing the return showed the patient was in the custody of A. B., who received so much from the committee of the person for keeping the lunatic, that would not be considered such an irregularity as to attract the Master's attention?—The Court of Chancery being a Court for all other purposes of contest or dispute between parties, the general notion of the Court is, that the different representatives or persons connected with the lunatic look after the lunatic, and that if there is any thing wrong, it is brought before the Court; but the machinery of the Court is not adapted for the detection of irregularities, unless there is a complaint. Any party may come before the Court with a complaint, and the matter will be at once investigated to the fullest possible extent; but supposing not one of all the persons connected with the lunatic bringing the case before the Court, then the machinery is not well adapted to detect any irregularities.

11375. In point of fact, although the Court may not have made any order for placing the lunatic in the hands of a third party, the committee may have done so, and no return may show that he has done so, and unless some particular motion is made, or step taken, calling attention to the circumstance, it would pass unnoticed?—So far as I know it would.

11376. We have been informed that there is no regular inspection of the lunatics in Chancery?—No; the parties are allowed to employ their own medical men. The order requiring the certificate does not specify any particular medical man, and the parties may specially employ any medical man to give the certificate.

11377. There is no public officer of the Court charged with the inspection of lunatics?—No; but since I came into office, in one or two special cases the Chancellor employed me to make inquiries where complaints were alleged with regard to the lunatics, and to report to him confidentially. I was to see how matters stood, and whether they were cases that ought to be brought before the Court.

11378. There is no official inspection, medical or otherwise, of lunatics under the Court of Chancery?—No.

11379. Is it your opinion some inspection of lunatics under the Court of Chancery, by a public officer from time to time, would be desirable?—I think it would. All the other business of the Court is of that character that the Court does not intervene of its own motion between the parties, unless some one takes measures to put it into motion. The machinery of the Court in lunacy matters is adapted by analogy to that, and is not suited to cases in which the Court has direct responsibility.

11380. In point of fact, the Court being one which requires to be put in motion, is not well suited for the discharge of the duties of the guardianship of lunatics?—Not the personal guardianship of them.

11381. Do you think there ought to be any limit to the class of cases that would be open to the inspection of a public officer; cases, for instance, of parties living with their own families?—I should say not. I think there are no cases would require inspection more, or in which inspection ought to be more insisted upon, than cases of lunatics living with their own families.

11382. Why do you state that?—Because there may be motives influencing the conduct of relatives or friends in such cases that would not actuate strangers. Where a person is on the verge of lunacy, and it is doubted whether he is lunatic or not, relatives are placed in a position of great delicacy in dealing with such a case. If they are harsh and unfeeling, they very often do not treat the person well; and if they are too easy and affectionate, they may not take the proper measures requisite for the care of the lunatic, and necessary for the sake of society.

11383. Can you state to us what is the minimum income of an estate in which the Chancellor would allow a Commission to issue?—I do not know that there is any rule on the subject; but as I got notice I would be examined here, it occurred to me that that was a subject upon which the Commissioners might ask for information, and I am making out a return for you which is not yet completed. On looking over, however, a similar return made by my predecessor several years back, I find, as a matter of fact, a property of £50 a-year being under the Court. That, I think, is about the limit, and the reason for it, in my opinion, is this: the poorest lunatics under the Court are generally sent to Swift's Hospital, where the payment for maintenance is £80 a-year, and £10 for clothes, and the minimum of absolutely necessary costs in Chancery is about £10 a-year, supposing the case to have no complication about it, and the property to be very small, and the accounts passed only every second or third year, which is the case with respect to small properties. I find one case in which the sum allowed to the solicitor for absolutely necessary expenses in Chancery, was fixed at £10. That would make with £80 for maintenance, in Swift's Hospital, and £10 for clothes, a total of £90. I find very few cases under £100 a-year. I would take £50 to be about the limit.

11384. Have you ever turned your attention to the question, whether means might not be devised for extending to persons having small properties the guardianship or protection which the Chancellor now affords to parties found lunatic by Commission?—It is a subject I have thought a good deal of. I was engaged acting for my brother, one year, managing landed property in the North of Ireland, and on that property one or two very painful cases of lunacy of tenants came under my notice. In one case the tenant was got into the lunatic asylum on the allegation that he was dangerous; but there was a small property that could have been made available for paying a small contribution towards the support of the lunatic. In both the cases that came under my notice, the lunacy was brought on partly by the complicated state of their affairs. They got into difficulties. The cases required some management, and I found the law perfectly powerless to deal with them. To put them into Chancery would have swamped the whole of the property, and there was no other tribunal to decide who had a right to deal with that property, or what was to become of it, or to authorize any act or proceeding during the lunacy with respect to it. After I got the office I now hold in the Court of Chancery, one of the first things I did was to consider how far the Chancellor's jurisdiction would apply. I found the whole number of lunatics under the Court is ordinarily about 150, and those are all the Court really deals with; and for all the other lunatics in Ireland, there is literally, in the present state of the law, no provision for protecting relatives in dealing with their property.

DEBATE.

General Question of Chancery Lunacy.
W. N. HANCOCK,
Esq., LL.B.,
Assistant Barrister's
Jurisdiction.

11885. Have you arrived at any conclusion as to what might be done in the way of improving the law in that respect?—Supposing the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery to be continued for large estates, it occurred to me that the analogous tribunal for dealing with small properties is the Assistant Barrister's Court; and that the clerks of the peace in the county towns, where the lunatic asylums are mostly situate, should do all the duties in such lunacy matters, which the Clerk of the Custodes discharges under the Court of Chancery. In that way the thing might be worked, if a true analogy was preserved, that is a literally analogous tribunal, with similar powers to that of the Court of Chancery; and I think it would work as well for the case of small properties as the Court of Chancery works for the larger. This tribunal would legalize the acts of loco pater relatives in dealing with the property of lunatics.

11886. They would give that protection and guardianship which the Chancellor now does in cases of persons having large properties?—Yes; and, in the existing state of affairs, it would be really a boon. I do not say it would be the best plan. What the Chancellor now does, in the case of lunatics possessed of large properties is, that he validates the acts of upright and honorable relatives, in dealing with the estates and in managing them. The Court of Chancery is also a tribunal for checking the misconduct of relatives acting improperly, and interferences for this purpose, on a complaint being made. Both these things could be done for lunatics belonging to the farming class with small properties, in the Assistant Barrister's Court.

11887. Have you ever yourself been engaged in a Commission de Lunatic?—No.

Inquiry into cases of alleged lunacy;
question of the proper tribunal.

11888. Have you been enabled in any way to form an opinion as to the tribunal which at present determines the lunacy or otherwise of a person whose case is brought before them?—I have not; it does not come within my knowledge at all. With respect to that tribunal, there are considerations on both sides of the question. So far as skill is concerned, a single Judge or Commissioner, with a power of appeal from him, might be intrusted with the jurisdiction; but as the decision affects the liberty of the subject, and as, in some cases, there is strong public feeling on the question of lunacy or otherwise, a jury has the advantage of securing a greater amount of public confidence in the finding.

11889. As regards the question of the liberty of the subject, is it not the fact that every patient who may be confined in a district asylum in Ireland, is sent there without a jury having pronounced upon his sanity or insanity?—Well, I think that is objectionable. I think there is not a sufficiently uniform system on the subject.

11890. You have referred to a course of proceeding by which the first inquiry should be held before skilled persons, and you have said there should be a power of appeal, do you contemplate a jury being called in on the appeal?—No; I contemplate the ordinary judicial method of determining an appeal, dispensing with a jury altogether.

11891. Do you think that if the inquiry were first held before skilled persons, and then that the parties traversing the finding might have the case tried before a jury, that arrangement would work satisfactorily?—I do not think it would, because it would not be dignified for the skilled men to have their decision left afterwards to the determination of a jury. The jury ought to be the first tribunal, unless the decision was not acted upon. If it was a mere pro forma decision that was given in the first instance, such as the certificate of the doctor, the case might then be left to the jury on appeal; but if the first decision was the solemn decision of the Court, it would injure the Court very much if juries found against it. The tribunal would be injured in public estimation.

11892. Generally speaking, is it not the publicity of the proceedings before the jury which in a great degree prevents those evils that might arise if the inquiry were private before Commissioners?—Publicity is, of course, one of the first elements. The great importance of having a jury is, for satisfying the public mind. I think that is of great importance, like, for instance, the case of coroner's inquests. I have been present at some inquests, and I think that the special functions juries fulfil on those inquiries is, that they put the public mind at rest about the case. I have seen that result in very unpleasant cases in which coroner's inquests were held, and in which a magisterial inquiry would not have had any thing like the same effect in tranquillizing the public mind as the verdict of the jury had. In matters of lunacy, the finding of the jury has, I think, a similar effect in satisfying the minds of relatives and friends. Skilled men differ and may be mistaken, and the jury may also be mistaken, but the effect of the two decisions is different on the public mind.

11893. In the case you put, the jury and the magistrates are equally unskilled, and they have both a matter of fact to be determined on; but the protection for the liberty of the subject, in all cases of lunacy, should be the fact of the party not being a lunatic, and that can be better ascertained by skilled men than by unskilled men?—It is only in doubtful cases that the difficulty arises, and the most that can happen is, if the skilled men are right, the party will be out a little longer; but the evil the other way ought to be very carefully considered, because if the skilled men make a mistake, and that the party is once put up in an asylum, even though he may be subsequently discharged and cleared of the allegation of lunacy in every way, the effect may still be very injurious. There are persons of delicate nerves, who would be very much excited in such an event.

11894. Is not the tendency of juries against finding a person lunatic?—The natural instinct of a jury is against it, unless there is conclusive evidence; and I think if there is conclusive evidence they are certain to find in accordance with it, but the natural feeling of juries is such, that they require to be clearly satisfied of the lunacy of the party.

11395. In the examination that has taken place, you have, I hope, understood the Commissioners as not wishing that those inquiries before Commissioners should be private?—I quite understood that.

11396. Under the present arrangement the committee of the person is allowed to select the medical officer, whose certificate he is to produce to the Court of Chancery?—I will read the terms of the order on the subject. This was the rule made by Lord St. Leonard, when he was Lord Chancellor of Ireland. It is dated 27th of March, 1848:—

"That every committee already appointed, or hereafter to be appointed, of the person of any lunatic, shall on the first day of March in every year, transmit by the post, or deliver under cover to the Lord Chancellor's Secretary, in Dublin, a Certificate signed by him, of the actual place of residence of the lunatic at that period, and of any other place or places in which he may have resided during the preceding twelve months, or since the last report; and the nature of the accommodations provided for and enjoyed by the lunatic, including board, lodging, clothing, and medical attendance, and means of exercise in carriage, or on horseback, and the state of health, mental and bodily, of the lunatic; and also (where the lunatic does not reside with the committee of the person), the particular days on which the committee has visited the lunatic during the past year; and also how much is paid for the board, lodging, and clothing of the lunatic, and for medical attendance; together with, in every case, a certificate of a medical practitioner, being a physician or surgeon (not being the proprietor of, or usual attendant upon, any asylum where the lunatic may be confined), of the actual state of such lunatic in the several respects aforesaid, with such expressions as any such medical practitioner may think it proper to make for the future benefit of the lunatic; and every such physician or surgeon shall be entitled to a fee of one guinea for such attendance and certificate, to be paid at the time by the committee of the person, and to be repaid to him by the committee of the estate, to whom the same shall be allowed by the Master in passing his accounts.

(Signed)

EDWARD B. SOAMES, C.*

There is as complete a machinery as the ordinary practice of the Court could provide for the protection of the lunatic. The committee of the person, and the committee of the estate, are all brought within that order. You will see from the terms of the order, the physician, who is to certify respecting the lunatic, is selected by the committee of the person, who may select any physician he chooses.

11397. Are you of opinion that there might be a better practice than that of leaving to the committee, who may have an interest in the continuance of absence, the selection of the medical officer who was to report upon the state of the patient?—My own impression is, that it would be more satisfactory if there were an inspection by an officer duly appointed for the purpose.

11398. Are you enabled to state what is the real practice in the Secretary's Office with reference to the certificates which are required to be sent in under the order you have read—are any pains taken to ascertain that the locality of the lunatic at the time is consistent with the rules which have been made in all cases, or that the matters returned are in accordance with the facts, such, for instance, as the place of residence of the lunatic?—Those certificates are all sent over by the Secretary, to be lodged in my office. They are addressed to the Secretary in the first instance.

11399. It all comes to this, that Chancery is a Court that will not move in those matters of itself?—That is the case.

11400. Are the rules of the Court, with reference to lunacy matters, printed or published?—They are printed; for the practice with regard to lunacy is nearly the same as the practice with regard to other matters in Chancery. When general orders are issued in Chancery, it is stated generally, the orders of a certain class shall relate to matters in lunacy. The practice of the Court is the same with regard to the property of lunatics, as with regard to any other property under the Court.

11401. There are no particular rules as regards the person of the lunatic?—Not beyond those to which I have called the attention of the Commissioners.

11402. Do you see any objection to a public Board of Commissioners, who might be charged with the superintendence of lunatic asylums, being given the custody of the persons of lunatics—the superintendence of lunatics under the Court of Chancery?—No, I do not. The only cases that could be an exception would be these. Sometimes we have had persons of very dignified rank in society under the Court as lunatics—even of large property; and the relatives and friends of such persons might feel less delicacy in having the property under an officer, like the Lord Chancellor, than under any other authority.

11403. My question has no reference to the property?—I say the same with respect to their persons. I think that in any arrangement of the kind there ought to be an exception made of persons of great dignity, whose friends might like them to be under so dignified an officer of the state as the Lord Chancellor.

11404. Supposing the Commission, such as I have referred to, were placed under the control of the Lord Chancellor in those matters, would that obviate the objection?—The cases I refer to would not be more than four or five in number.

11405. My suggestion, of course, presumes also that the Commissioners should be under the same obligation of secrecy in private matters?—Yes, so I understood.

11406. In the event of the custody of the persons of lunatics being placed under the control of Commissioners, such as I have referred to, what is your opinion of the course to be pursued with reference to the property; should that still remain under the Court of Chancery?—That would depend upon whether the Commissioners had machinery

11407. Do you see any objection to the custody of the person being placed under the direction of the Commissioners, while the care of the property would be left under the control of the Court of Chancery?—No objection. The custody of the person requires more constant and active personal vigilance than the other. The custody of the person is more in the nature of an administrative function than the custody of the property. The relatives generally look after the property.

Leasing powers.

11408. I believe the Court of Chancery, except in certain cases, where the power has been given by statute, is not enabled to grant any leases of the estates of lunatics?—The Court has no discretion of its own; it has only statutable powers.

11409. What is your opinion with reference to power being given to the Court of Chancery of exercising the same power of leasing which might belong to the lunatic, always providing it did not extend beyond a definite period, say three lives or thirty-one years?—I think that the ordinary leasing power that is necessary for the good management of the property should not be in abeyance.

HAYSTACK.

Whereas by an Act passed in a Session of Parliament, holden in the first and second years of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Fourth, entitled "An Act to make more effectual provision for the Establishment of Asylums for the Lunatic Poor, and for the Custody of Insane Persons charged with Offences in Ireland," it is amongst other things enacted, that at any time after the passing of said Act, it shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland, by and with the advice and consent of the Privy Council in Ireland, to direct and order that any number of Asylums for the Lunatic Poor of Ireland shall be erected and established in and for such Districts in Ireland as to the said Lord Lieutenant or other Chief Governor or Governors and Privy Council shall seem expedient; and that every such District shall and may consist either of the whole of two or more counties, or of one or more county or counties, and one or more counties of cities or towns, or one or more county of a city or town only, and no more.

And whereas, by an Act passed in a Session of Parliament, holden in the seventh year of the reign of His said late Majesty King George the Fourth, entitled "An Act for the further amendment of an Act of the first and second years of His present Majesty for the Establishment of Asylums for the Lunatic Poor of Ireland," it is amongst other things enacted, that from and after the passing of said last mentioned Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland, by and with the advice and consent of His Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, from time to time and at all times whenever and so often as shall seem expedient to him or them so to do, to direct and order that any Asylum or Asylums for the Lunatic Poor in Ireland shall be erected and established in any place or in and for any districts in Ireland in lieu of or in addition to any Asylum or Asylums created under the authority of the said recited Act, and from time to time to alter or change the District or places in or for which any such Asylum or Asylums shall have been or shall be erected under the authority of the said first recited Act or this Act. And said Act provides that every District in which any such Asylum or Asylums shall be erected or established under said first recited Act or this Act shall be constituted and composed in such manner as is directed by the said first recited Act. And that every such Asylum shall be sufficient to contain such numbers as are required and directed by the said first recited Act. And that the expenses of erecting, establishing, and maintaining every such Asylum shall be paid in such manner as is required and directed. And that every such Asylum shall be subject to all such rules and regulations as are contained in said first recited Act, and in an Act made in the then last Session of Parliament for amending the said first recited Act.

And whereas by an Act passed in a Session of Parliament, holden in the eighth and ninth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, entitled "An Act for the Establishment of a Central Asylum for Insane Persons charged with offences in Ireland, and to amend the Act relating to the prevention of Offences by Insane Persons, and the Acts respecting Asylums for the Insane Poor in Ireland, and for appropriating the Lunatic Asylum in the city of Cork to the purposes of a District Lunatic Asylum," it is amongst other things enacted that from and after the first day of September next, after the passing of said last-mentioned Act, the Cork Lunatic Asylum shall and may be, and become a District Lunatic Asylum for the county of Cork, and the county of the city of Cork, and for such other county or counties if any, as from time to time may under the provisions of the said recited Act of the first and second years of His late Majesty King George the Fourth, or any Act amending the same be constituted, together with the said county of Cork, and county of the city of Cork, a District for a Lunatic Asylum; and that all rules, orders, regulations, rights, powers, authorities, privileges, habilitations, provisions, and enactments contained in the said Act of the first and second years of King George the Fourth, and of any Act or Acts amending the same, and of said Act of the eighth and ninth years of Her present Majesty, shall and may from time to time as occasion may require, be extended, applied, made, exercised, and enforced, to and in respect of the District so constituted in like manner to all intents and purposes as in the case of any District Lunatic Asylum created or established by or subject to the provisions of the said recited Act of the first and second years of King George the Fourth, or any Act amending the same.

And whereas under the provisions of said first recited Act, an Asylum was constituted and established in the city of Cork for the reception of Lunatic Poor.

And whereas under the provisions of said last recited Act of the eighth and ninth years of Her present Majesty the Asylum so established and constituted has become a District Lunatic Asylum for the county of Cork, and the county of the city of Cork.

And whereas it hath been represented unto us, that the said Lunatic Asylum at Cork, as regards the site, extent, and capabilities is insufficient for the existing Institution. And also that it is insufficient and inadequate for the number of persons confined therein. And that it is expedient and necessary that a new District Asylum should be erected and established with a sufficient extent of ground attached thereto, capable of affording wholesome occupation and recreation for the inmates to be confined therein.

Now we, William, Baron Haytesbury, Lord Lieutenant-General and General Governor of Ireland, by and with the advice and consent of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, in pursuance of the powers vested in us for that purpose, under and by virtue of the said recited Act of the seventh year of the reign of His said late Majesty King George the Fourth, do hereby direct and order that an Asylum for the Lunatic Poor shall be erected and established at Shanakill, in the county of Cork, in and for the district comprising the said county of Cork, and the county of the city of Cork, in lieu of the existing Asylum, erected as aforesaid, under the provisions of said recited Act of the first and second years of the reign of His said late Majesty King George the Fourth, and of the said Act of the eighth and ninth years of Her present Majesty, with fit and suitable accommodation for five hundred patients, and with the necessary quantity of land to be attached thereto for the recreation and employment of the patients to be confined therein. And that such District Asylum shall be constituted and compared in such manner as is directed by the said recited Act of the first and second years of His said late Majesty King George the Fourth.

And we further direct and order that the expense of erecting, establishing, and maintaining such District

Asylum shall be raised in such manner as is required and directed by said recited Acts. And that such Asylum shall be subject to all such rules and regulations as are contained in the said recited Act of the first and second years of the reign of His said late Majesty King George the Fourth, and of an Act passed in the sixth year of the reign of His said late Majesty King George the Fourth, entitled "An Act to amend an Act of the first and second years of His present Majesty for the Establishment of Asylums for the Lunatic Poor in Ireland."

NO. 4.—COPY ORDER IN COUNCIL FOR FIRST ISSUE OF MONEY FOR ERECTION OF CORK DISTRICT ASYLUM.

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland.

CLARENCE.

Whereas the Commissioners for General Control and Correspondence, and for Superintending the Erection, Establishment, and Regulation of Asylums for the Lunatic Poor in Ireland, have by their communication, dated 26th day of October, 1847, represented unto us, that in obedience to the instructions issued to them, they have entered into a contract for the erection of a District Lunatic Asylum at Cork, to contain five hundred patients, at a cost of fifty-two thousand nine hundred and forty-two pounds, twelve shillings, and ten pence, and, therefore, praying that a sum of two thousand pounds may be issued to them on account of the sum appropriated for the erection of the building in question:

We, the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice and consent of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, in pursuance of the powers vested in us by the statute in that case made and provided, do hereby order and direct, that out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom arising in Ireland, there be advanced and issued, and paid into the Bank of Ireland, to the credit of the said Commissioners for General Control and Correspondence, the sum of two thousand pounds for and on account of the building of the said Cork District Lunatic Asylum.

NO. 5.—COPY ORDER IN COUNCIL FOR ENLARGEMENT OF OLD RICHMOND AND ERECTION OF NEW RICHMOND ASYLUM.

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland.

CLARENCE.

Whereas, by Order of this Board bearing date the 19th day of September, 1847, it was directed that a new Asylum sufficient to contain three hundred lunatic poor should be erected near Dublin, in addition to the existing Richmond District Lunatic Asylum for the county of the city of Dublin, the counties of Dublin, Wicklow, and Louth, and for the county of the town of Drogheda.

And whereas it is expedient, in lieu of erecting such new additional Asylum, so directed by said order of 19th September, 1847, that the existing Richmond District Lunatic Asylum be enlarged to an extent sufficient to contain in the entire building four hundred and thirty-six lunatic poor, and that a new asylum be erected on certain land adjoining the ground of the

NO. 6.—COPY ORDER IN COUNCIL FOR ENLARGEMENT AND ALTERATION OF BELFAST ASYLUM.*

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland.

CLARENCEMENT.

Upon reading, this day, at the Board, certain representations received from the Governors and Directors of the Belfast District Lunatic Asylum, as to the necessity of enlarging and altering the said Asylum, with the view to afford more accommodation for the inmates; as also a Report from the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums as to the expediency of providing increased accommodation, together with the plan and specification submitted by the Commissioners for General Control of Lunatic Asylums, of the enlargement and alterations proposed to be made at the said Belfast District Lunatic Asylum, and which are set forth in the said specification as follows:—

To remove a portion of the existing one story building, in order to improve the light, ventilation, and cheerfulness of the airing yards.

Two of the present dormitories, which are occupied by fifty patients, to be converted into Workrooms, and for these accommodation is provided in addition to the increased number required.

To extend the two front wings so as to obtain accommodation for thirty patients on each floor, making ninety for each wing, and for the two wings one hundred and eighty, the number required.

To build a new kitchen, scullery, laundry, &c., as shown by the plans.

To provide a Chapel for the religious instruction of the patients.

To afford improved accommodation for the Resident Physicians, and other Officers of the establishment, And to provide sleeping-rooms for the kitchens and laundry servants, and additional store-rooms.

CLARENCEMENT.

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland.

CLARENCEMENT.

Whereas We did, by Order of this Board, bearing date the 13th day of June, 1851, direct the necessary steps to be taken for carrying into execution a certain proposed enlargement and certain alterations of the Belfast District Lunatic Asylum, at a cost not to exceed the sum of nine thousand pounds.

And whereas it has been represented unto us, by the Commissioners for General Control of Lunatic Asylums, that it has been found expedient to increase the day-room accommodation provided for under our said Order of the 13th June to the extent of accommodating forty additional male patients, and also to erect a porch to the main entrance of said Asylum, that they have accordingly made the necessary alterations in the original plan for affording the required accommodation, and have estimated the same at a cost not exceeding seven hundred pounds, and have therefore requested our sanction to such increased expenditure:

Now We, the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, do hereby order and direct that the necessary steps be taken for carrying into execution the proposed addition to the day-room accommodation for male patients directed by our said Order of the 13th June, 1851, and for the erection of a porch at the main entrance of said Belfast Asylum, the cost of such additional accommodation and erection not to exceed the sum of seven hundred pounds, to be in addition to and over and above the sum of nine thousand pounds, sanctioned by our Order aforesaid.

- Re-pointing old boundary wall.
- Garden tool house.
- Shed for carts.
- Privies in grounds.
- Enclosure of stable offices.
- Re-pointing outside of old building, inside and outside.
- Padded rooms.
- New entering and inspection holes for all doors of sleeping apartments.
- Benches in sitting rooms and seats on grounds.
- Ball courts.
- Removal of piazzas in front of old building.
- Enlargement of day-room windows in front of building.
- Lowering and trimming of windows in rear of central building.
- Back-stair case to clock.
- Additional coach and stable accommodation for board days.
- Re-pointing all outside work of old building.
- New mantle-pieces and grates for central house.
- General repairs of roof of central building.
- Baths in manager's house.
- Centre places for ceilings in central building.
- Frames throughout the corridors in the Old and New Buildings.

And whereas the said Commissioners have estimated the sum of a cost not exceeding three thousand two hundred and eighty-nine pounds one shilling and a penny :

Now We, the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, do hereby order and direct that the necessary steps be taken for carrying into Execution the proposed additional works hereinafter specified, the cost of such additional works not to exceed the sum of three thousand two hundred and eighty-nine pounds, to be in addition to, and over and above the sum of nine thousand pounds, and seven hundred pounds, sanctioned by our Orders as aforesaid.

HATFIELD.

Whereas by an Act of Parliament passed in the eighth and ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, entitled "An Act for the establishment of a Central Asylum for INSANE Persons charged with offences in Ireland, and to amend the Act relating to the prevention of offences by INSANE Persons, and the Acts respecting Asylums for the INSANE Poor in Ireland; and for approving the Lunatic Asylum in the City of Cork to the purposes of a District Lunatic Asylum. It is amongst other things enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland for the time being, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, to make and found such rules and regulations for the holding of lectures by the medical attendant or attendants of the said Central Asylum, or the Provincial or District Asylums in said Act mentioned, or any of them, as to the said Lord Lieutenant or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland with the advice of the said Privy Council aforesaid may seem fit.

We, the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council of Ireland, by virtue of the powers given unto us by the above in part recited Act, do hereby make and found the rules and regulations to this our Order annexed for the holding of lectures by the medical attendants of the Richmond District Lunatic Asylum, and direct that the same be observed therein.

Given at the Council Chamber, in Dublin, the 18th day of April, 1846.

Rules and Regulations.

1. That the medical attendants of the Richmond Asylum do at the said Asylum deliver clinical and other lectures on subjects connected with the medical and moral treatment of insanity; and on the cases of any of the patients for the time being in the Asylum, at such time and under such regulations as they shall from time to time with the approbation of the Board of Governors of the said Asylum think most conducive to the advancement of knowledge, and the instruction of the pupils of the said establishment.

2. That the attending physician to the said Asylum shall be at liberty to take any number of pupils (not exceeding five at any one time, unless with the previous approbation of the Board of Governors, by whose authority the number may be increased from time to time, and again, if they shall deem it necessary be reduced), such pupils to be subject to such rules as the physician with the advice of the surgeon, shall from time to time issue. But no pupil is to visit the female ward or any female patient except in company with the medical attendant of the said Asylum; nor shall any patients be visited by pupils excepting such as shall be decreed by the medical attendant fitting subjects for clinical instruction, and not likely to be exposed to injury from such visits.

3. That no person be admitted as a pupil in the said Asylum who has not been a medical student for at least three years previously; and every such pupil must lodge with the clerk of the Governors, before he is admitted into the Asylum as a pupil, certificates from the proper medical persons or officers under whom he has studied, of his attention to his studies, and his general good conduct during the preceding three years.

4. That the Board of Governors of the said Asylum shall forthwith on the recommendation of the medical officers of the said Asylum appoint some competent persons as clinical clerk.

5. That there shall be always a clinical clerk resident at the said Asylum, whose duty it will be to attend upon the physician at his visits, and to keep notes of cases both of medical and moral treatment; and who, in case of prompt aid being required during the absence of the medical attendant (but not otherwise), is to act in the relief of patients at the said Asylum. It being well understood that the appointment of a clinical clerk is for the purpose of establishing a school for the treatment of mental disease, and not for the relief of the medical attendance is attending on the patients.

6. That if, at the end of twelve months from the appointment of the first clinical clerk it shall be found that one clerk is incompetent to perform all the duties required, it shall be lawful for the Board of Governors, on the recommendation of the medical officers, to appoint a second, and thereafter there shall be two clinical clerks resident at the said Asylum as long as the services of the two shall be found necessary.

7. That the first person or persons appointed a clinical clerk or clinical clerks, shall be a person or persons who hath or have completed his or their course of medical studies; and no person shall hold the office of clinical clerk for more than two years.

8. That the managers of the clinical clerks first appointed shall be selected from the pupils of the said Asylum. And the College of Physicians, and the College of Surgeons are requested as often as may be necessary, upon the application of the medical attendants of the said Asylum, to appoint a joint Committee to examine the pupils desirous of filling the office; and such Committee is to examine the pupils accordingly, and to give a certificate to the one, who in their opinion is best qualified by his professional attainments, and steady and gentlemanly conduct, to fill the office with advantage to the Institution.

9. That every clinical clerk who is in the opinion of the Board of Governors, is entitled to such a mark of approbation shall, when his time of office expires, be furnished by the Board with a certificate from them, countersigned by the medical attendants, stating that he has performed the duty of clinical clerk at the said Asylum, with ability and attention.

10. That every clinical clerk shall be furnished with diet and lodging at the Asylum.

MANAGEMENT OF GOVERNORS.

1. Two General Meetings of the Governors, five to constitute a quorum, to be held at the Asylum in every year, the first on the second Wednesday in February, the second on the second Wednesday in July. The general statement of the establishment, its expenditure, &c., required by Act of Parliament for the office of Inspector Accounts, shall be submitted by the Manager to the meeting, so as to be revised and authenticated thereof, and an abstract of the account, with such remarks as the Manager may deem necessary and the Board shall approve of, shall be signed by the Chairman, and a sufficient number of copies printed for circulation, twenty-four to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Grand Jury for each county within the district, to be distributed to the Jury at the ensuing assizes, and two to be forwarded to each Governor.

2. The local Board (three forming a quorum) are to hold their meetings on the first Tuesday in every month, for the discharge of the ordinary business of the Asylum; but the local Board of any Asylum may alter the day to some other fixed day, so as to meet the convenience of the Board, and may meet afterwards on some fixed day, if it shall be so arranged by the Board, and every such Board shall see to the actual execution of their orders, and regularly inspect the Asylum and the inmates, and keep a watchful eye over the Accounts.

3. Special Meetings are to be called for a particular day, upon a requisition to that effect being made to the Manager, signed by two or more Governors.

ADMISSION AND TREATMENT OF PATIENTS.

4. Idiots, as well as lunatics properly so called, are to be admissible to every Asylum, and so also are epileptic persons, where the fits produce imbecility of mind as well as of body.

5. The printed form of admission, which is to be furnished at every Asylum, upon application to the Manager, is to be carefully filled up according to the directions contained therein, and returned (if by letter, post-paid) to the Manager, who shall forthwith deliver it to the Physician, in order that he may consider the case as represented, for the purpose of advising the Governors thereon at the next meeting of the Board.

6. Every patient to be admitted upon a special direction by the Board, unless in cases of urgency, when the Physician may admit upon his own authority, stating on the face of his order the grounds upon which he acts. In every case a bond for the removal of the patient, when required by the Board, to be signed by some responsible person, before the admission of the patient, unless the Board upon any ground, or the Physician in cases of urgency, shall dispense with the same, or postpone the time for the execution of such bond.

7. Each patient should have one suit of clothes, which will be returned on his or her removal from the Asylum.

8. The patients shall, on admission, be carefully bathed, dressed, and clad in the dress of the Institution, unless otherwise directed by the Manager or Physician. They shall be treated with all the gentleness compatible with their situation; and restraint, when necessary, shall be as moderate, both in extent and duration, as is consistent with the safety and advantage of the patient.

9. Where it is found necessary to restrain a patient, by staff or otherwise, and also to confine the patient to a seat, care is to be taken that the seat is sufficiently wide to enable the patient to sit down comfortably, and that pain and irritation are not caused by the nature of the seat, or by the back of the patient not having any support.

10. No patient is to be entitled to any remuneration for any labour done while confined within the Asylum.

11. The greatest regularity shall be observed with respect to the hours for rising in the morning and retiring for the night; that for rising being fixed at

 1. The General Registry, containing the particulars of all cases admitted into the Asylum, copied from the printed forms of admission, together with the Admission, Discharge, and Death Books.
 2. The Provision Books, containing the quantity of food received and issued to patients, servants, and extras to sick, &c., &c., which are to be kept so as to form a perfect check upon all the deliveries compared with the consumption.
 3. The Delivery or Clothing Store Book.
 4. The Morning Statement Book, containing a return of the number of patients divided according to their sexes, the names of those admitted and discharged, specifying whether cured, relieved, or hazardous, and incurable, the names of those who have died, the number employed, the names of those under restraint or seclusion, and the causes thereof, the number under medical treatment, the visit and hour of visit of the respective Medical Officers, which latter is to be daily filled and signed by them. This daily return to be countersigned by the Manager, who shall be held responsible for its accuracy.
 5. The Want Book, upon which, previous to each Monthly Meeting, all articles required for the use of the Asylum are to be entered for the approval and signature of the Chairman.
 6. The Minute Book, containing a faithful record of the proceedings of the Board.
 7. A General Order Book, in which all orders and regulations, which may be from time to time made for the management of the Institution, shall be separately copied for facility of reference.
 8. A Manuscriptum Book, to be laid before each Board, in which an entry shall be made of all matters to be submitted for consideration as well as of all communications from the Manager to the Board, in order that such communications may remain on record, with the decision of the Board thereon to be noted in the margin by the Chairman.

12. The Letter or Correspondence Book, in which are to be entered the dates of all letters received and copies of all letters written on business of the Institution, and the letters received to be filed and preserved.

13. The Application Book, in which shall be entered the particulars of all applications for admission, the names of the certifying Magistrates and Physicians, with such observations as each applicant or the Manager may think fit.

14. He is to transcribe correctly the Minutes of the Board, write letters, and act generally as the medium of communication as the Board shall direct.

15. He is to keep and check all accounts of the Institution, to prepare the annual returns for the Audit Commission, to submit the accounts and vouchers for money paid within each month, for the Monthly Meeting, at which time they are to be examined by the Board and signed by the Chairman as correct or otherwise.

16. He is to take care that no bills are included save such as have been duly authorized by the Monthly Meetings.

17. He is to inspect the provisions and all other articles purchased by contract, and purchase all articles as the Board shall direct.

18. He is to take care that all subordinate officers acquit themselves of their respective duties with regularity and care, and in every case of neglect or omission to make an entry on the Daily Statement Book for the information of the Board.

19. He is to call the attention of the Matron to any case of misconduct that may occur within her department, and when he deems it necessary he is authorized to flag, suspend, or, with the concurrence of the Board, dismiss any of the domestics.

20. He is to take charge of the instruments of restraint, and is not under any pretence to allow the unauthorized use of them to any person within the establishment; all cases placed under restraint, seclusion, or other deviation from the ordinary treatment, are to be carefully recorded by him in the daily report with the particular nature of the restraint or deviation resorted to. But in no case shall the slower belt be used without the authority of the Physicians.

21. He shall inspect every portion of the establishment each day before twelve o'clock, and shall personally inspect each patient.

22. He shall make himself acquainted with every case, and maintain such an intercourse with the inmates as may enable him at all times to give full and perfect information on all heads to the Board and to the Physician.

23. During meal hours he shall be careful to examine the dining rooms, to observe the state of the provisions as to quality, quantity, cooking, cleanliness, and equality of distribution, and shall take care that the food is good, and as well prepared as the power of the establishment will permit.

24. He is to walk through the galleries every night after the patients have retired to bed, to see that they are carefully locked up and comfortably placed for the night, and that the keepers and servants are orderly and in their proper places; the Matron to attend him through the female wards.

25. He is to consider the convalescents as the particular object of his care, and exert himself to keep them amused and employed, also to endeavor to regulate their intercourse with each other, as may best promote their comfort and recovery.

26. He is from time to time to report to the Physician such cases as appear to require particular attention or treatment, and cases to be carefully observed such directions as may be given by the Physician.

27. He is to be attentive to all strangers who may visit the Asylum, accompanying them, or, if engaged, taking care that they be attended by some competent person. He is also to see that the visits of the friends of patients are regulated so as to be most conducive to their comfort and in strict accordance with the discipline of the establishment.

31. He shall never be absent from the Asylum at the same time with the matron, nor ever for the night without special leave from a Board of Governors, and upon every such absence he shall enter in the Book the date and period of his absence.

Duties of Matron.

32. The Matron is to wash over and report the conduct of the female convicts and nurses.

33. She is to take care that every part of the house is at all times clean and well ventilated, and particularly attend to those cells where sick or refractory patients are confined.

34. She is to pay the strictest attention to the state of the laundry department, and take care that the clothing, bedding, and linen of the patients are at all times clean and in good state and repair; and in case of any neglect on the part of nurses or others, to report the same in the Daily Statement Book in the office.

35. She is to examine the wards and day-rooms of the female patients each day before twelve o'clock, and carefully inspect each patient.

36. She is also to walk through the female galleries every night after the patients have retired to bed, to see that they are carefully looked up and comfortably placed for the night, and that the nurses and servants are orderly and in their proper places.

37. She is to exercise a general superintendence over the ordinary department of the establishment, and to inspect the female patients at their meals, to insure to them equality of distribution of the food and all other comforts which the allowances of the establishment may permit.

38. She is to maintain constant intercourse with the female patients, devise judicious occupations for them, and in every way endeavour to promote their comfort and recovery.

39. She is to take charge of, and be accountable to the Manager for all female clothing, bedding, &c., &c., and report, as often as necessary, their condition. All lost or damaged articles to be kept till disposed of by order of the Board.

40. She is to receive every morning from each nurse, a report of their respective divisions during the past night, to be entered in the Daily Statement Book.

41. She is to cause each female patient after admission to be bathed in a warm bath, or otherwise well cleansed, and her private clothing washed, washed, and put up in store, to be afterwards returned when the patient is leaving the Asylum.

Duties of Physician.

42. He is to attend on three days (to be named by the Board) at least in each week, and on every day at each Asylum in which the number of patients shall exceed 250. The general hour for such visits not to be later than two o'clock. He shall also visit on particular occasions, when called on by the Manager, and shall prescribe for all patients and servants who may require medical aid, and for the Resident Officers who may request medical assistance.

43. He shall attend daily on cases of fever and on any other cases of an urgent nature.

44. He is authorized to order such diet as he may think necessary for any particular case, having, however, due regard for economy in each article.

45. The Physician is to direct the course of moral and medical treatment of the patients, and constant regard is to be had to the means of amusement and employment afforded to them.

46. The Physician is on every day's attendance to visit in the house, although he may be informed that there is no case requiring his attention, and to enter on each day in the Morning Statement Book the hour and duration of his attendance.

47. He should always visit every patient under medical aid, and, when he deems it safe, require such patients to be temperately relieved from restraint, and examine them so as to ascertain that they are not cramped or injured; and he should frequently go round the Asylum so as to see the state and condition of every inmate.

48. He is to keep a Case Book in, and which is to belong to, the Asylum, in which shall be entered the character of every important case, with such extracts from time to time as will exhibit the course of practice pursued, and the effect of it.

49. Every Physician holding or accepting of an appointment, is requested to bear in mind that the object of the Government is not simply to have the bodily ailments of the patients attended to, but to assist their recovery by moral or medical means, and to advance medical science in cases of lunacy through the great range of experience which the public Asylums afford.

50. He is, when requiring leave of absence for a period beyond one fortnight, to make application to the Board, and provide a qualified substitute to be approved of by the Board; should he be unavoidably absent on other occasions, he is to take care that his duties are performed by a properly qualified practitioner.

51. He is to attend on Board days to afford such advice and assistance to the Governors as they may require, and is to report in a book to be kept for that purpose, such cases as he may be of opinion should be discharged, and is to direct the attention of the Board to any particulars in his own department which he may think necessary, his report book being regularly laid before each meeting.

52. The Physician is to be at liberty to visit the institution whenever he thinks proper, and his additional and irregular visits should be encouraged but not exacted.

Duties of Apothecary.

53. He is to visit daily at the Asylum, and enter his name on each visit; he is to compound all medicines and deliver them to the nurses and keepers, and as far as possible see that they are duly and carefully administered.

54. The Apothecary's shop in the Asylum to be kept properly supplied with drugs, and to be always well arranged and perfectly clean and in good order, and the key to be left during the absence of the Apothecary in the care of the Manager, who shall not allow any other person than the Medical Attendants and the Governors to have access thereto.

55. The Apothecary never to attend later than two o'clock in the day unless required; and all medicines to be compounded at the Asylum and not elsewhere, without an actual necessity, or a special order from the Physicians.

56. He shall be accountable for all medicines and instruments placed in his charge.

57. He is twice in each year to furnish a return to the Manager of the quantity and value of all medicines under his charge, and when any articles are required he is to leave a list with the Manager for the signature of the Physicians and the Chairman of the Board.

Duties of Clerk and Store-keeper.

58. He is, under the control of the Board and direction of the Manager, to have charge of the stores of the institution, and to receive the same and be accountable for the quantity and quality, so as to show the issues of every sort, ordinary as well as extra, and to check the issue and consumption with each other.

59. He is to attend at such house as the Board shall direct for the issue of stores, of which he is to keep accurate entries; and the hours are to be so fixed that ample time may be allowed for the cooking and preparation of the various meals.

60. He is, as far as possible, to see that no misapplication of food or other articles occurs after having been issued from the stores, and is from time to time to observe the patients at their meals, and judge whether they have received their regular allowances.

CHIEF CLERK. 61. He is to attend in the office as may be directed by the Board, and assist in making out the accounts and copying such documents as may be necessary.

General Order for the Government of all the Lunatic Asylums in Ireland. 62. He is to reside at the Asylum, unless the Board shall otherwise permit, in which case they shall enter in the minute book the permission, and the grounds particularly upon which it is granted; and if by reason of such permission the lunatics or the interests of the Asylum shall suffer, the permission shall be revoked.

63. He is to keep an account of the clothing, exhibiting in a clear manner the quantities from time to time received, the articles delivered out, together with the divisions in which such articles have been supplied, and on no account to issue any articles from store in lieu of any other article of the same kind unless the old one or the remnant thereof be returned in exchange or satisfactorily accounted for.

64. He is to keep an account of the receipts and issues of coals, candles, soap, &c., &c., also an inventory of the furniture, beds, bedding, linen, &c., &c.

65. He is, next to the Manager, to exercise a superintendence over the keepers, nurses, and servants, who are to look up to him as a superior, he is to report to the Manager any breach of discipline which he may observe, and is to consider himself an officer of trust who is expected to advance the interests of the institution by all means in his power.

Servants.

66. As the Manager is responsible for the character, conduct, and qualifications of all the servants of the Asylum, he is to have the appointment of them, subject to the approval of the Board.

67. The servants of the Asylum are at all times to conduct themselves with regularity and decorum, and observe in their persons neatness and strict cleanliness.

68. They are never to use any harsh or intemperate language to patients, but should, by steadiness, kindness, and gentleness, contribute to that system of moral government upon which the value of the Asylum depends.

69. They are on no account to receive any perquisites, either in money or value, from patients or from the friends of patients admitted to the Asylum; any infraction of this rule is to be followed by immediate dismissal.

Gardener.

70. He is to attend at the house named by the Manager to receive the different orders for their respective labours in the public ground.

71. He is to be accountable for all patients while so employed, and report any case that may be unfit for confinement at work; he is also to be answerable for all articles of householdry under his charge. But at all times a keeper shall attend to watch over the patients at work, although not to interfere in the direction of their labours. But when the Manager is of opinion that the gardener is competent to take care of one or more patients put into the garden, the presence of a keeper may be dispensed with.

72. He is to use all diligence in cultivating the ground, so as to afford the greatest variety of employment, and the most profitable produce.

73. He is particularly to obey all orders he may receive from the Manager, and in no case absent himself without leave.

Gate-keeper.

74. He is to be responsible that the gate-house and the ground adjoining are at all times kept in a state of perfect neatness.

75. He is not to keep pigs, poultry, or any other thing calculated to create a nuisance at the lodge.

76. He is not to admit any applicant or claimant within the gate without a written order from the Manager, which the latter is to take care in all proper cases to supply in due time.

77. He is not to permit any servant on the establishment to go out without a written pass signed by the Manager, or, in his absence, by the Matron, he is to enter these passes in a book kept for that purpose, to be signed by the Matron, and to be countersigned by the Manager, and to be kept by the hall porter with his own list.

78. He is on no account to allow (without the written authority of the Manager or Matron) any liquor to be introduced by the servants; and no visitor is to be allowed to give anything of any sort to a patient without the permission of the Manager or Matron. He is also to report any servant whom he may observe intoxicated, or attempting to introduce liquor within the gate.

79. He is to obey all orders given to him by the Manager.

Hall Porter.

80. He is to be in attendance in the hall (unless specially employed in other duties) each day between ten o'clock, a.m., and five o'clock, p.m.; in case of absence his place is to be supplied by the housemaid or some other public servant.

81. He is to keep a book in which the names of all persons going out on passes are to be entered, with the precise time of their departure and return.

82. He is to light the house and passage lamps at the hours appointed, to keep the hall and yards clean; and he is not to permit any article to be removed from the establishment without the permission of the Manager.

83. He is to lock the passages and hall-doors at the appointed hours, and deliver up the keys to the Manager.

84. He is to be particular in obeying all directions which he may receive from the Manager.

Keeper.

85. They are to remain constantly in charge of their respective patients, and by no means to absent themselves unless permitted to go out by a written pass signed by the Manager, and shall take care that each patient in their charge shall be under constant observation.

86. They are strictly to observe all rules that shall be made by the Board for the regulation of their duties.

87. They are on ring of bell in the morning to take up the male patients, to clean, dress, and remove them to their day-rooms; should any patient appear to need restraint, the Keeper is not to apply any instrument of restraint, but to remove the patient in a calm and steady manner to his sleeping room, and immediately report the case to the Manager.

88. They are to shave their respective patients on Wednesday and Saturday in each week, and keep their hair constantly cut; they are also to be particular in reporting to the Manager every morning any change that may have taken place in any of the patients during the night, that the same may be entered on the Morning Statement Book for consideration.

89. They are to keep their own premises and private rooms in a state of exact regularity and cleanliness, and attend to all orders issued to them by the Manager.

90. They are, in their communications with the Physician, to state to him all the circumstances relating to each patient within their knowledge, and they are strictly to obey his orders relative to the patients, and conduct themselves towards him with the utmost respect.

Nurses.

91. The Nurses on the male side are to take care that the day-rooms are perfectly clean, and ready to receive the patients in the morning.

92. As soon as the patients are removed to the day-rooms they are to have the sleeping-rooms, galleries, and corridors perfectly clean and well ventilated, beds folded, &c., &c., before ten o'clock, a.m., in summer, and eleven o'clock, a.m., in winter; and the beds are not to be made before five o'clock, p.m.

93. They are to attend the kitchen at the ringing of the Cook's bell, to receive the provisions, and make a fair and equal distribution of them to their respective patients, according to the regulated proportions.

ORDERED Council.

General Order for the Governors of all the Asylums in Ireland.

94. They are to perform the same duties in reference to the Physicians as are directed for the Keepers.

95. They are to be responsible to the Matron for the cleanliness and care of bedding, linen, &c., &c., in their respective divisions, to keep them in perfect order, and, when repairs are wanted, to report the same to the Matron.

96. They are to deliver out their foul linen to the Landladies on the appointed days, with a ticket specifying the description and number of articles, and are to compare the ticket with the clean linen when returned, and are to report any neglect, on the part of the Landladies, in not returning them all, or not in proper order.

97. The Nurses on the female side are to perform the like several duties, in addition to the regulating of their patients, in a manner similar to that prescribed under the head "Keepers."

98. Every Nurse is to have her ward book properly marked off previously to each pay day.

Assistant Nurses.

99. They are to be considered as appointed to carry into effect the regulations which are laid down for Nurses; they are to clean the galleries, corridors, sleeping rooms of their respective divisions, and have them ready for inspection at the appointed hours. Their promotion to the place of Nurses is to depend on the manner in which their duties are performed, and their conduct is accordingly to be reported in the Daily Statement Book.

Cook and Landladies.

100. The Cook and Landladies are to observe such rules as may be laid down for their guidance by the Board, and are to obey all orders of the Manager and Matron.

The Cook.

101. The Cook is to attend at the store at the appointed hour, to receive the provisions, and to take care that they are cooked in a proper manner, ready for distribution at the appointed times, and in strict conformity with the regulations that may be established with respect to this department.

102. She is to see that the kitchen and kitchen utensils are at all times perfectly clean, and that no servant or patient be permitted to enter in the kitchen.

103. She is to take care that a sufficiency of hot water is ready, at all proper hours, to enable the Nurses to clean up the wards, corridors, &c., and to supply any urgent demand.

Landladies.

104. She is to receive all foul clothes, bedding, and house linen, belonging to the inmates of the Asylum, on the appointed days, for the purpose of being carefully washed and made up.

105. She is to deliver out the same, according to the entries on the Laundry Book, before twelve o'clock at noon on Friday in each week, in order that the large boiler may be made available for the use of the bath-rooms on Fridays and Saturdays.

106. She is to be particular in delivering up to the respective Nurses such female patients as may have been engaged in the laundry whenever it is closed for meals or at other times.

The form of the Morning Statement Book to be modified according to the foregoing Rules.

No. 17.—FURTHER GENERAL RULES FOR DISTRICT ASYLUMS.

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland.

Dr. CAREY.

Whereas by our Order made on the 27th day of March, 1845, we did make, frame, and establish certain general rules and regulations for the good conduct and management of the several District Lunatic Asylums in Ireland. And whereas it is expedient that certain of the said rules should be altered in some respects.

Further
General Order for District
Asylums.

Now we, the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council of Ireland, by virtue of the powers given unto us by the statutes in such case made and provided, do order and direct, that the first of said general rules, respecting the meetings of governors, shall be annulled, and that, in place thereof, the following rule shall be substituted and established:—

"Two General Meetings of the Governors, five to constitute a quorum, to be held at the Asylum in every year—the first, on the second Wednesday in February; the second, on the second Wednesday in July, or on such other fixed days as the Board may decide upon as more convenient for the intended purpose. A general statement of the establishment, its expenditure, &c., shall be submitted by the manager to the meeting, so as to be revised and authenticated thereat; and an abstract of the account, with such remarks as the manager may deem necessary, and the Board shall approve of, shall be signed by the chairman, and a sufficient number of copies printed for circulation; twenty-four to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Grand Jury for each County within the District, to be distributed to the Jury at the ensuing Assizes, and two to be forwarded to each Governor."

And we further order, that the fourth regulation under the head of the sixteenth general rule, relating to the duties of the Manager, shall be annulled, and that, in place thereof, the following regulation be made and established:—

"The Morning Statement Book, containing a return of the number of patients, divided according to their sexes; the names of those admitted and discharged, specifying whether cured, relieved, or harmless and amenable; the names of those who have died; the number employed; the names of those under restraint or exclusion, and the causes thereof; the number under medical treatment; the visit and hour of visit of the respective medical officers, which latter is to be duly filled and signed by them. This daily return to be countersigned by the manager, who shall be held responsible for its accuracy. The causes of restraint to be entered by the Manager on the days when the Physician attends, in his presence."

And we further order, that the twenty-ninth of said general rules shall be annulled, and that the following rule shall be established and substituted in place thereof:—

"He is from time to time to report to the Physician, such cases as appear to require particular attention or treatment, and same to be carefully observed such directions as may be given by the Physician; and shall, whenever requested by the Physician, accompany him in his visits round the house."

And we further order and direct, that the forty-fifth of said general rules, respecting the duties of the Physician, shall be annulled, and that, in place thereof, the following rule shall be established and substituted:—

"The Physician is to direct, either orally or in writing, as he shall think proper, the course of moral and medical treatment of the patients; and constant regard is to be had to the means of amusement and employment afforded to them."

Given at the Council Chamber, in Dublin, the 13th day of April, 1844.

Further General Rule for District Asylums. No. 19.—FURTHER GENERAL RULES FOR DISTRICT ASYLUMS

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland.
Sir, GENTLEMEN.

Whereas, by an Order of this Board, of the 27th of March, 1843, certain General Rules were made, framed, and established, for the good conduct and management of the several District Lunatic Asylums in Ireland: And whereas, by another order of this Board, bearing date the 13th of April, 1844, certain alterations in the said rules and regulations were made.

And whereas it is expedient that certain further rules should be added thereto.

Now We, the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council of Ireland, by virtue of the powers given unto us by the Statute in that case made and provided do order and direct that the following further Rules shall be added unto, and form a part of, the said rules and regulations, made, framed, and established as aforesaid.

1. That the respective Boards of Governors, the Managers, and Masters of the District Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, do effect every facility to the admission of the several chaplains appointed thereto, in order to enable them to officiate according to their respective creeds, and to afford religious instruction and consolation to all patients, except such as shall be declared by the Physician to be unfit and incapable of understanding the nature of the service, and of appreciating the effects of religion.

2. That the chaplains shall attend on Sundays, as well as on other days appointed by the ordinances of their respective churches, for religious service, which shall be performed at such hours as shall be agreed upon as most convenient to the clergyman of each church; and they shall in cases of illness visit at any time when noticed to do so.

3. That controversial subjects shall be scrupulously avoided, both in public service and in private visitations.

4. That each patient shall, during his sojourn in the Asylum, be visited solely by the clergyman of the religion to which he belongs on his admission, and under the denomination of which he is registered.

5. That each chaplain do keep a separate monthly book, in which he shall state the duties performed; the number of visits to each patient; the number of patients and servants attending Divine Service; and the general results of his religious ministrations; with such other observations as he may think proper to make: and that he submit the same, when required, to the Inspectors, the Governors, Manager, and Physician of the Asylum.

6. And we do hereby further order and direct that the Thirteenth General Rule, made by the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council, on the 27th of March, 1843, be annulled as regards the patients of the religious denominations of the respective chaplains; but that the said rule shall be in force as to all other patients.

ORDER IN COUNCIL. No. 20.—COPY ORDER, making, framing, and establishing annexed RULES and REGULATIONS for the GOOD CONDUCT and MANAGEMENT of the CENTRAL CRIMINAL LUNATIC ASYLUM.

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland
CLARENCE.

Whereas by an Act of Parliament passed in the eighth and ninth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intitled "An Act for the Establishment of a Central Asylum for Insane Persons charged with Offences in Ireland; and to amend the Act relating to the Prevention of Offences by Insane Persons, and the Acts respecting Asylums for the Insane Poor in Ireland, and for appropriating the Lunatic Asylum in the city of Cork to the purposes of a District Asylum," it is amongst other things, enacted that it shall and may be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, from time to time, to make, frame, and establish any rules and regulations which may be necessary or proper for the good conduct and management of the said Central Asylum, and from time to time to revoke, alter, or make new such rules and regulations.

We, the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice aforesaid, by virtue of the powers given unto us by the above in part recited Act, do hereby make, frame and establish the annexed rules and regulations for the good conduct and management of the said Central Asylum, and direct that the same shall be observed therein.

LETTER FROM COLONEL LARCOM TO THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMISSION in reference to fixing the MAXIMUM NUMBER OF LUNATICS admissible into DISTRICT ASYLUMS. Letter from Col. Larcom

Dublin Castle, 5th March, 1858.

Sir,—Referring to your letter of the 6th of November last, relative to the maximum number of lunatics admissible into District Lunatic Asylums, I am directed to acquaint you that no order has ever been made by the Lord Lieutenant under the 18th section 6 & 7 Viet. c. 107, fixing the maximum number of lunatics admissible into the several District Lunatic Asylums. The Order in Council for the erection of New Asylums, specify the number which each is to be capable of containing; but the number so specified has not been considered as a maximum for the admissions, and it appears from the Reports of the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums that the number for whom accommodation is actually provided is in some instances less, and in others greater, than the number mentioned in the order in Council.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
THOMAS A. LARCOM.

M. J. Barry, Esq.,
Lunatic Asylums Commission, Ely-place.

LIST OF OFFICERS APPOINTED BY THE LORD LIEUTENANT TO DISTRICT LUNATIC ASYLUMS.* Officer appointed by the Lord Lieutenant

1. Resident Physician, and Manager.
(Of late years the two offices are combined in one individual by the appointment of a medical man.)
2. Visiting Physician.
3. Surgeon. (Only in Richmond.)
4. Apothecary.
5. Matron.
6. Chaplain.
7. Clerk and Store-keeper.

The other officers and servants are directed to be appointed by the Manager, subject to the approval of the Board.

DISTRICT ASYLUMS.
Instructions

of Architects.

INSTRUCTIONS for the GUIDANCE of ARCHITECTS, when FURNISHING DESIGNS for LUNATIC ASYLUMS.

The building to be erected at is intended to contain patients, with the requisite accommodation for officers and attendants. The Architect will bear in mind, that he is designing a Hospital and not a Prison, taking care, while he provides a building capable of affording the necessary classification and security for patients labouring under the excitement attendant on mental disease, that the appearance of restraint and confinement may be as much as possible avoided. The enclosure walls need not be more than six feet six inches high. The side-yard walls may be made five feet six inches in height, or iron railings may be provided, except where yards are used for refractory patients. It will be unnecessary to provide iron bars for any windows.

The main front of the building and day-rooms to have, if possible, an aspect about north-east to south-west; and in arranging the general plan, it is desirable to avoid having the yards at the rear much enclosed by projecting buildings.

The style of architecture best suited to the general quality of the building materials in this country, and admitting also of additions being easily made to the Asylum hereafter, is the "Gothic"—the main walls being of uncoarse rubble masonry, with cut-stone gables and dressings. It is open, however, to the Architect to submit his views to the Commissioners respecting any other style that he may consider more suitable. Whatever style may be adopted, no external coating of stone or other composition will be allowed.

The whole of the corridors, day-rooms, and sleeping rooms, to be lined with bricks, but not plastered. There should be a second flooring between the ground and first floors; but this may be dispensed with between the first and second floors. The day-rooms and corridors to be provided with open fire-places.

The number of single rooms to be provided need not exceed one-third of the whole number of patients; they may be made seven by nine and twelve feet high.

The dormitories may be constructed to contain from three to twelve beds each, according to the architectural arrangements will admit; at the same time, if dormitories for three patients can be avoided, so much the better. Although the maximum is fixed at twelve, in some well managed Asylums in this country, a greater number of patients sleep in the same dormitory without inconvenience to the regulations of the establishments; so that if circumstances rendered it very desirable, one or two rooms might be provided for as many as fifteen patients. In all cases there should be a space of at least two feet between the patients' beds.

There should be day-rooms provided in each ward, their size depending on the number of patients. It has been found an economical arrangement in some of the English Asylums, to make a portion of the corridor serve as a day-room, by adding a projection well lighted. The comfort of this arrangement might be increased by having folding doors sliding into the projecting walls, so as in winter to enclose a portion of the corridor in which an open fire-place, in that portion of the corridor, should be provided.

It will be desirable to have the wards so arranged with respect to each other, and to the means of communication, that the medical officer and others on inspection, may not have to retrace their steps.

In making the design, there should be a division of the Asylum into three distinct classes for each sex, and a complete separation of sexes. The worst class of patients such as refractory and epileptic, generally occupying the ground floor—the greatest proportion of single rooms will be required for this class. There may, however, be one or two dormitories for small numbers provided, with rooms for attendants in the proportion of one to every ten patients.

On the first floor of the building, the proportion of single rooms may be diminished, and the dormitories made to hold as many as eight or ten patients each, with rooms for attendants, say one to every fourteen patients.

On the upper floor of the building, where the patients are quiet and harmless, very few single rooms will be required, and those only, to be used in case of patients becoming troublesome during the night. The attendants on this class will be one to every sixteen patients.

In each separate ward, a warm bath, a water closet, and a washing room must be provided. When the arrangement will not admit of a small store-room being provided, a large press for clothes in the corridor will suffice for each ward.

In planning the attendants' rooms, it is desirable to have them near the dormitories, and if immediately adjoining, there may be an opening between them for inspection purposes.

The corridors need not exceed ten feet in width, and the windows in them should be large, to open at the top. The windows of the hallings generally will be large, and all, or nearly all the windows to be of metal, the windows may be set as low as three feet six inches from the floor. The doors to the single rooms for patients, should be made to open outwards.

The kitchen to be large and well ventilated, detached from the main building, and approached under cover—the laundry, work-house, and drying-room, all to be of large dimensions, so as to allow of an increased number of patients being admitted to the Asylum, without having to alter these offices.

Two or three work-rooms (for trades) will be required, in or adjoining the building on the male side. The laundry will be approached from the female side, without passing by the entrance to the kitchen.

An engine room must be provided at the rear of the kitchen, the boiler of which will supply the laundry and kitchen with hot water and steam for cooking.

Sleeping rooms for a cook and landlady, and two rooms for steward or clerk will be required, as well as stores for meat and bread. A bakery and dairy should also be near the other stores. A large store-room for the madmen must be provided.

The residences to be provided will be for a medical officer in charge, a principal attendant, and a surgeon. There should also be an office for a clerk, a board-room, surgery, and hall-porter's room. Two rooms, one on each side of entrance-building, to be provided for the reception of male and female patients on first arriving, and for friends of patients, when visiting them.

Sleeping yards will be adjoining the buildings—any two on each side, with separate approaches thereto. The tranquil patients can have access to the pleasure-grounds for exercise.

The staircases leading to the two upper floors should be walled up to the top, and not left with open mills. Partition walls, fire-proof, with iron doors to cut off communication, should be erected at convenient intervals.

An infirmary for each sex, detached from the main buildings, to accommodate, say ten per cent. on the number of patients in Asylum, with beds and water-closets, kitchen, and attendants' rooms, to be provided; also, a chapel, with sittings for half the number of persons in the Asylum, will be required; it is also desirable to have a large room, that can be used both as a school and music-room. These may be arranged as detached buildings, or as forming part of the main building. Stables and farm-offices not to be placed close to the main building. A lodge at the principal entrance to be provided for a gate-keeper.

In preparing plans, it will be unnecessary for the architect to provide for heating and ventilating the main buildings.

The architect will be required to furnish two complete sets of copies of the contract plans—one for the Commissioners of Public Works, and the second for the use of the clerk of the works and the contractor, to be made to a scale of one-eighth of an inch to a foot.

* Information on detailed windows and other points, can be obtained on application to the Commissioners.

† Where the number of patients to be provided for, is under 300, the residences will be for a manager and a matron.

DOCUMENTS FURNISHED BY THE INSPECTORS OF LUNATICS.

DUTIES
INSPEC-TORS OF LUNATICS.

No. 1.—STATEMENT of the DUTIES of the INSPECTORS of LUNATICS and of their OFFICE.

The Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums held office under the provisions of the Acts 5 and 6 Vic., c. 123, and 8 and 9 Vic., c. 107. The duties performed by them have reference to all Lunatic Asylums, private and public—as the lunatics confined in goals, to those in workhouses and elsewhere, to all certified lunatics wherever located, and to the management of the Government Institution at Dundrum, which is placed altogether under their control and supervision.

With reference to public asylums, the Inspectors are members of all the Boards of Governors thereof, and invariably attend at the meetings, generally in rotation, but in some institutions more frequently than others—for example, in new asylums, with a view to getting them into working order, and to assist the Board by their experience and advice. Independent attendance at Board meetings the Inspectors make other frequent visitations.

Investigations and inquiries affecting the general management, the conduct of officers and servants, as well as complaints of patients, if deemed serious, and all accidents of any importance are specially and locally investigated by them.

With regard to the business of the department, all letters and communications having reference to asylums, or to the insane, are addressed to the office, and entered daily in a book called the "General Registry of Letters Received," in the following form (A), being numbered in chronological order from the beginning of each year.

The documents, when acted on, are filed in portfolios, classified under the heads of the several asylums, goals, and Governmental departments with which the office corresponds, as "Arrangh Asylum," "Belfast Goal," "Chief Secretary's Office," &c., &c. Papers are thus easy of reference, from their minute classification, and their numbers directing to the entries in the "Registry of Letters Received," and in the "Registry of Letters Despatched," (B) indicate the steps taken in each case.

The number so removed (Form N) amounted, in 1855, to 445. This year 420 have been removed; and as each transfer involves fourteen entries in the books of the office, the number of entries under this head alone was, consequently, in 1855, 6,310; and in the present year, 5,880.

There were, in 1855, 3,578 communications received and registered, and 4,046 have been received and registered this year, the number despatched being, for the same periods respectively, 1,369 and 2,594.

Communications on all matters connected with the Inspector's office, addressed direct to Government, are referred by the Chief Secretary to the Inspector for Inquiry and Report. Such are entered in a "Reference Book" (Form O), and the reports therein copied into a book called the "Government Report Book." The number of files so referred in 1855 was 179, and in 1856, 178, the number of reports made regarding them being, in the former period, 213, and in the latter, 310, extending over 331 pages of the "Report Book." The Inspectors have also frequent personal communication with Government on matters relating to their department.

The course adopted in reference to the admission of cases is as follows:—When a prisoner has been acquitted of any grave crime, on the ground of insanity, or becomes insane while undergoing sentence in goal, the Inspectors, on being notified of the fact, obtain the necessary documents, or copies of the information, criminal, finding of jury, and rule of court, certified by the Clerk of the Crown, together with medical certificates of insanity; and having satisfied themselves that the case is a proper one for admission into the Central Asylum, the Lord Lieutenant is moved to issue a transfer warrant.

The accounts are furnished monthly, together with vouchers (Forms Q, R, and S), which are strictly examined, and, if not correct, returned for amendment. When accurate, they are transmitted to the Audit Office in London. The annual Parliamentary estimate is prepared by the Inspectors, and the quarterly estimates for advances revised and corrected. Contracts for supplies are also made and duly registered in this office, a bond being required in every case for due fulfilment of same.

PRIVATE LUNATIC ASYLUMS, LICENSED UNDER THE ACT 5 AND 6 VIC., c. 123.

DUTY OF THE INSPECTOR
ASYLUMS.

These institutions, of which there are fifteen, including Swift's Hospital and the Bloomfield Retreat, which are exempt from payment of License fees, are under the constant supervision of the Inspectors. The Inspectors' minutes of visitations are duly recorded in the office, and copies transmitted to the Clerks of Peace for the information of magistrates at Quarter Sessions, when issuing licenses.

On a license being granted, a copy, as directed by the Act, is sent to the Inspectors, and registered in a book kept for the purpose (Form T). A notification of same is given to the Paymaster of Civil Services, and certificates of the amount payable thereon (Form U) transmitted to the Clerk of the Peace, who, accordingly, lodges same in the hands of the paymaster; and, at the expiration of each official year, a return of the licenses issued, and sums received, is made by the Inspectors to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts.

Appended is a tabular statement showing, as far as can be done in each shape, the business transacted in the Office of Lunatic Asylums in the two years ended respectively 31st December, 1855, and 1856, which, together with the foregoing forms, will, it is hoped, give a general insight into the nature and extent of the duties of the Inspectors and their staff, which consists of a chief clerk and one assistant.

It may be hardly necessary to allude to the fact that a very extensive correspondence arises out of the various subjects embraced in the foregoing statement, and that the periodical compilation of the Inspectors' Parliamentary Reports, and their Reports on Private Asylums to the Lord Lieutenant and the Lord Chancellor, increases the business to such an extent as to necessitate many hours' overwork daily for a considerable period of the year.

No. 2.—RETURN relative to LICENSED HOUSES and SINGLE PATIENTS.

RETURN
LICENSED
AND
PATIENTS.

I.—A RETURN of the NUMBER of LICENSED HOUSES in existence at the present time.

Remark.—(Of these, the Mountfort Retreat and Swift's Hospital (being charitable institutions) are exempt from the payment of licence fees.)

II.—A RETURN of the NUMBER of INFORMATION on OATH, laid before the INSPECTORS, of MALPRACTICES, having taken place in any licensed house, and of the right visits made in consequence, under sec. 52, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 123.

RE.—(The Inspectors have visited Licensed Houses after nightfall, from time to time, but not from information of malpractices.)

III.—A RETURN of the NUMBER of CASES of SINGLE PATIENTS in UNLICENSED HOUSES, in which Copies of the Order and Certificate accompanying Admissions have been forwarded to the Inspectors in each year, and the state of mind of each single patient, under sec. 37, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 123.

The number of cases in which returns have been regularly made do not average so annually since the passing of the Act, it being nearly impossible to obtain information, and the law being easily evaded; for example—we are informed that there is at present in a hydropathic establishment a patient who was removed from a private asylum, retained at home for some time, and then sent to the establishment referred to, as labouring simply under "nervousness."

IV.—A RETURN of the NUMBER of LICENSED RESIDUES, under 5 & 6 Vic. cap. 123, since the Act came into operation.

RE.—(Full Return furnished 23rd October, 1856).

V.—A RETURN of the NUMBER of SERIAL VISITATIONS DIRECTED by the LORD CHANCELLOR, in each year, since the passing of the Act.

NUMBER
MADE BY THE INSPECTOR.

LETTER RELATING
STATE OF THE LAW.

No. 4.—LETTER TO THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMISSION, in reference to the existing state of the Law, and proposed alterations.

Dublin Castle, January 26, 1853.

SIR,

I trust that the non-failure of a provision made by my late colleague, when giving testimony before the Commissioners of Inquiry, to the effect, "That he would submit our views with reference to alterations and amendments in the existing lunacy laws or regulations of this country," has not been deemed disrespectful on my part towards the Board of which you are Chairman.

The melancholy accident that occurred to Dr. White, whilst on our official tour, immediately after his examination, has, as you are aware, utterly precluded him from taking, since then, any part in public business; hence I felt a necessity in submitting my own opinions unsupported by his advice and experience; however such these opinions might emanate from a knowledge of the working, in all its details, of a department over which I have been one of the two controllers heads for a period of nearly twelve years.

The opportunities afforded to the Commission of Inquiry, and the advantages taken of those will, no doubt, supply an information sufficiently ample and satisfactory for the important objects of its issue.

In the last report (1851) which the Inspectors had the honour to address to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant for presentation to Parliament, they again referred to this question at large, having long felt the anomalous condition of their psychiatric branch of the public service, from a not sufficiently digested legislation, more or less unjust in its financial bearings, and so indistinct as to admit of cases transactionally as exceptional as those coming within its immediate scope. In the general working of the department, I believe that the readiest solution of difficulties will be obtained through the constitution of a competent Board, possessed of a well-defined authority, with power to make all rules and regulations, and responsible alone (save in cases coming within the jurisdiction of the Lord Chancellor and superior courts of law), to the Lord Lieutenant in Council.

Unlike other public establishments, where the community at large is fully capable to judge of their management, institutions for the insane require a peculiar system, which, in my opinion, can be alone efficiently carried out through a direct governmental control.

Tonifying, if required, at any time the use, such as it may be, of my humble experience in the details of official business, and as bearing on the present inquiry,

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

JAMES MURPHY.

Sir Thomas N. Redington, K.C.B.

of insane persons charged with offences in Ireland, the Rules of the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums shall visit that establishment together, or separately, once in each month, or oftener if they shall think proper.

2. On each monthly visitation the Inspectors or Inspector shall specially examine into the health, appearance, and conduct of the patients then confined in the asylum, and note in a book, to be called "The Inspectors' Report Book," such observations as may be deemed useful for the information of Government; and they shall on such visits make all the inquiries directed by the statute 8 & 9 Victoria, cap. 107.

3. The Inspectors shall investigate all complaints, and be empowered to suspend all officers or servants, on the charges being proved, and shall forthwith report thereupon for the information of the Lord Lieutenant.

4. The Inspectors are to report half-yearly to the Chief or Under Secretary the general state of the institution, the number of inmates, &c., &c., with particular reference to such cases as they may deem it advisable to notice; and on the recovery of every inmate they are to submit to the Chief or Under Secretary the name of the individual so recovered; the offence with which charged, if entitled, or of which acquitted on the plea of insanity; together with the general character and conduct of each individual, for the information of the Lord Lieutenant.

5. The Inspectors shall jointly or separately examine on each monthly visitation the accounts of the asylum, checking and comparing the various vouchers and receipts given and received by the Governor during the preceding month, which documents are to be duly indexed by both or either of them.

6. All regulations for the advance of money from the Treasury for the support of the asylum, by way of estimate, as well as for the payment of the sums already expended, shall be investigated by the Inspectors and by them transmitted to the Chief or Under Secretary.

7. The Inspectors shall advertise for, receive, and select all tenders for contracts for the Central Asylum at Dundrum, at their office in the Castle.

Visiting Physician.

8. The Visiting Physician to the Dundrum Central Asylum is to attend three times a week, or oftener if required, entering on each session the date and period of his visit. Whilst going through the house he is to be accompanied by the Resident Physician, with whom he shall consult as to the medical and moral treatment of the patients, and order such regimen, &c., &c., as he shall think fit.

9. In conjunction with the Resident Physician he shall keep, at the asylum, a registry or history of the symptoms and treatment of the patients; and, on the reception of any lunatic, sign the official return which is to be forwarded to the office of the Inspectors.

10. He is, when requiring absence for more than a week, to notify his intention to the Inspectors, that suitable provision may be made in case of need.

11. In all cases of the death of a patient he is to examine as far as possible into the physical circumstances connected with the insanity of the deceased, and make an entry in the Registry of the Asylum, of the post mortem appearances, with any observations he may deem useful thereon, for the advance of science, and the utility of such lectures as he may be called on to deliver, pursuant to the statute.

Governor and Resident Physician.

12. The Governor and Resident Physician shall, under the control of the Inspectors, regulate the entire establishment, and shall devote his best exertions to its successful management; at no period absencing himself for more than two consecutive days without previous notification to the Inspectors, so as to enable them to make arrangements during his absence.

13. He shall be most particular in the regularity with which the various books of the Asylum are kept, and be responsible for all moneys placed to his credit, as well as for the accuracy of his disbursements and receipts.

RULES OF THE CENTRAL
DUNDRUM.

No. 5.—RULES AND REGULATIONS for the GOVERNMENT of the CENTRAL LUNATIC ASYLUM at DUNDRUM, ordered and established by the LORD LIEUTENANT and COUNCIL of IRELAND, August 22, 1850.

1. In order to effect the better management and control of the Central Asylum at Dundrum for the reception

14. He shall have his books always ready for inspection, and the monthly accounts duly prepared for examination at the Asylum Office. He shall submit all vouchers, as well as a list of any furniture or other articles that may be required, to the Inspectors, and through them, convey every communication connected with the establishment to the Chief or Under Secretary.

15. He is to see that the strictest order be observed in every department; that all the attendants and servants conduct themselves with propriety, and that the utmost cleanliness and decorum be regarded by them in their dress and habits of life.

16. He is to attend the Visiting Physician through the wards, and consult in unison with him the mental and physical treatment of the patients, and assist with him in keeping the Medical Journal, or "Case Book."

17. In the absence of the Visiting Physician he shall act as the general director of the whole medical department of the institution, and be responsible for its due administration.

18. He shall inspect the corridors and apartments every forenoon and evening, and give such directions as he may think fit to the attendants with reference to the treatment of the inmates, and direct the attention of the Matron to any irregularity or misconduct that may occur within her department.

19. He shall exercise a general supervision over the various articles contracted for as to quality and quantity, and if deficient on either point, forbid their delivery, and procure a supply elsewhere at the contractor's expense.

20. He is at all times, and in all places, to encourage habits of industry amongst the inmates, and have them engaged as much as possible in out-door work, but under the most cautious observation.

The Matron.

21. The Matron shall exercise immediate superintendence, but in position subordinate to the Governor, over the female department of the Dandrum Asylum.

22. She is to take particular care that cleanliness and good ventilation are attended to.

23. She is to look after the linen-clothing, bedding, linen, &c., of the patients and attendants, that they be kept in good repair, and shall take care that without the slightest waste there is a regular supply of sheeting, stockings, shirts, &c., &c.; and she is to be particular as to the order in which the kitchen, laundry, pantry, and dairy are kept.

24. She shall accompany the Physician when visiting the female side of the asylum, both morning and evening, and report to him any irregularity or cause of complaint she may notice.

25. She is to reside constantly in the asylum, and to employ the female patients as advantageously as possible to themselves and to the establishment.

Clerk and Store-keeper.

26. The Clerk and Store-keeper is to attend regularly at a quarter to eight o'clock in the morning, and remain in the Asylum till four p.m., (time of meals excepted.)

27. He shall have charge of the stores of the establishment, be accountable for the quantity and quality received by him, and keep an accurate return of the amount issued.

28. He is to sign the Pass-book kept by the various contractors for milk, bread, meat, &c., &c., on the delivery of the articles, and to sign the receipts for every other article employed for consumption by the patients and servants, or for the general use of the house.

29. He is to make an entry of the different materials issued by him for the purposes of manufacture, and keep an exact inventory of the furniture.

30. In the daily delivery of food to the cook or his assistants, he shall be particular that the quantity be proportionate to the demand in the different divisions as specified in the Dietary Book.

31. As Clerk, he shall attend daily in the Governor's office, to assist in drawing out official documents, writing letters, &c., &c., and to keep all accounts, fiscal or other, connected with the Dandrum Asylum.

The Chaplain.

32. The Chaplain is to attend at the Dandrum Asylum on Sundays and holidays to officiate according to their respective creeds: they are, moreover, to visit the institution once in the week, at least, to administer religious instructions to those susceptible of its influence. They shall, in case of illness, attend at any time when called to do so.

The Apothecary.

33. The Apothecary is to visit the Asylum regularly three times in the week, and as often as his services may be required by the Governor.

34. He is to make up all prescriptions with the greatest accuracy, and copy them into a book, to be called the "Prescription Book," to be kept in the asylum; he is to be answerable for the due administration of the medicines ordered.

The Cook.

35. The cook shall take care that in the morning, at half after seven o'clock, the kitchen be in regular order, the fires lighted, and every thing prepared for her business; she shall receive from the store-keeper the different articles to be prepared as food for the patients and attendants, and be particular as to the quantity required; she shall be responsible that the meals are properly and fully dressed at the particular periods specified for delivery.

36. She shall keep all the utensils employed by her with the greatest cleanliness, and never omit before retiring to rest to have the hollers well scoured, and the kitchen and scullery thoroughly ventilated and purified.

The Landlady.

37. The landlady shall take charge of the patients employed by her, and when their business is over, shall see that they return to the safe keeping of the attendants in their respective divisions.

38. She shall keep a book, to be called the "Lanaiery Book," in which are to be entered under separate heads the various articles, soap, lino, starch, &c., &c., received by her from the Store-keeper; and also a book, containing an exact list of the foot clothes to be washed and returned by her weekly to the Matron.

Servants and Attendants.

39. Both male and female are responsible to the Governor for their good conduct, for habits of cleanliness, order, and subordination, as well as for the most unvarying humanity towards the inmates placed under their charge.

40. They shall never absent themselves from their divisions so as to leave the patients unguarded, or attempt coercion, restraint, or confinement without the Physician's sanction.

41. In the morning they are to see that the patients are properly cleansed and washed—at night that due regard be paid to their comfort, and that they retire decently to rest.

42. They are to be present when the patients are at meals, and repeat grace before each repast; they shall pay particular attention to the clothing and becoming appearance of the patients, and contribute all in their power, both in and out of doors, to their amusement and occupation.

43. They shall be answerable for the safe keeping of the inmates under their respective care, and in the event of escape, shall be either at the expense of the recapture, or be discharged, should negligence appear to have been the cause.

44. They are to report daily to the governor the conditions of their wards and corridors, and keep a diary in reference to the patients, towards whom they are expected to conduct themselves in the most humane and considerate manner, so as to engage their confidence and affection.

Rules of the Central Asylum, Devonport. 43. No servant or attendant will be permitted access from the institution, and no admission to their friends without the governor's sanction; and on no account will children be allowed to reside in the asylum.

The Porter.

44. The Porter is to have charge of the hall and adjoining public apartments; he is to see that they are kept with neatness and order.

47. He is to record in the "Porter's Book" the names of strangers, the visiting friends to the patients, as well as the attendants of the different officers of the asylum.

48. When called on he shall assist in taking charge of the male lunatics, and render himself generally useful.

49. In the morning, during the summer months, he is at half-past five o'clock to ring the bell to call up the servants and attendants; during the winter, at a quarter to seven.

50. At night he is to see that all the doors are locked, and the different yards duly protected, in summer, at nine o'clock, P.M.; and in winter, at eight, P.M. He shall deposit all the keys intrusted to him with the Governor.

Gardener and Lead Steward.

51. The Gardener and Lead Steward is to report himself present to the Porter during the summer months at seven o'clock in the morning, and to remain till six, P.M. In the winter months, that is, from the 1st October to the 1st March, at eight o'clock, A.M., and to remain till four, P.M.

52. He shall take charge of all the implements used on the farm, and be accountable for them. He is to superintend the laborers when employed on the grounds, and to assist the attendants generally in the care and observation of them.

53. He shall make no purchase whatever of seeds, shrubs, &c., &c., without a written direction from the Governor; neither shall he employ laborers without an order to do so.

54. He is to have a Farm and Garden Book of the expenditure and produce in his department; and occasionally enter in it the amount of vegetables delivered by him from time to time for the use of the asylum.

55. He shall be responsible for the neatness, order, and cultivation of the grounds, and the good condition of the farm.

General Regulations as to the Patients.

56. Patients on admission shall be washed, dressed, &c., &c.; and when examined as to bodily health by the Physician, are to be placed in the division most suitable to the general symptoms of their mental affection; and if not already decently attired, are to be clothed in the costume of the institution.

57. The hours for rising and retiring to bed shall be, in summer and winter respectively: in the former, half-past six o'clock, A.M., and half-past eight, P.M.; in the latter, half-past seven, A.M., and eight P.M. The general hours for meals shall be: breakfast, half-past eight, A.M.; dinner, half-past two, P.M.; supper, half-past six, P.M.

58. The friends of the patients may be admitted on Tuesdays, from ten o'clock, A.M., to twelve o'clock; on Thursdays, from three to five, P.M., under the control of the Governor; but no stranger shall be allowed to visit without an order from the Chief or Under Secretary, or from the Inspectors.

59. Patients night and morning to join, so far as practicable, in common prayer; and on Sundays and holidays of obligation to attend the religious worship of their respective creeds.

60. On no account whatever, without an express order in writing from the Chief or Under Secretary, will criminal lunatics be permitted to leave the precincts of the asylum.

61. As lunatics, charged with minor offenses, may be transferred from District Asylums to the Central, they shall, at the discretion of His Excellency, and on the report of the Inspectors, be subject to be sent back to the institutions from whence they came.

62. Any servant or attendant who is guilty of harshness towards a lunatic in the Devonport Asylum, either in language, by upbraiding the unfortunate individual with the offences committed, or by an act of violence, shall be liable to immediate dismissal, and the loss of all wages due at the time.

No. 1.—MEMORIAL of the WEXFORD GRAND JURY, SPRING ASSIZES, 1856, praying for a LUNATIC ASYLUM at WEXFORD.

To His Excellency George William Frederick Earl of Carlisle, Lord Lieutenant and General Governor of Ireland.

The Memorial of the Grand Jury of the county of Wexford, assembled at the Spring Assizes, 1856.

HUMBLY SHewETH:

That the county of Wexford is at present comprised in the Carlow District for the reception of the Insane Poor.

That there are upwards of ninety lunatics from the county of Wexford now confined in the District Hospital, in Carlow; and that in consequence of deficiency of accommodation, many are retained in the several Union Workhouses, and eleven more are now confined in the County Gaol of Wexford.

That under the existing local distribution of districts much inconvenience and expense is occasioned from the over-crowding of the County Gaol, and the cost of transmission of lunatics to the District Hospital in Carlow.

That the number of lunatics from the county of Wexford largely exceeds that of those from the other counties comprised in the said District.

And your memorialists, therefore, pray that the county of Wexford may be created a separate District for the reception of Insane Poor under the provisions of the Act of 1 & 2 Geo. IV., c. 35.

That a Hospital for the reception of Insane Poor may be built within the county of Wexford.

That the sum of money contributed by the county of Wexford for building the District Hospital in Carlow may be repaid to the said county of Wexford by Her Majesty's Government, and such further sum may be advanced on loan by Her Majesty's Government, free of interest (such loan to be repaid by the said county of Wexford in instalments, extending over the term of twenty years), or may be required for building an Asylum for Insane Poor, within the county of Wexford, containing such accommodation as may be estimated to be necessary.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

No. 2.—REPORT of the INSPECTOR of LUNATICS relative to a LUNATIC ASYLUM for the COUNTY of WEXFORD.

Office of Lunatic Asylum, Dublin Castle,
5th March, 1856.

The Inspectors fully coincide in the spirit of the Memorial addressed by the Grand Jury of the county Wexford to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, and, for the reasons assigned in it, would respectfully submit that the county Wexford be separated from the District of the Carlow Asylum, which would then be restricted to two counties, namely, Kildare and Carlow. The Asylum at Carlow was originally intended for 104 patients; it now contains (and without any material structural addition) 190 inmates, exclusive of the staff.

The day-rooms and dormitories being unshared to the numbers placed in them, the Institution at all times over-crowded, would become dangerously so in case of any epidemic, so there is no infirmity accommodation whatever. Of the present inmates eighty-nine belong to the county Wexford.

The Inspectors are of opinion, that if the Carlow Asylum was confined to its own county and that of Kildare, it would be a most judicious arrangement, as by it the outstanding inmates in the two counties, could be at once accommodated; whilst the existing building, with some slight interior alterations, would admit of an infirmary, chapel, and bath-rooms.

The geographical position of the county Wexford renders it to itself a most inconvenient and expensive adjunct to the Carlow Asylum.

The Inspectors, therefore, feeling the necessity of an increased accommodation for the insane poor of the existing District, and taking the local statistics of insanity into consideration, would recommend to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant that an Asylum, capable of receiving 180 patients, be erected in the neighbourhood of Enniscorthy, for the county of Wexford, and that the county be separated from the Carlow District, and constituted a District in itself.

No. 3.—LETTER from the COMMISSIONERS of PUBLIC WORKS relative to a LUNATIC ASYLUM for the COUNTY WEXFORD.

Office of Public Works, Dublin,
30th June, 1856.

In returning herewith your reference of a Memorial from the Grand Jury of the county of Wexford, praying for the erection of a separate Lunatic Asylum for that county, together with a Report on the subject from the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums.

I am directed to state, for the information of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, that in obedience to his Excellency's instructions, an inspection has been made of the old Palace and grounds at Ferns, and of the ground in the vicinity of Enniscorthy, with a view to ascertain if a proper site could be obtained for the proposed New Asylum.

It appears that the old Palace is not capable of being converted into a Lunatic Asylum in accordance with the arrangements now in force, and approved of, for such buildings; and the grounds being low, with no view whatever from them, there is no inducement for selecting it as the site of the New Asylum.

At Enniscorthy there are a few good sites, affording a southern aspect for the front of the building. About twenty acres, statute, would be required, and so far as the Board have been able to ascertain, without communicating with the owners, the cost, per acre, will vary from £50 to £100, according to the distance from the town.

The accompanying plans, for a building to accommodate 180 patients, shows the general arrangements for patients and officers, which might be suitable for this New Asylum—to be built of bricks, with granite quizes and dressings. It is to be observed that, good building stone and lime are scarce at Enniscorthy, and the granite is brought a distance of eight miles by hand. Without taking out quantities, which is the present stage would appear to be unnecessary, an approximate estimate by the square, may be assumed as sufficient to enable the Grand Jury to come to a decision; and by this mode of calculation—

Sir,

With reference to the Memorial from the Grand Jury, at the last Spring Assizes for the county Wexford, praying for the erection of a separate Lunatic Asylum for that county, I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to transmit a copy of a Report, together with a Plan, which has been furnished to his Excellency by the Commissioners of Public Works.

Grand Jury Room, Wexford,
Summer Assizes, 1856.

Resolved,—That this Grand Jury having fully considered the letter of Colonel Larson, conveying his Excellency's approval of a previous Resolution of the Grand Jury of the county Wexford, is prepared to erect a Lunatic Asylum for the reception of 200 patients, at a cost not to exceed £20,000; and that for this purpose it will direct the County Surveyor to prepare plans, which shall be duly submitted for his Excellency's approval.

The Grand Jury further is of opinion, that it could erect such an Asylum, subject to any Government Inspection while in progress, at a cheaper cost on the county than the Board of Works think necessary.

To His Excellency the Earl of Carlisle, Lord Lieutenant General, and the Right Honourable the Privy Council of Ireland, in Council assembled.

The humble Petition of the Grand Jury of the county of Carlow, assembled at Summer Assizes, 1856.

SHewETH:

That the Lunatic Asylum of Carlow was at first built for the accommodation of the inmates of Carlow, Kildare, Wexford, and Kilkenny; that the expense of building was defrayed by these four counties.

That it is understood that the county of Wexford is about to erect an Asylum of its own; Kilkenny has already done so; and have or are about to apply to the one-payers of the county of Carlow to refund the money which said two counties originally contributed towards the Carlow Lunatic Asylum.

That the Grand Jury, as representatives of the one-payers of Carlow, would object to this application, as the same is constituted by Wexford and Kilkenny was for their own accommodation, and have been expended on that object without any benefit to the county of Carlow; and if the one-payers of said county are obliged to refund the same expended in the erection of the Asylum, they will have to pay for advantages enjoyed by other counties, and will have thrown on their heads a large building and staff far larger than their requirements, therefore useless to them, and demanding a considerable outlay every year to maintain the building.

The Grand Jury of the county of Carlow, therefore, pray that the insane patients of the county of Wexford may not be removed to a separate establishment, so long as the Carlow Lunatic Asylum affords sufficient accommodation for them.

NO. 7.—REPORT OF THE INSPECTOR OF LUNATICS ON THE MEMORIAL OF THE CARLOW GRAND JURY.

Office of Lunatic Asylums,
Dublin Castle, 29th July, 1856.

The Inspector has the honour to report, with reference to the accompanying Memorial from the Grand Jury of the county of Carlow to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, that the Carlow Asylum was opened, in 1832, for the reception of 104 patients, belonging to the district comprised in the Counties of Carlow, Kildare, Wexford, and Kilkenny. That the last named county was constituted a district in itself in 1832, on the erection of an asylum (already full) near the city of Kilkenny, for 100 inmates.

The Carlow Asylum, without any structural additions to the original building, contains, at present, 200 patients, it is consequently over-crowded, and has no chapel or infirmary accommodation.

Of the 200 patients in the Carlow Asylum, eighty-six belong to Wexford, which county has further in its prisons twenty-six dangerous lunatics, besides sixty-four at large and in poorhouses. Independent of the above, there are forty outstanding lunatics in the counties of Carlow and Kildare, and five in the gaols of the latter county.

It is thus evident, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that fresh asylum accommodation is required for the three counties attached to the existing Carlow Institution. That accommodation must be effected in one of the two ways, either by enlarging the Carlow Asylum, which would also be attended with considerable expense, or by converting the large, distant, and almost isolated county of Wexford into a district for itself.

The latter plan would seem the most equitable and practically good, and, therefore, most economical arrangement.

(Signed), JOHN NEWTON.

NO. 8.—MEMORIAL FROM THE ONE-PAYERS OF THE COUNTY OF CARLOW.

To His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, &c., &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We, the one-payers of the county of Carlow, assembled by public requisition, beg leave respectfully to represent to your Excellency that we have learned, with great alarm and dissatisfaction, that measures are in progress to separate the county of Wexford from this Lunatic Asylum District, to which it has been hitherto annexed.

That we consider such separation would be unjust to this county, and would inflict on us an enormous amount of taxation.

That the Lunatic Asylum of Carlow was originally built for the counties Carlow, Kildare, Wexford, and Kilkenny, and the city of Kilkenny, at an expense, in round numbers, of £13,000, all of which has been long since repaid to the Government.

That the county of Kilkenny was separated from this district in 1832, and that your Memorialists have reason to fear that a large sum will be awarded in that case as repayment to that county.

That if the county of Wexford be now also separated from this district, another sum, of at least the same amount, will have to be repaid by Carlow and Kildare; and thus these, the two smallest counties of the original district, will not only be compelled to pay the entire of the large outlay of £13,000, but will also have thrown on their taxation the expenses of an institution far too large for their wants, and originally erected for four counties.

That the Asylum of Carlow actually contains at present 200 patients, whilst the numbers from Carlow and Kildare now in it only amount to 115.

That if additional accommodation be required for the lunatic poor of the present district, your Memorialists respectfully beg to represent to your Excellency, that this may be provided by enlarging the present asylum to a sufficient extent.

That by so enlarging the asylum, the lunatic poor of the district may be maintained far more economically than by erecting a new asylum in Wexford, as the charge for what may be called the staff of the Institute, and establishment charges, now amounting to nearly £1,700 per annum, would remain the same; and it is also well known that the larger the number in such an establishment, the cheaper is the average rate of each patient.

That we contend that an expenditure of £12,500 shared proportionately between the three counties would afford accommodation for about 200 additional patients, thereby enabling us to give to Wexford all the room that county would require.

That by adopting this plan, Wexford would probably have to pay, as her share, about £5,000. By adopting the plan of a new asylum, she would be burdened with the sum of say at the very least, of £30,000 (less by one centiation of repayment), and also with the additional sum annually of £1,300 for establishment charges.

Considering, therefore, the great injustice which would be inflicted on your Memorialists, if the counties of Carlow and Kildare were now burdened with a large sum in repayment to Wexford, in addition to their former payments on their own account, and also considering the heavy annual expense to them of keeping up so large an institution, and the far more economical plan suggested of enlarging the present asylum, to which enlargement your Memorialists are perfectly willing to contribute their proportion, we respectfully pray your Excellency to refuse your sanction to the proposed separation of the county of Wexford from this district.

No. 9.—RESOLUTION OF THE COUNTY CARLOW
GRAND JURY. SPRING ASSIZES, 1857.

County of Carlow, Grand Jury Room,
10th March, 1857.

The Grand Jury of the county of Carlow, assembled at Spring Assizes, view with much dissatisfaction the movement which has been made towards separating the county Wexford from the Carlow Lunatic Asylum District.

They feel confident that the present asylum will afford ample accommodation for the demands on it from the present district, provided the favourable Lunatics, who amount to at least one-half of the inmates, be removed from the house, and a District Hospital built for that purpose, and thus make the establishment a curative one, for which purpose they submit it was originally intended.

That by the removal of the different lunatic asylums, it appears that fully one-half of the inmates are incurable, and can be maintained at a much less rate by removing them to a District Asylum, built for that purpose, and thus ample accommodation can be afforded for the admission of all lunatics of the district as it now is.

Resolved—That the Secretary to the Grand Jury be directed to transmit a copy of the above resolution to the Board of Commissioners of Lunatic Asylums.

SPRING ASSIZES, 1857.

Resolved—That a Committee be appointed of the undersigned, to confer with the county Carlow Governors of the District Lunatic Asylum, for the purpose of adopting such measures as may appear advisable to prevent the withdrawing of the county of Wexford from the costs of maintaining the District Lunatic Asylum at Carlow, and to protest against the counties of Kildare and Carlow being chargeable with any part of the expenses to be incurred for the erection of a new lunatic asylum for the accommodation of the county of Wexford exclusively.

No. 11.—LETTER FROM ROBERT CLAYTON BROWNE, ESQ., J.P., D.L., TO COMMISSIONERS.

To the Commissioners of Lunacy for Ireland,
GENTLEMEN,

According to your suggestions, at our interview with you on 29th of October, and also in consequence of your letter of 3rd November, informing this Board of your willingness to receive any statement we may think necessary to lay before you, relative to providing accommodation for the Lunatic Poor of the District, we beg leave to offer you the following observations.

This asylum is capable of accommodating 1200 patients. It is now full; and we have ascertained that on the 1st November there were in the several gale and work-houses of the district, seventy-three lunatics, and also forty-five idiots, and thirteen epileptics—these last two classes are at present inadmissible, and we submit should not be placed in a curative establishment such as ours; but even supposing all were to be placed in this asylum, accommodation should be provided for 131 additional cases.

Now this, we think, could be done by enlarging this asylum, and we have reasons to believe this enlargement could be effected in the most perfect manner, for an outlay of from £10,000 to £12,000, of which the counties of Carlow and Kildare are willing to pay their due proportion.

We submit that by so enlarging this asylum, whilst the wants of the district would be fully supplied, the annual expense of the patients would be much less than if a new asylum were built for the county Wexford, as lately proposed, for the present staff of officers would answer for the enlarged asylum, a few additional servants only being required; and we also submit, that if the county Wexford be separated from this district, to which it has been annexed from the opening of the asylum, the counties of Carlow and Kildare will not only have to repay that county the largeness of from £7,000 to £8,000, but will also have thrown on their hands a house and staff far too large for their requirements, this asylum having been originally built for four counties, one of which has been already separated from the original district. This, we submit, would not be just to Carlow and Kildare.

We are unwilling to make any observations on the financial statistics of the county of Wexford, but we would beg to call your attention to these facts, that if a new asylum be built for that county, it could not be erected for less than £35,000, judging from the asylums lately built in Kilkenny and Sligo; whilst, if this asylum be extended as we propose, so as fully to accommodate all the possible wants of the entire district as at present constituted, the proportion of the expenditure which Wexford would have to contribute, would not exceed £6,000. And further, the annual expenses per head would be far more in the new asylum in Wexford than it would be in our asylum, extended as we propose, as an entirely new staff of officers should be provided, and it is now clearly ascertained that a large number of patients can always be maintained more economically on the average than a smaller one.

We, therefore, respectfully request you will take these circumstances into your consideration, and prevent so serious and unnecessary an outlay as would be incurred by building a new asylum in Wexford, when a much smaller expenditure would fully meet all the wants of the district, and would also be free from the injustice towards the counties of Carlow and Kildare to which we have already called your attention.

We have heard that one argument advanced in favour of a new asylum in Wexford is the distance of that town from Carlow. Now, on this point, we would observe, that there is at this moment a direct railway communication in progress between these two towns, which will be opened long before a new institution could be finished and fit for the reception of patients, and that the extension of this asylum would provide for the lunatic poor of the district, far more speedily than the erection of a new one in the county Wexford.

I have the honour to remain, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

R. CLAYTON BROWNE, Chairman.

DUBLIN GRAND JURY. SPRING ASSIZES, 1856.

Castletown, March 17th, 1856.

MY LORD,

I have the honour of forwarding, by this day's post, a memorial upon the subject of the admission of harmless idiots, epileptic, and imbeciles to our county lunatic asylum, rather than allowing them, as at present, to be supported in the union workhouses by local taxation.

The memorial is signed unanimously by the whole of the Grand Jury, at Spring Assizes.

The inconvenience thus held out to shift the local into a county charge, is such as while it commiserates those who are naturally chargeable with the support of these poor creatures, it is calculated to increase so rapidly the number to be accommodated, that before long another arrangement must be adopted, increasing the room for their reception.

The County Members have been requested to lay these considerations before your Excellency, and I will do myself the honour of waiting upon your Excellency upon the subject, should you desire it.

It is my duty now to leave the papers in your Excellency's hands, praying for an answer addressed to the County Members at your Excellency's convenience.

I have, &c.,

March 14th, 1856.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We, the undersigned, the Sheriff and Grand Jury of the county of Donegal, assembled at Lent Assizes, 1856, beg to represent to your Excellency the extreme impolicy of opening the lunatic asylums to the admission of lunatics, idiots, epileptics, imbeciles, and idiots, as doing so would lead to such an extension of these institutions as would entail on this and other counties an amount of taxation which would be attended with the most ruinous consequences, and without any compensating advantages. It is quite evident, from the accompanying statement, that it would involve an annual expenditure in the counties of Derry and Donegal greater in amount than the whole poor law expenditure with the medical charities included, and we would beg to draw your Excellency's serious attention to that statement in which our views on this momentous and serious question are fully shown; and we feel assured that the Irish Government, on maturely considering this matter, will hesitate to take any step which may lead to such serious consequences, and that it will be influenced by this remonstrance against what we consider would be a most formidable evil.

At a special meeting of the Governors and Directors of the Lunatic Asylum, held in the asylum on 17th day of March, pursuant to the following requisition:—

To the Manager of the Londonderry District Lunatic Asylum.

See, We, the undersigned, being Governors and Directors of the Londonderry Lunatic Asylum, hereby request you will convene a special meeting of the Governors, to be held in the board-room of the lunatic asylum, on Monday, the 5th day of March, 1856, at the hour of twelve o'clock, to take into consideration the motion of John V. Stewart, Esq., of which he gave notice at the meeting of the Board held on the 5th inst., to be brought before the next monthly meeting, which is impracticable, it falling on the Crown Day at the Lifford Assizes.

A printed copy of Mr. Stewart's resolution is to be forwarded to each Director.

(Signed) ROBERT BARTON.
R. G. HENDERSON.
J. A. STEWART.

Members present:

Mr R. Hayes, Esq., M.P.,
Chairman.
Mr Robert Barton, Esq.,
John James Stewart, Esq.,
J. A. Stewart, Esq.,
Thomas Bent, Esq.,

John C. Brown, Esq.,
Rev. E. Bowen,
John Fergusson, Esq.,
John Harvey, Esq.,
J. Nugent, Esq., M.P.,
Inspector-General.

Resolved unanimously.—That the Governors of the lunatic asylum have the strongest objection to make any addition to the institution at Londonderry, at the same time they admit that further accommodation for lunatics is necessary and desirable, and they would prefer to be empowered to convert one of the poor-houses in the county of Donegal into an efficient asylum for that county, for the care of lunatics as well as imbeciles, and which appears to be very practicable.

Resolved.—That the preceding resolution having been adopted, after a full discussion of the resolution proposed by John Vandelaar Stewart, Esq., a copy of them to be also forwarded to the Under-Secretary, for the consideration of his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant.

(Signed) R. H. HAYES, Chairman.

No. 4.—RESOLUTION of J. V. STEWART, Esq., (referred to in No. 3).

At a meeting of the Directors of the Londonderry Lunatic Asylum, held on the 8th February, 1856, Mr. John Vandelaar Stewart gave notice that he would propose the following resolutions at the next meeting of the Governors, or at a special meeting to be called for that purpose:—

Resolved.—That we consider it to be highly inexpedient to adopt the proposition of adding to this asylum, for the purpose of accommodating in it the "idiots, epileptics, imbeciles, and lunatics" now maintained in the union workhouses, for the following reasons:—

1st. Because we view with the utmost alarm the first introduction of the worst of pests, of making the lunatic asylums the receptacles for "imbeciles and imbecile idiots, and imbecile poor" (as the Lunatic Commissioners call them); these worthless beings being generally founded on the expense principle of being only open in carnal case, and no others allowed to be admitted, as proved by security being taken for their removal, if the cases prove incurable.

2nd. Because we believe that these "imbecile idiots" are as well cared for in the workhouses as in asylums with their condition of life, where there are so many idle persons to look after them; and better than they could be, mixed up with violent maniacs in these asylums.

3rd. Because the certain effect of removing so many imbecile cases, which the workhouse idiots are almost without exception, must be to swamp the asylum with incurables, and preclude at once the admission of curable cases. Thus, if those in the workhouses in Derry and Donegal are to be removed into this asylum, the imbeciles will stand as follows:—

|                                                                             |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Imbeciles at present in the asylum, as stated in the Commissioners' Report, | 186 |
| Imbeciles in workhouse in Derry,                                            | 49  |
| Imbeciles in workhouse in Donegal,                                          | 43  |
|                                                                             | 278 |

| Ad-mission.Accounts.DERRYFOR THEDECADE.—Lond-erry. | Now, the result of the accompanying table, which shows the working of this asylum, during a period of twenty-four years, up to 1854, makes this— |       |

|                                                                                    | Admissions to have been . . . . .                                                                                                                | 5,183 |
|                                                                                    | Of these (2,022) to be recovered . . . . .                                                                                                       | 1,080 |
|                                                                                    | Leaving, therefore, irretrievable . . . . .                                                                                                      | 3,161 |
|                                                                                    | And of these there died in the asylum . . . . .                                                                                                  | 280   |
|                                                                                    | Leaving irretrievable who lived . . . . .                                                                                                        | 2,880 |

And this latter number divided by 24 (the number of years specified) gives an annual addition of 120 inmates, although the annual admissions averaged only 41; so that the actual experience of twenty-four years, 37½ per cent. of those sent here as curable cases, proved to be incurable, and died. The greater proportion of these incurables had to be discharged from time to time, to make room for curable cases; or the asylum must, at that rate of increase, have become a mere "rotting shed" in less than eight years from its opening. But if these incurables are at length to be retained (which they must be, in common consistency, if all the workhouse incurable idiots are to be forced into it), it is perfectly manifest that it will take only four years, at the same rate of increase, to absorb the proposed addition of 100 beds, even without the admission of a single lunatic from the workhouse. And the recent removal of all the Tyrone lunatics from this asylum, and its present crowded state, prove how quickly the asylum is filled up, and that the same process which we now regret for this addition of 100, must be used again and again with tenfold force, before this asylum can receive all the incurable idiots of both counties.

4th. Because the removal of such incurable cases from the workhouse to the asylum must certainly lead to a rapid influx of similar cases now at large into those workhouses, save those with the express object of relieving their families from their support, by forcing them through the workhouse into the asylum. And it is especially to be recollected, that every idiot being unable to support himself of the age of sixteen, is, in the eye of the law, a pauper, for whom support his family is in no way answerable, and he can claim admission into the workhouse, or may be forced into it by his family, and then be transferred to the asylum a prisoner for life, at a cost to the parishes of 40s. 6s. per annum. And such evidence will facilitate the process, and be but too ready to shift the load into a costly charge, by the transfer to the asylum.

And of this motive there is more than one example in this asylum, where friends in independent circumstances, and able to support the lunatic, have left her in an incurable state within his walls. And the extent to which this is likely to operate will be apparent from the Lunatic Inspectors' Report, and it is decided whether they will venture to deny, that in making it, they did not look to the workhouse as the means of ultimately introducing into the asylum all the lunatic poor in Ireland. They state that there are at present in Ireland—

|                         |        |
|-------------------------|--------|
| In the asylum . . . . . | 3,822  |
| At large . . . . .      | 7,226  |
| In workhouse . . . . .  | 2,000  |
|                         | 12,522 |

And of these there are in the counties of Derry and Donegal—

|                                         |     |
|-----------------------------------------|-----|
| In Derry Asylum . . . . .               | 910 |
| In workhouse in both counties . . . . . | 85  |
| At large in both counties . . . . .     | 653 |
| Never to be accommodated . . . . .      | 543 |

5th. Because the cost of maintaining these idiots in the workhouse is nearly one-third of that incurred in keeping them in the asylum—

|                                              |         |
|----------------------------------------------|---------|
| In the one case being in workhouse . . . . . | £ s. d. |
| In the other (in asylum) . . . . .           | 7 10 0  |
|                                              | 15 0 0  |

6th. Because the extension of such a system would be ruinous to the rate-payers, as is proved conclusively by the following figures—

|                                                      | For Derry.                  | For Donegal.                |
|------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| In present asylum in Ireland . . . . .               | 3,322 at £12 10s. = £40,064 | 3,203 at £12 10s. = £38,436 |
| In workhouse in Ireland . . . . .                    | 3,203 at £12 10s. = £38,436 | 3,203 at £12 10s. = £38,436 |
| Annual cost, adding workhouse inmates also . . . . . | —                           | 100,000                     |
| Add to this three times of large . . . . .           | 7,226 at £12 10s. = £86,712 | 145,752                     |
| Total . . . . .                                      | 11,252                      | 408,542                     |

That is a sum amounting to one-third of the entire maintenance, cost, staff, and medical expenses of the whole pauper population of Ireland. But if we add the more data for the counties of Derry and Donegal, we arrive at the following startling facts—

|                                                      | For Derry.               | For Donegal.                |
|------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------|-----------------------------|
| In present asylum in Derry . . . . .                 | 410 at £12 10s. = £4,920 | —                           |
| In workhouse in Derry and Donegal . . . . .          | —                        | 1,410 at £12 10s. = £16,920 |
| Annual cost, adding workhouse inmates also . . . . . | —                        | 5,000                       |
| Add to this at large in Derry and Donegal . . . . .  | 486 at £12 10s. = £5,832 | —                           |

Now, £10,000 amounts to the Poor Law Valuation of both counties together (£35,000) at a rate of 10d. in the pound; and on Griffith's Valuation (£445,000) to a rate of 9d. in the pound. But the total Poor Law expenditure of both counties, including staff, medical charges, and all other expenses, was in 1854—

Being at the rate of only 7½d. in the pound on the Poor Law Valuation, and of 9½d. on Griffith's; and, therefore, showing that the expenditure for lunatics would, in these two counties, exceed by £104 the whole Poor Law expenditure of them. And to this expenditure would have to be added the cost of building additional accommodation for 738 additional inmates in the two counties, and the interest on the capital expended in that purpose.

And, therefore, although the Government or Commissioners may, for the present, declare the intention of forcing these lunatics who are sent at large into the asylum, yet by transferring the workhouse idiots into it, they virtually adopt a principle which must soon lead to it. Yes, therefore, view this proposal as probable additional accommodation for 100 inmates as a matter of the most serious importance, and as the beginning of a system of extension to which we can see no end; and we are of opinion that now is the time to decide whether we are prepared ready to transform this institution into one for avowedly incurable cases, and, as a necessary consequence of that change, to meet the various expenditure which it is clear must follow, as it is manifest, that if these classes are to be forced into, and maintained in it, an asylum of double its capacity would be quite inadequate, in a few years, to contain those for Derry alone; and it would, therefore, have to cast off Donegal as it has already done Tyrone. It would, therefore, be better for the county of Donegal to look the difficulty in the face before expending more of its money on this building; and if an addition is to be found on it, to apply to the Government or to seek to persuade it to convert the present Lunatic Workhouse (capable of accommodating 1,000 persons) into an asylum for all the lunatics of Donegal, and if not permitted to do so, then to erect an asylum of its own in that county;—by either of which plans it would, at least secure the compensating benefit of the expenditure of the funds within the county used for its support, and also obviate the present practical anomaly of three-fifths of the funds of the present institution being virtually administered by those who contribute only the two-fifths.

No. 5.—REPORT of the INSPECTORS of LUTATIONS on the MEMORIAL of the DOUTAL GRAND JURY.

Office of Lying-in Asylums, Dublin Castle,
30th March, 1864.

The Inspectors have the honour to report, with reference to the annexed memorial to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant from the Grand Jury of the county of Donegal, dated the 14th instant, and to the resolution entered into by the Board of Governors of the Londonderry District Lunatic Asylum, that the first was drawn up and signed prior to the subject being fully understood by the gentlemen whose names are attached to it; and that the extent and cost of accommodation, as shadowed out in it, for the maintenance of lunatics belonging to the county of Donegal, is much greater than would be necessary.

The resolutions (printed), as prepared by John Vandenberg Stewart, Esq., are not founded on correct data.

On the 17th of the same month, at a meeting of the Governors of the Asylum, at which seven of the Grand Jury of the county of Denegat attended, and on which occasion the whole matter was fully discussed, two resolutions were passed, the first of which sanctions the necessity of increased accommodation for the inmates poor of the county Denegat, leaving the question as to whether that accommodation could be better obtained by converting a purchase into an asylum, or by erecting a new institution specially for the object.

With regard to the conversion of a pesthouse into an asylum, even if it could be structurally effected, there may be legal difficulties under the Poor Law Acts. The Governors of the Dasegal portion of the district are, however, decided in their opinion, that it would be much more advisable to detach it altogether from the Derry District than to add to the said Asylum. They are anxious to have an establishment for Dasegal alone, in a central situation, under their own immediate jurisdiction, and do not approve of the idea of incurring fresh expense by enlarging an old Institution, nearly two-thirds of the cost and maintenance of which are defrayed from their own county. In those views the Inspectors concur. The Derry Asylum would be ample for the city and county of that name, without any structural alteration beyond one for a chapel and infirmary.

No. 6.—LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY TO THE POOR LAW COMMISSIONERS TO THE UNDER-SECRETARY OF THE LORD LIEUTENANT.

Pear Law Commission Office, Dublin,
1st April 1866.

The Commissioners for administering the Laws for Relief of the Poor in Ireland acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th ultimo, forwarding Minutes of Proceedings of the Governors of the Lanesboro Asylum at Londonderry, on the 17th ultimo, and requesting the Commissioners to report, for the information of his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, upon a suggestion contained in a Resolution passed by the Governors, to the effect, that one of the workhouses in the county Donegal might be converted into an efficient asylum for that county for the care of lunatics and incurables.

In reply, the Commissioners have the honour to state, for the information of his Excellency, that when an application was made to them, at the close of 1854, by the Board of Guardians of Monaghan Union, for permission to allow a portion of the union workhouse to be converted into barracks for the accommodation of the militia force, the Commissioners informed the Board of Guardians that they did not consider it to be within the scope of their authority to permit a workhouse, or any portion of it, to be appropriated for the purpose proposed, the buildings having been designed by the Legislature for a totally different purpose.

The Commissioners conceive that the objection entertained by them to the conversion of workhouse premises to barrack accommodation applies with equal force to the conversion of a workhouse into a lunatic asylum, inasmuch as it is not warranted by the existing state of the law.

The Commissioners do not think it necessary to enter on the considerations which would lead them to object to a change in the law in this respect, but they desire to refer on this point to paragraphs 21, 22, and 23 of their last annual report.

The papers which accompanied your communication are herewith returned.

By order, &c.

W. STANLEY, Secretary.

No. 7.—LETTER from the UNDER-SECRETARY to Sir E. HAYES, Bart., relative to proceedings of the Board of Governors of the LONDONDERRY LUNATIC ASYLUM.

Dublin Castle, 25th April, 1857.

Sir,

I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th ult., enclosing copy of the proceedings of the Governors of the Londonderry District Lunatic Asylum, at a special meeting on the 17th of the same month, and advising to the best resolution of the Governor, admitting that further accommodation for lunatics is necessary and desirable, and proposing the conversion of one of the poor-houses in the county of Donegal into a lunatic asylum for that county. I am to state, for the information of the Governor, that his Excellency finds that such an appropriation of a poor-house cannot be effected under the existing law. The further accommodation which the Board of Governors consider necessary can only be effected by the erection of a new asylum.

13th July, 1857.

Sir,

I have the honour to enclose your resolutions passed at two meetings held in the county of Donegal, the first in the town of Donegal, on the 14th May last, the other in the town of Letterkenny, on the 28th, at which notice was given to all persons concerned, by circulars addressed to them for the purpose of considering the question of the county of Donegal separating from the county of Londonderry, as far as relates to the lunatic asylum, and that the county of Donegal should build an asylum for the lunatic patients belonging to it, at which meetings the following magistrates and landed proprietors attended, viz.:

William Wray.

At which meetings the following resolutions were proposed:—

Resolved—That we approve of the plan suggested for separating this county from its connection with the county of Londonderry, as far as relates to the lunatic asylum, and that this county should build an asylum for the lunatic patients belonging to it.

Resolved—That a memorial be presented to his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, praying that his Excellency may be pleased to direct that no steps may be taken for any improvement in, or for any enlargement of, the present lunatic asylum at Londonderry which may involve the county of Donegal in any of the expense thereof, until his Excellency's pleasure on the question of the county of Donegal building an asylum for its own lunatic patients be first ascertained.

The foregoing resolutions were warmly approved by those who attended both meetings, with the exception of William Sinclair and Charles Johnston, Esq., at the meeting at Donegal.

I have the honour, sir, to state further, that these resolutions were submitted to the Grand Jury at the summer session just concluded, and that they have directed me to request of you, for the information of his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, their unanimous and perfect approval of them; and, indeed, I may add, that they meet with the general approval of the entire county, as no difference of opinion has been expressed in the entire county, except in the two cases at Donegal meeting.

I am, &c.,

JAMES SWEENEY,
Foreman, Grand Jury, Donegal,
Banahon, 1857.

Colonel Larrow, &c.

P.S.—I should probably add, that the object of the two meetings at the towns of Donegal and Letterkenny were called purposely to give the greatest possible publicity to the subject, and to ascertain the general feeling of the county prior to bringing it before the Grand Jury.

No. 1.—STATEMENT by the GOVERNORS of the RICHMOND DISTRICT LUNATIC ASYLUM, in reply to the LETTER of the COMMISSIONERS.

The Richmond District Lunatic Asylum being now, and for some time past, fully occupied, and unable to afford accommodation to the numerous applicants for admission, notwithstanding its recent enlargement, by the erection of a separate building for 160 inmates, considerable embarrassment is felt, both by the Governors, when obliged to refuse admission to ordinary pauper inmates, and to the Inspectors, by reason of the number of inmates in the gaols of the district, whose removal to the asylum is much to be desired, both on account of greater facilities for proper treatment and classification, and the chance of recovery to be hoped therefrom, as well as the inconveniences necessarily occasioned to gaol authorities and their officers by having insane persons under their charge in their institutions.

To whatever cause attributable—whether to the actual increase of insanity among the population, or to the fact of the existing disease developing itself, as the lower classes gradually find facilities for placing their insane relatives under treatment without cost to themselves—one thing is certain, namely, that the Richmond Asylum is far from being sufficient to meet the requirements upon it.

In order, however, to arrive at a just conclusion on this head, it will be necessary to enter into the statistics of the lunatics constituting the Richmond district, according to the late Census, as follows:—

|                             | Population. |
|-----------------------------|-------------|
| Dublin County, . . . . .    | 146,731     |
| Do. City, . . . . .         | 308,569     |
| Leath County, . . . . .     | 30,642      |
| Wicklow County, . . . . .   | 95,078      |
| Town of Drogheda, . . . . . | 14,945      |

Making a total of, . . . . . 591,757

The state of lunacy in the District is as follows:—

|                                | Persons. |
|--------------------------------|----------|
| Richmond Old Asylum, . . . . . | 464      |
| Do. New do., . . . . .         | 159      |
| Forfeismore, . . . . .         | 223      |
| Gaols, . . . . .               | 81       |
| Total, . . . . .               | 927      |

There are also, according to the information obtained by the Inspectors through the Constabulary and Police, and published in the Parliamentary Report of last year, exclusive of those in workhouses, gaols, or asylums, 527 lunatics, idiots, and epileptic imbeciles, distributed through the three counties—making altogether an aggregate of 1,450 insane persons of all classes.

There are thus 794 persons appearing to require asylum accommodation. Of these 274 are supported at the public expense, though not in institutions specially intended for the insane; and it may be fairly estimated that one-third, or a minimum of those at ut largo (or say 260) will eventually claim asylum relief. If this be a correct estimate, the Richmond District should be capable of providing for about 1,120 of the class in question; or say, in round numbers, 500 more than at present.

Having in the foregoing statement set forth the pressing necessity for increased accommodation for patients afflicted with mental disease throughout the District, the Governors have naturally directed their attention to the several modes by which such difficulty might be met.

A large proportion of patients, both in the asylum and other institutions, as well as of those scattered among the population, consists of those usually comprised under the denomination of idiot and epileptic imbeciles. To this class of mental diseases, medical treatment can offer little, if any, relief, and the only resources which can be brought to act upon such is a beneficial manner are those which tend to provide a safe retreat, where their wants can be supplied, and such alleviation of their sufferings afforded as may be procured by mild treatment and judicious superintendence. Such a class of patients the Governors conceive might be safely and economically treated in a building set apart for their reception; thus leaving available a considerable space in the Asylum for the treatment of cases of acute dementia.

After careful inquiry on the part of the Inspectors, it does not appear that any existing building of suitable character can be procured in Dublin or its vicinity for this purpose, and the Governors have had under consideration the possibility of applying a portion of workhouse accommodation, which the improved social condition of the community has largely rendered available, to the reception of this class of patients.

Well-founded objections exist, however, against such an arrangement. The importance of proper classification, and of preserving the portion of the workhouse so used from that allotted to its more legitimate purposes—the necessity for separate wards and yards for recreation, and the fittings indispensably required in a building destined for the reception of every class of the insane, would render, in the opinion of the Governors, the carrying out of such a measure of extreme, if not insurmountable difficulty; and they are rather disposed to recommend that at the Richmond Asylum a building might be economically erected upon the ground now in occupation, or upon adjacent land, which has been offered, and is still available, sufficient in extent to contain the class of patients referred to, with allowances for such additional additions as may be eventually expected to follow an increase in the population.

Such a building, the Governors conceive should be constructed for the sole and express purpose of affording a safe and healthy retreat for its inmates, without expensive fittings or architectural ornament, and consisting of dormitories and day-rooms only, with the necessary offices, and might be erected at a reasonable cost, while the existing staff of officers, medical and other, would be available, and render unnecessary any new appointments, beyond those of the ordinary nurses and servants.

The Governors have for a length of time felt the inconvenience arising from officers and servants in lunatic asylums becoming, through age and infirmity, incapable of a full and efficient discharge of their duties, although retained through humane motives in office, and they are about to take steps to revise the list of persons so employed, with a view to the application of the recent Act of Parliament, giving power to grant superannuation pensions in deserving cases—a measure which they believe will act beneficially in maintaining an efficient staff of attendants, and in securing a better class of candidates for such offices.

The Governors' attention has been likewise directed to the existing practice of charging the maintenance of dangerous inmates confined in gaols, and thence transferred to the District Asylums, without regard to the localities to which they properly belong—thus causing an unjust and oppressive increase in the taxation of property in Dublin, and other large towns; and they, therefore, recommend an alteration in the 8th and 9th Vic., cap. 147, and the 10th and 10th Vic., cap. 116, giving authority for the allocation of dangerous inmates, confined in gaols, to the several district asylums to which, by previous residence, they properly belong.

The Governors, in conclusion, cannot too strongly impress upon the attention of the Commissioners the pressing necessity of providing, by whatever means may be deemed most advisable, increased accommodation for the large class of epileptic and idiotic patients, so as to enable them to afford admission to the numerous cases of disease of recent occurrence, towards the relief of which judicious sanitary treatment, combined with the quiet and soothing influence of temporary seclusion in an asylum, might, doubtless, be productive of beneficial and lasting results.

No. 2.—LETTER from the MANAGER of the RICHMOND DISTRICT LUNATIC ASYLUM to the SECRETARY of the COMMISSIONERS.

Richmond District Lunatic Asylum,
11th February, 1857.

Sir,
I am directed by the Governors of this Asylum to transmit to the Lunatic Asylum Commissioners the enclosed copy of a letter received by them from Dr. Nugent, an also a copy of a resolution passed by the Board thereon.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

LETTERS FROM JOHN NUGENT, Esq., INSPECTOR OF LUNATICS, TO THE GOVERNMENT OF RICHMOND ASYLUM.

Office of Lunatic Asylums, Dublin Castle,
14th February, 1867.

GENTLEMEN.—The fully-illustrated plan for admission into the Richmond District Asylum, induces me to suggest, to you the necessity of meeting the difficulty in every possible way, and to convert, as far as possible, all the apartments in both buildings into the most useful purposes.

I have already proposed to place four or six beds, as the case may be, in one of the two houses on the second story, inside side, adjoining the main building at the old house.

I recently examined, on Wednesday last, the new addition of the new asylum, and I find that from six to eight rooms can, without much delay, be rendered available on the ground and upper corridors leading from the kitchen. I had long considered that these rooms might be well occupied. However, pending the decision of the Treasury as the claims put forward by the Board on the report of Mr. Wilkinson, the architect, I thought it would be premature to move in the business. Their Lordships having awarded a contract for the building purposes, and the business now, as between Government and Governors, is referred to the past, being considered, I deem the present as appropriate opportunity to recommend to the Board the utility of at once examining into any proposition of converting the apartments in question habitable for patients and attendants.

Proprietary in no shape, however, it would be necessary to have a competent professional man, probably Mr. Wilkinson, to report upon any proposition proposed by the Board, and see with him how far the proposition of converting useless and unoccupied, into useful and inhabited apartments, might be carried out. The result of which would be to render from twenty to thirty additional beds available.

A system has been adopted in your country, any man which I would strongly recommend the Richmond Board to imitate—namely, to convert (as far as it can be done) some large room near the kitchen into a refectory for the food and out-door labourers; thus the corridors will be kept clean and dry, fuel will be afforded conveniently and warm, and better order and more regularity established.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,
(Signed) JOHN NUGENT.

To the Governors of Richmond District Lunatic Asylum.

RESOLUTION OF THE GOVERNORS.

Richmond, Richmond District Lunatic Asylum,
10th February, 1867.

The Governors having read and considered the recommendation of the Government Inspector, induced as it appears, to suggest, to the Board, the utility of at once examining into any proposition of converting the apartments in the old and new asylums, and a Committee, consisting of Mr. George Hutton and Mr. Hutton, is hereby appointed to confer with Mr. Wilkinson, to carry out such arrangements.

DOCUMENTS RELATING TO CHARGEABILITY.

CHARGEABILITY OF LUNATICS.—No. 1.—LETTER FROM WILLIAM SHERRMAN CRAWFORD, Esq., M.P.

Cardiff, 10th May, 1867.

* LUNATIC ASYLUMS (IRELAND) COMMISSION. NOTICE OF PUBLIC COURT. BELFAST DISTRICT.

"Her Majesty's Commissioners for improving into the state of Lunatic Asylums and other Institutions for the custody and treatment of the Insane, now existing in Ireland, and also into the present state of the law respecting Lunatics and Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, give notice that they will hold a public Court at the Board-room of the Ulster Lunatic Asylum, Belfast, on Tuesday, the 14th day of May, 1867, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of receiving evidence, and receiving such evidence as may be produced to them as all matters connected with said Asylums."

"Any person desirous to offer information to the Commissioners, at such Court, is requested to transmit to the Secretary, at the Board-room of the Asylums, at any hour previous to the opening of the Court, an account of the nature of the proposed statement."

"By Order,

"MICHAEL JOSEPH BARRY, Secretary."

SEA.—In conformity with the above notice, I take leave to intimate to you that it is my intention to attend the meeting called by said notice on behalf of the Grand Jury of the County of Down, for the purpose of submitting to the Commissioners the following suggestions:—

1. That as the Grand Jurors of the several Counties connected with each District Lunatic Asylum are liable to be called on to present for their respective proportions of the expenditure of each establishment by the compulsory warrant of the Lord Lieutenant, it is just and proper that the respective Grand Jurors should be invested with the power of nominating the Governors, they being the controllers of that expenditure; each Grand Jury connected with the asylum district nominating a certain portion of the whole body.

2. That a classified specification of the items of expenditure should accompany every compulsory warrant issued to any Grand Jury for the procurement of money for the use of any asylum.

3. That if additional land, or additional buildings, should be required for any asylum, no expenditure for those purposes shall be incurred, unless the same shall have been first sanctioned by a majority of the Governors, appointed by, and acting on behalf of, the respective Grand Jurors; and without notice having been given to the respective Asylums in the several Grand Jurors concerned, that such expenditure would be called for.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM SHERRMAN CRAWFORD.

M. J. Barry, Esq., Secretary.

No. 2.—RESOLUTION OF THE TOWN COUNCIL OF LIMERICK.

At a special meeting of the Town Council of Limerick, held at the Town Hall, on Thursday, the 14th day of March, 1867, the Right Worshipful Thomas KERR, M.P., Mayor, in the Chair, the following resolution was proposed by T. G. SLOOCH, seconded by ALFRED QUINN, unanimously carried:—

Resolved.—That the Government be called upon to change the law regarding the support of Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, as in justice such support should be charged in the same way as Poor Law relief—namely, part on the landward and part on the seaport, and not as it at present, under the Grand Jury Law, wholly on the seaport of the several land; and that the following Resolution submit this Resolution to the Commissioners:—

No. 3.—LETTERS FROM THE TOWN CLERK OF THE CITY OF DUBLIN TO THE COMMISSIONERS.

Town Clerk's Office, City Hall,
20th October, 1865.

GENTLEMEN,
At the special meeting of the Municipal Council, held upon yesterday, for the purpose of considering applications for procurements, the attention of the Council was directed by the Report of their Committee,

GRAND-JURY
LONDONDERRY

No. 3, to the rapid and large increase in the amount of the sums sought from this city for the support of the lunatic poor in the Richmond Lunatic Asylum, and the Council unanimously agreed that inquiry into the causes thereof was very desirable, and should be instituted.

The attention of a Committee of the Council was directed to this matter in the year 1852, and a Conference at that time took place between some members of the Committee and the Governors of the Richmond Asylum; the Committee conceived they had grounds for believing that the cost of the support of a much larger number of patients was levied off the city than it would be properly chargeable with, if due inquiry was made at the time of their commitment, as to their proper location. It was represented by the Governors of the asylum that when the commitments came from his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant to the city magistracy, they had no discretion but to charge the support of the lunatics to the city.

Observing by the public papers that you have been appointed as Commissioners to inquire into the state of Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, and the laws affecting same, I take the liberty of respectfully soliciting your attention to this subject, with the view of having inquiry made into the causes heretofore pursued previous to commitments being issued by the authority of the Lord Lieutenant and by the Magistrates, and also whether the charges of the asylum can be reduced.

I forward herewith a return of the sums levied off the city of Dublin for support of lunatics in each year, from 1846 to 1855, and of the amount in this year sought to be levied.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM FORD, Town Clerk.

To the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the state of Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, and the laws affecting same, Dublin Castle.

SIR,

Referring to your letter of 15th instant, requesting for the Lunatic Asylum Commission "A Return of the several Grand Jury Presentments (in detail) for the county of the city of Dublin for the last four years," and to your letter of the 13th instant, stating, that as you have issued the schedules of presentments are out of print, you believe the particulars of the following presentments will be sufficient for the purposes of the Commissioners, viz:—

1. Instalments to Government, in repayment of advances to Lunatic Asylums (in detail);
2. Expenses of Richmond and Island Bridge Asylums, respectively;

No. 1.—LETTER to SECRETARY of the COMMISSIONERS, from SECRETARY to the DERRY GRAND JURY.

Londonderry, July 29th, 1857.

SIR,

I am directed by the Grand Jury of the city and county of Londonderry to forward the enclosed Memorial to the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the state of Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, which you will have the kindness to have laid before them.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN T. GARRA,

Secretary to the Grand Jury.

M. J. Barry, Esq.,

Secretary to Lunatic Asylum Commissioners.

GRAND-

I beg to enclose herewith a return, setting forth the sums presented for the support of lunatics at the presentment term in the years 1853, 1854, and 1855, and of the sums applied for in this year. I have added a copy of the presentment made in this year to repay portion of sum advanced out of Consolidated Fund, for enlarging Richmond Asylum, and building new asylum for the district in which Dublin is situated.

I am, should the Commission require, furnish copies of the abstracts of accounts sent from the asylum, through the Crown Solicitor, upon which the presentments for expenses of asylums founded in the years 1853, 1854, 1855, and 1856; also of the account furnished by the Board of Works of the cost of enlarging Richmond Asylum and building the new asylum, and the order of his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council, dated 4th July, 1855, directing the amount to be repaid by each county of a city, county, or county of a town, in the Dublin district, and in how many instalments. Any further information the Commission may require shall readily be afforded.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your very obedient servant,

WILLIAM FORD, Town Clerk.

M. J. Barry, Esq.

Return of amounts presented by the Municipal Council of the City of Dublin (in pursuance of Warrants of the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council of Ireland, and the Acts 6th Geo. IV., cap. 54, 11th Geo. MEMORIAL of the GRAND JURY of LONDONDERRY.

To the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the state of Lunatic Asylums in Ireland:

The Memorial of the Grand Jury of the City and County of Londonderry, assembled at Sherman's Asylum, 1857.

HONOURABLE SECRETARIES.

That in 1828, a District Lunatic Asylum was erected at Londonderry for the counties of Down, Tyrone, and Londonderry, at a cost of £25,218 3s. 4d., and on the 26th April in that year Mr. David Claff was appointed Manager, and his wife Marion, under the provisions of 27th G. III., cap. 106. Mr. Claff's salary was £200, and Mrs. Claff's £25 per annum, until October, 1853, when Mrs. Claff's salary was raised to £70 per annum; besides these salaries they had emoluments which were estimated to be worth £50 a-year. At the time of Mr. and Mrs. Claff being appointed to the Londonderry Asylum, they were Superintendents of the Lunatic Depart-work of the House of Industry, at a salary of £116 per annum, and a free house, having been appointed to that situation in 1821 by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

By order of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, the county of Tyrone was separated from the counties of Londonderry and Donegal, and a new distinct asylum for the counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh was created at Omagh, and the Tyrone patients were removed from the house at Derry on the 25th May, 1846.

Upon this separation taking place, the governors of Tyrone claimed to be paid by the counties of Derry and Donegal the sum with which they had been charged in 1820 for the building and furnishing of the asylum at Derry. Several meetings took place between deputations of these respective counties, which finally terminated by a reference to Mr. Thomas Deane and Mr. Charles Layton, the County Surveyor for Antrim, who carefully inspected the asylum, and reduced the sum expended for the several buildings, subsequent permanent improvements, cost of site, and a sum of furniture, from the sum of £4,000 to £4,445, and a sum of £41,000 to £41,445, and reported that the county of Tyrone was entitled to be repaid the sum of £2,845 15s. 6d. by the counties of Derry and Donegal in the following proportions, viz., Donegal, £4,300 10s. 6d.; and Derry, £2,445 10s. 6d.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff having, in consequence of age and infirmities, resigned their offices on the 26th September, 1856, on the 15th October following a meeting was held at the asylum, at which twenty Directors were present, when it was resolved—that a sum not exceeding £120 a year should be paid to Mr. Cliff, and a sum not exceeding £64 5s. 4d. to Mrs. Cliff, the compensation of the former being based on a salary of £200 a year, and over twenty-five years' service, and of the latter as a salary of £70 per annum, and the same length of service, together with allowances to both valued at £20 a year, £40 a year to each, and the superannuation, on the aggregate was under seven-twentieths of the above sum as recognized by law.

The Directors of the counties Londonderry and Donegal, at a meeting held on the 5th January, 1857, passed a resolution, stating that, in their opinion, a portion of the amount could be contributed by the county Tyrone, inasmuch as that county had the benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff's services for a period of upwards of twenty-four years, and that such contribution should be paid either by a consolidated allowance during the respective lives of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff, or by an equivalent sum, to be deducted from the sum of £2,845 15s. 6d., so ordered as before mentioned, to be paid to Tyrone by Donegal and Derry, and that they considered the most eligible way of doing it would be by the county Tyrone paying a consolidated sum of £101 5s. 4d., amounting to £121 5s. 9d. annually.

The Grand Jury of Londonderry assembled at Spring Garden, 1857, appointed a committee of its members to visit and report the state, &c., of the lunatic asylum, which committee, amongst other things, reported favorably of the resolutions of the Directors at their meeting of the 15th December, 1856, and of the 14th January, 1857, as being a just and equitable arrangement, and recommended its adoption by the Grand Jury; accordingly, the Grand Jury, in compliance with the report and recommendation of the Committee, drew up a case and had it before counsel, and by his advice the present Grand Jury of the county of Londonderry beg to recommend the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the state of Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, to exert their influence in carrying into effect the arrangements proposed.

For self and fellow,

H. HARVEY BROWN, Foreman.
Grand Jury Room, 15th July, 1857.

No. 2.—LETTER FROM MR. JAMES BROWN.

Limerick District Lunatic Asylum,
7th March, 1857.

SIR,
I take the liberty of calling your attention to the second clause of "the Lunatic Asylums Superannuation (Ireland) Act of 1856," in which it is set forth that the word "officer" shall "mean and include managers, chaplains, physicians, surgeons, apothecaries, nurses, attendants, and servants;" and, at the same time, to state that the services of clerks and storekeepers of lunatic asylums are not at all recognized by this Act, as their names have been passed over altogether.

I am confident, from the statement of facts already furnished to the Lunatic Asylums Commissioners, touching the duties of the respective officers of these institutions, that the gentlemen composing the Royal Commission will at once perceive that the onerous duties which devolve on persons holding the position of clerks and storekeepers, outside them to the same consideration as the hands of her Majesty's Government as the several other officers and servants of district lunatic asylums.

I, therefore, most respectfully beg to submit, for consideration of the Commissioners, that in justice to the clerks and storekeepers of the other district asylums, as well as to myself, that the same proportion of superannuation and salary to which they are justly entitled for their services, should be provided by law for such officers, and humbly pray that the Commissioners may be pleased to recommend our services when the subject for altering or amending the laws relating to lunatic asylums in Ireland may be brought under the notice of Parliament.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

JAMES BROWN,

Clerk and Storekeeper of the Limerick District Asylum.

to Lunatic Asylums Commission (Ireland),

CHAPLAINCY QUESTION.—JUDGMENT OF THE COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

BELFAST DISTRICT LUNATIC ASYLUM. Dublin,
Monday, January 21, 1856.

THE QUEEN at the prosecution of the Rev. JOHN CARROLL, v. the GOVERNORS and DIRECTORS of the BELFAST DISTRICT LUNATIC ASYLUM, in the County of Antrim.

This case was argued last Michaelmas Term, before the full Court, by Mr. Finch White and Mr. Brewster, Q.C., for the prosecutor, and Mr. Harrison and Mr. O'Hagan, Q.C., for the defendants. The case stood over for judgment, and on this day, January 21,

The Chief Justice delivered the judgment of the Court.—This case comes before the Court upon a demurrer to a return to a writ of mandamus which issued at the suit of the prosecutor, the Rev. John Carroll, directed to the Governors and Directors of the Belfast District Lunatic Asylum, requiring them to pay over to him a certain sum claimed by him for salary as one of the chaplains to that institution. The Governors and Directors have, in their return to the writ, stated several grounds on which they insist they are justified in refusing to comply with that order; and the question now is—a demurrer being taken to that return—whether they are justified in their refusal upon the matters appearing upon this record, the mandamus and the return taken together. As this question involves the construction of the several Acts of Parliament under which this and similar institutions have been established, it will be necessary to refer to such portions of these Acts as are material to the consideration of the question before the Court. These Acts are 1 and 2 Geo. IV., cap. 33, and the 6th Geo. IV., cap. 56, the latter being an amendment of the former Act; upon the construction of these two Acts, and of one section in the 8th and 9th Vic., cap. 107, will turn the decision of the question. The first two Acts are thus entitled—the first, "An Act to make more effectual provisions for the establishment of Asylums for the Lunatic Poor, and for the custody of insane persons charged with offences in Ireland;" and the second is, "An Act to amend an Act of the 1st and 2nd Geo. IV., for the establishment of Asylums for the Lunatic Poor in Ireland." By the first of these Acts, authority is given to the Lord Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland, by and with the advice and consent of his Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, to order and direct that a number of asylums for the lunatic poor in Ireland shall be created, and a sum or sums of money shall be advanced out of the Consolidated Fund, to be paid and applied for the purpose of erecting and establishing any such asylums for lunatic poor. Then comes a provision that the Grand Jury shall present for the repayment of the sums so advanced, for defraying the expense of erecting and establishing such asylums, and for maintaining same, to such amount and in such proportions as shall be directed by an order to be made by the Lord Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland, by and with the advice of her Majesty's Privy Council. And, by another section, that provision is made a peremptory preceptment; so that, if the Grand Jury should not present, the Judge of Assize shall put it on the jury; and so the amount is to be raised by a rate. And, indeed, although it originally and continuously came out of the Consolidated Fund, that is a fund raised by levies on the subject from time to time. The Act then proceeds to give authority to the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice of the Privy Council, to nominate and appoint such persons as he and they shall think fit to be Governors and Directors of every such asylum; and also to nominate and appoint any persons, not exceeding eight in number, to be Commissioners for the general control and correspondence, and for the superintending and directing the establishment and regulation of all such asylums; and also, that it shall and may be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council to make, frame, and establish, or, upon the suggestion and recommendation of such Commissioners for general control and correspondence, to adopt and authorize any rules and regulations for the good conduct and management of such asylums (an authority either to originate rules and regulations, or to adopt those from the suggestion of their Commissioners). Then follows a provision, that the Governors and Directors shall not without fee or reward, and a provision that the Governors and Directors shall, from time to time, make and deliver to the Commissioners for auditing public accounts, a return containing a statement and account of all the funds entrusted to the Governors and Directors of every such asylum, and also the number of patients received into every such asylum, and the names and names of the physicians, surgeons, officers, servants, and other persons employed in or about the management of every such asylum. That is all of the Act it is necessary to advert to, with this material exception, that although with respect to every regulation that I have referred to, whatever is to be done with the advice and assent of the Privy Council, there is at the end of one section a provision which authorizes the Lord Lieutenant, by his own personal seal and authority, to make, order, and give directions in regard to criminal lunatics (s. 16). That is the only personal act which the Lord Lieutenant is to do. The next Act is an amendment of that Act, for the purpose of limiting the sum of money which the Lord Lieutenant is authorized to advance out of the Consolidated Fund, but that sum, like the other sums, is to be reimbursed by the Grand Jury, and is in reality a rate. I may now advert to what has been done under these Acts; and the first proceeding that is important is, that in the year 1843 the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council, in pursuance of the authority so given, did make rules and regulations for the good conduct and management of such asylums, and that some should be observed accordingly; and they proceed to give very specific directions, not only with respect to the conduct of the Governors and Directors, but with respect to the admission and treatment of the patients, and they enumerate the several persons to be employed under the Governors and Directors for carrying on the institution. They give directions for the management of the patients, to a certain extent, and, amid these regulations, there is one relevant to the question before the Court. The Board—that is, the Governors and Directors—shall make regulations for the attendance of clergymen to visit, in that character, any patients of their own persuasion, and frequent visits of the parochial clergy to the institution are particularly desired; and the Board shall make arrangements for the celebration of divine service before each of the inmates at their respective chaplains and the physicians shall deem fit to attend the same. There is, therefore, an ordinance made upon that subject in 1843, in reference to the particular duties of the persons employed as officers employed to carry on the institution. It would thus appear that a complete system has been adopted, from 1843, by the authority alone competent to make rules and regulations, namely, the Lord Lieutenant and the Privy Council; and from the year 1843 to 1853 there does not appear to have been any deviation from these rules and regulations, nor has there been any complaint with respect to their insufficiency or inefficiency. The subsequent proceedings from that year are detailed in the writ of mandamus. It states the appointment of chaplains; the order of the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council on the 5th of November, 1853, for payment of their salaries; that these salaries were not included in the estimate of the 5th of October, 1853, of the amount required for the maintenance of the asylum, sent by the Board, nor in other estimates which I need not specify; and these were ordered to be attended by the insertion of these salaries, to be paid from the date of appointment of the chaplains; that an application had been made for the payment of these salaries, and a refusal by the Governors and Directors to accede to the order of the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council. The return to this mandamus, made by the Governors and Directors, explained the grounds which they considered sufficient to justify them in this refusal. The first ground was, that they were advised that they ought not to sanction the appointment of these chaplains; that it was an illegal appointment; and that, being intrusted with the administration of a fund, they were bound to administer the funds according to the provisions of this Act of Parliament; that this Act was binding on them, and that they were not at liberty to apply the funds in a manner which they were advised was illegal. That raises at once the question as to the legality of these appointments. They then state the fact of their having, by certain rules made by them, under the regulations I have adverted to, made provision for the purpose of having the administration of such religious ordinances performed as appear to them advisable to provide for; and, that as long since as 1834, they had made regulations for that purpose, and from that time they had found, by experience, that such provision met the exigency of the case. They then state the rules furnished to them in 1843, and they set out the rule to which I before alluded respecting this subject, and they state, in their judgment, that the alteration sought to be made in the appointment of the chaplains would not be conducive to the advancement of the institution, that it was not judicious, and would frustrate their own regulations. That the order under which these chaplains claimed admission to the institution at all times would be inconsistent with the authority of the Governors and Directors, inasmuch as the chaplains claimed, not under the Governors and Directors, but claimed a right to visit the patients at such times and in such manner as appeared to them would be the proper time and mode of exercising religious rites and ordinances. They then state, that they never assented to this arrangement, that it was contrary to their judgment, and that they received the money and paid it into the bank in their names, but that they had not applied it for this specified purpose. That it had been paid into their names, and that they had drawn out such sum as was sufficient for the purpose of the original estimate, but that they never accepted this money for the purpose of being applied in payment of the salary of the preacher, and the other chaplains, and were ready to return it, but they declined to be the hands to administer the money in a manner which would be undesirable for the maintenance of the institution; and that they were willing to do any act to have this money returned to the Treasury. The question, then, is, whether that is a valid and sufficient ground for their declining to be made the hands for administering this fund? If the object was illegal for which the money was to be applied, unquestionably it is a valid return; if it were merely questionable, and that, in their judgment, the object was not for the advantage of the asylum, it may be also argued whether that would not be a good return. But, with respect to the legality of the appointment itself, the Act of Parliament requires, that whatever is done by the Lord Lieutenant under the Act shall be done by him, and with the advice of the Privy Council; and the avowment on the writ of habeas corpus is, that the appointment of chaplains was made processu by the Lord Lieutenant. It was argued that, although these were officers to fill an office not provided for by the Act of Parliament, the Crown had, by virtue of its prerogative, authority to appoint these officers. Now, without going into the question, whether or not the Lord Lieutenant had the power to exercise a prerogative as fully as the Crown might have done—a question which we could not enter upon without having the commission before us under which the Lord Lieutenant derives his authority, and which might furnish argument for grave consideration—without touching upon that, it is enough for me to assume, pro hoc vice, he had authority to do all that the Crown by its prerogative might do. Though the Crown may appoint generally to an office, it cannot appoint to an office which is to charge the subject with fees. The Crown cannot create an office; and the only fund out of which this salary was to come was a rate to be levied, in the first instance, on the Consolidated Fund, which is chargeable on the subject, and then a rate leviable by the Grand Jury; therefore, if even we went there, that, in itself, would be a valid objection. But a serious question remains, whether an office can be created by virtue of the prerogative which the Legislature have not defined—should be created or provided for; that what might be imagined the Legislature omitted should be provided for out of the prerogative? The inference is, that what the Legislature have not provided for, they did not intend to provide for, and there is a distinct declaration of the intention of the Legislature on the subject; for, in the 8th and 9th Victoria, c. 107, an Act for establishing a General Criminal Lunatic Asylum, showing that so little did the Legislature imagine that they had not provided for these officers, that they have, in the 9th section of that Act, authorized the Lord Lieutenant to nominate and appoint the officers and servants of such central asylum, and by and with the advice of the Privy Council, to make, frame, and establish any rules and regulations which may be necessary for the conduct and management of such asylum, a distinct authority is given to the Lord Lieutenant by the Legislature, personally to appoint; and, with respect to the general rules and regulations, those are only to be made by and with the advice of the Privy Council; but, in the two Acts in question before the Court—1 and 2 Geo. IV., and 6 Geo. IV.—the personal right in the Lord Lieutenant to appoint officers was altogether omitted. Therefore, we have, at the outset, an objection to this appointment. Further, the Act 1 and 2 Geo. IV., authorizes rules and regulations to be made by the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council; and the rules and regulations which were made in 1843, as authorized by the Act, were binding on every one, and the Governors and Directors were to be guided by them; and, when the chaplains were appointed, there was another provision respecting chaplains in existence and unaltered, and with which these new appointments must of necessity conflict; therefore, upon this general view, the Governors and Directors would not be bound to be the handle for administering this fund, which they had been advised, and properly advised, was an illegal application of the fund. They say they never have accepted the fund to be applied for this purpose. If they had accepted it, they might be met with an objection to the application of it; but, from the very commencement, they refused to be the handle for the administration of this fund. They declined to attend the estimates returned to them, so that this refusal is an afterthought to enable them to make a return. Even if it were a question of usque, when the money is in no predicament, whether we should, by this peremptory order, oblige the Governors and Directors to apply this fund, would be a grave consideration; but we are of opinion there is no question of doubt. We, therefore, must overrule this disclaimer, and refuse this peremptory writ. Our delay in giving judgment arose not from any doubt of what our decision should be, but from that becoming respect that was due to the authority under which these proceedings were instituted, we thought it right to give the case the fullest consideration. Judgment must, therefore, be for the defendants, and costs follow the judgment.

I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit to you copy of a letter from the Under Secretary for Ireland, requesting permission to insert in the Estimates for 1857-58, the sum of £2,635, for the maintenance of 100 pauper lunatics and imbeciles, at the rate of £25 per head, in a private asylum, on their removal from the hospital of the House of Industry; and I am to state that before coming to a decision upon the proposal in regard to these lunatics, my Lords request to be favoured with your opinion thereon; particularly whether, under the present system of lunatic asylums in Ireland, the district asylums might properly be required to receive and provide for cases of this description.

ENCLOSURE.

LETTER FROM COLONEL LARSON TO JAMES WILSON, Esq., K.P., SECRETARY to the TREASURY.HOUSE OF INDUSTRY
LUNATICS.HARDWICK CELLS.

Dublin Castle,
29th January, 1857.
Sir, In reference to the Estimate for 1857-58, I am directed by the Lord Commissioners to request that you will bring under the notice of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury the case of the lunatic and imbeciles now in the Hospital of the House of Industry. Their Lordships are aware that those poor persons—now reduced to 100—are supported by Parliament, having here, for the most part, lunatics of the House of Industry under some old arrangement, previous to the introduction of the Irish Poor Law.

The Board of Superintendence of the Dublin Hospitals, in carrying out the arrangements intended to them by the Act of last Session (1856 and 20th Vic., cap. 119), and the reports and views of the peripatetic Commission of Inquiry, have recognized the necessity of removing these lunatics, &c., as early as possible, that the building occupied by them, in which they are very badly accommodated, may be devoted to the use for which it is intended.

His Excellency has accordingly had under his consideration the various ways in which this can be accomplished.

1. By creating a cheap building elsewhere, and establishing a staff for the management of the lunatics there constructed.
2. By creating a building in connection with the Richmond Lunatic Asylum—where the Government would be willing to receive them—affording them the superintendence and medical management of the asylum so long as they live, on condition that the building be given over to the Government afterwards.
3. By placing them in parties in such of the district asylums as may be willing to receive them, and paying a certain sum per head for their care and maintenance.

4. By agreeing with the managers of some private asylums or hospitals, to take them at a certain price per head.

To the first—The expense of a staff, and the charges it would create, with the difficulty of obtaining it properly, from time to time, as the poor people die off, are sufficient objections to place it at once out of the question.

To the second—It is to be objected that the building could not be ready for occupation in sufficient time to effect the object if it were not also too expensive to be worth while.

To the third—The objection is, the possible confusion with Houses of Detention; the fact that, though there are at present some beds to spare in two of the district asylums, they will not long be available; and the consideration that in the greater part, probably the whole of these asylums, are, inasmuch, they would occupy space, which is the more wanted for the on-site patients of the districts.

The fourth, therefore, appeared the most desirable mode of providing for these lunatics, and accordingly several managers have been applied to, and their promises repeated as by the Inspectors. But there is no such asylum which could receive the wishes of the patients, and indeed, none which the Inspectors recommended. A proposition, however, has been received from Dr. Stewart, late Governor of the House of Industry, to establish, at 188 9/10 cent, a private asylum under the Act (4th and 5th Vic. cap. 129), and take the whole 160 patients at the rate of 450 per annum each, with each other patients in may office. This cost is somewhat greater than their present cost; but there will not be an establishment to transact, nor building to erect; and they will be suitably accommodated, which at present they are not. Dr. Stewart's asylum will be, in connection with other private asylums, under the supervision of the Inspectors, and he will, in regard to these patients, be under the special control of the Inspectors as to delivery and management. It is proposed that the contract be, in the first instance, limited to five years, by which time the number will have considerably diminished, and the system can be revised.

I am, therefore, to request their Lordships' sanction for the Inspectors, in the ensuing year's Estimates, of the amount of the expense, under the following head, viz. —

To defray the expense of maintaining, in a private asylum, 160 lunatic patients (formerly confined and supported in the Hardwicke cells of the House of Industry), at the rate of 450 per head, . . . £4,500

If their Lordships agree to this arrangement, I am to request their immediate sanction, that Dr. Stewart may prepare for the reception of the lunatics the house he intends to take, which is a building at Lancaster, formerly a school, having large rooms, in a convenient and healthy situation.

I am, &c.,
(Signed) THOMAS A. LARCOM.

JAMES WILSON, Esq., M.P.

NO. 2.—LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY TO THE COMMISSIONERS TO SIR C. E. TREVELYAN, M.P.

Office of Lunatic Asylums Commission
(Ireland), 9, Elly-place, Dublin.

Sir, January 31, 1857.

I am directed by the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the present state of the Lunatic Asylums and other Institutions for the Insane in Ireland, and into the law relating thereto, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, requesting the opinion of the Commissioners on a proposition which has been submitted to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, for the maintenance, in a private asylum, of the pauper lunatics now confined in the Hardwicke cells, and more particularly whether, under the present system of lunatic asylums in Ireland, the district asylums might possibly be required to receive and provide for cases of this description.

The Commissioners are desirous, in the first instance, of expressing the satisfaction it has afforded them to find that the condition of the lunatics confined in the Hardwicke cells has attracted the attention of the Irish Government, and that an immediate prospect is thus afforded of their being more suitably accommodated, and their present unsatisfactory condition improved.

The Hardwicke cells were visited by the Commissioners shortly after the commencement of their labours, and they were unanimously of opinion that the buildings were, in every way, suited for the detention of lunatics, and that the removal of the present inmates was most desirable. Moreover, those afflicted and generally helpless beings did not appear to receive that care and attention which they required, and which, in an institution so directly under the control of a public board, and maintained out of the public funds, was more particularly to be expected. The Commissioners do not feel it necessary to enter minutely into details, as they consider an alteration in the arrangements would suffice to render the Hardwicke cells a suitable place for the reception of lunatics.

They desire, therefore, most earnestly to recommend for their Lordships' favourable consideration the removal, at the earliest possible period, of the present inmates of the Hardwicke cells to some more suitable establishment.

With reference to the four propositions contained in Colonel Larcom's letter, viz. —

1. The erection of a new building elsewhere, and establishing a staff for the management of the institution thus created;

2. The erection of a new building, in connection with the Richmond Lunatic Asylum, eventually to become the property of the Government of that institution on condition of their affording the transferred patients the benefit of the superior medical management of that asylum during their lives;

3. Placing them in parties in each of the district asylums as may be willing to receive them, and paying for their maintenance therein;

4. By agreeing with the managers of certain private asylums to receive them;

the Commissioners desire me to state that they do not think it would be advisable to erect an asylum merely for the reception of the inmates of the House of Industry lunatics, now confined in the Hardwicke cells. As no addition can now be made to that number, and many are of an advanced age, it is to be expected that a diminished number will have to be provided for in each succeeding year, so that, at no distant period, the cost of maintaining an establishment for the reduced numbers would be proportionately so great as to point out the propriety of the patients being provided for in some of the other institutions for the custody of the insane. The second proposition is objected to in Colonel Larcom's letter on grounds in which the Commissioners fully concur, viz. — "That the building could not be ready for occupation in sufficient time to effect the object in view, if it were not also too expensive to be worth while." And this objection the Commissioners consider equally applies to the first proposition previously considered. Moreover, the Commissioners have already received a statement from the Governor of the Richmond Lunatic Asylum, intimating their opinion that the requirements of the district under their charge will necessitate additional accommodation for the lunatic poor being provided, and pointing out, as the most desirable mode of accomplishing this object, the erection of additional buildings on the ground at present in their occupation. Under these circumstances, the Commissioners do not consider that it would be advisable for the Government to make any proposition to the Board of Governors for occupying any portion of their, at present, not over-extensive grounds with a building that would not be available for the wants of the lunatic poor of the district, for whom the Governors feel called upon to provide.

The third proposition, for distributing the patients in the Hardwicke cells through each of the district lunatic asylums as would be willing to receive them, has received, as their Lordships desired, the most particular attention of the Commissioners. Although they have only made a partial investigation of the requirements of the insane poor in the several districts, yet the Commissioners do not feel, with the information which is already before them, that any proposition for appropriating the unoccupied accommodation of the few asylums which could afford it to other than district lunatics could, with safety, be adopted.

It is chiefly in the recently erected asylums that this accommodation exists, and from all that has come to the knowledge of the Commissioners as to the extent of pauper lunacy unprovided for in those districts, the Commissioners think it more than probable that the additional accommodation available will be required by the districts themselves.

As regards the particular inquiry made by their Lordships in reference to the maintenance of these lunatics in the district asylums, the Commissioners do not con-order that the Government of the several district asylums could be required to receive and provide for them. These patients have for years been the inmates of an asylum in the metropolis, supported by the State, and there do not appear any grounds upon which it could equitably be required of the ratepayers of particular districts to provide for any number of these.

The last proposition, by which these inmates are to be provided for in a private asylum, but at the cost of the State, as heretofore, appears of all those suggested the most desirable. The Commissioners having visited all the private asylums in Ireland, with one exception, concert with the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums, that there is no existing establishment which could receive all the Hardwicke cell inmates, nor any whose it would be probable that arrangements could be made for the reception or proper accommodations of any large portion of them. In the letter of Colonel Larcom it is, however, stated that a proposition has been made by Dr. H. Stewart, the actual Governor of the House of Industry, and Superintendent, as such, of the Hardwicke cells, to receive these patients in a private asylum, for which he is to be licensed, and at a house in the vicinity of Lanes, near Dublin. It appears to the Commissioners that some such arrangement should be made with some individual, and while they do not consider the sum named (£35) for the annual maintenance of each inmate as unreasonable, they think that, before any arrangement made by the Government comes into operation, the Lord Lieutenant should satisfy himself of the suitability of the building, and arrangements for the reception of inmates, and of the efficiency of the superintendence to be provided. Under no circumstances should such an Institution be without some resident medical attendance, and the contract with the Government should provide for such control on the part of the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums, as may be deemed advisable; for the provisions of the existing law, as regards licensed houses for the reception of the insane, do not arm the Inspectors with such authority as regards the dietary and general management as Colonel Larcom's letter intimates that they are to exercise over the proposed establishment. With these securities the Commissioners submittingly recommend to their Lordships' favourable consideration that provision should be made for the lunatic patients in the Hardwicke cells in such a manner as is suggested by his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant. The Commissioners have not all, however, had an opportunity of visiting the premises referred to, and are unable, therefore, to report specially on their eligibility. Neither would they be understood as recommending that while Dr. H. Stewart holds an official appointment in the city of Dublin, at a distance of several miles from the proposed asylum, the Government should contract with him for the maintenance of these patients in no institution to which, of necessity, his care and supervision can be little, if at all extended—unless a resident medical superintendent were appointed.

M. J. BARRY, Secretary.

No. 8.—LETTER FROM COLONEL LARCOM TO THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMISSIONERS.

Dublin Castle, February 6th, 1857.

Sir,

I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to transmit the enclosed copy of a report from Dr. Nugent, in reference to a communication from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to your Commission, relative to the inmates now in the Hardwicke cells of the House of Industry.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

THOMAS A. LARCOM.

Sir T. Roddington, B.A., &c.

Enclosure in Colonel Larcom's Letter.

Read at a meeting, February 24th, 1857.

Sir,

Herewith I have the honour to return the various documents you sent me with reference to the proposition of placing the inmates belonging to the old House of Industry, under the charge of Dr. Stewart, at a sum of £25 per head per annum. These documents seem to me sufficiently clear, and on two points, so which I shall endeavour to afford information that may not be altogether unimportant. 1st, as to the contract in relation to the patients chargeable to the Treasury, I would beg to observe, as a preliminary, that the H. Co. IV. repeated the 20th Co. III., and transferred the Richmond from a General Asylum for the country at large into a District Institution, to be supported by Grand Jury presentments. Subsequently, after the passing of the Poor Law Bill in 1834, such of the inmates as belonged to the House of Industry were changed into a Poor Law Union, and who were not located in the Hardwicke cells, were transferred to Belvidere as Government patients.

In the year 1844, in consequence of the number of urgent cases for admission at the Richmond Asylum, it became necessary to remove a certain portion of chronic incurable cases from it to Island Bridge, which establishment was then under the control of the Poor Law Commissioners, who "expended the necessary sums for the maintenance of all its inmates;" and an Act, &c. in 1846, was passed, authorising the Commissioners to recover from the district, by Grand Jury presentments, such moneys as might be expended by them for the care, maintenance, and superintendence of the inmates, either so removed, or to be removed, from that time, from the Richmond Asylum. The model agreement was as follows:—"Express five shillings accepted in the Poor Law—on, more precisely speaking, the Government Lunatic—Department at Island Bridge, of the cells, and that it was desirable to transfer five chronic cases from the Richmond, the Inspectors recommended that within the Poor Law Commissioners. On their arrival, the five patients were removed, and daily charged, from the day of admission, to the custody of the district, to which such respectively belonged, Government being repaid) through the Commissioners."

To meet this expenditure, the Commissioners annually estimated a probable amount, and to carry all the bulk back of the Hardwicke and Island Bridge, as there was always a drain from the Richmond certain to fill them. When, then, the last estimate, 1855-6, was for 170 at Island Bridge, and for 90 at the cells—a total of 267, of whom, I believe, when 100 were dead, 160 at Island Bridge, the others, 160 chronic patients, paid for as above stated, and on the same principle as in district asylums; is the latter instance the money advanced quarterly on advance; in former, annually. These facts would seem, in the progress of business, to have escaped Mr. Roddington. Last year, at the completion of the new Richmond Asylum, we took back all our former patients, leaving the House of Industry inmates behind, now reduced to 100 (app. 100 at the 20th).

With reference to the charge proposed by Dr. Stewart, your communication to the Treasury places the question in its distinct light.

The loss at first is subsequently counteracted by the gain on smaller services, and by an responsibility to my party—a motive which, I am sure, influenced the Treasury in its allowance per head, provided for 100 criminals (harmless) located in private licensed houses in England, but who, from their place in the General Estimate, would seem to belong to this country.

2nd. As to the proposition of placing the House of Industry patients in district asylums (however approved in the abstract), I apprehend it could not possibly be acted on. These asylums have been erected for the insane poor of specific districts, and even was there a disposition as the part of the Governors, or could they be legally obliged to grant admission, the institutions belonging to the counties, from which the House of Industry patients originally came, would be found already, if I may so to term it, in a state of congestion.

Advised by a desire to do the best for the poor lunatics themselves, and in pure necessity, I have given, as you are aware, much attention to the subject under consideration. I have visited and examined different places as Government Deposits, and we have both fully discussed various suggestions.

I feel there are objections to Dr. Stewart's proposal; but I see no better than it at present. If accepted, these objections should be obtained by a strict understanding and the disbursement of every suggestion.

I have, &c.,

JOHN NUGENT.

Colonel Larcom.

Office of Lunatic Asylums Commissioner,
 (Ireland), 3, Ely-place, Dublin,
 November 19th, 1857.

SIR,
 I am directed by the Commissioners of Inquiry into Lunatic Asylums, and into the state of the Law relating to Lunatics and Lunatic Asylums in Ireland, to request that you will furnish them, with as little delay as possible, with a statement of the present number of inmates in the idiot cells at Liford, and of the numbers who have been confined therein during each of the last ten years, distinguishing them according to sex.

The Commissioners will also feel obliged by your informing them how provision is made for the support of the Idiots in question; and, if by Grand Jury Presentment, by your supplying them with a statement of the same presented, in each of the ten years specified, for that purpose, together with a reference to the Act under which such presentments have been made.

You will likewise have the goodness to state, for the information of the Commissioners, whether it is intended that any new admissions shall be made into the cells, or whether the present inmates only are to be supported therein.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
 Your obedient servant,

No. 2.—LETTER from the REV. E. M. CLARKE to the SECRETARY of the COMMISSIONERS.

Liford, November 20th, 1857.

SIR,

I have great pleasure in replying to the queries submitted to me, by desire of the Commissioners of Lunatic Asylums, in your letter of the 19th instant, which I received this morning.

1. "The present number in the idiot cells at Liford, and numbers who have been confined therein during each of the last ten years, distinguishing them according to sex?"

| Present number confined,Confined in | Males. | Females. | LIFORD IDIOT CELLS. |

| " 1853.                                 | 2      | 3        |                     |
| " 1854.                                 | 2      | 3        |                     |
| " 1855.                                 | 2      | 3        |                     |
| " 1856.                                 | 1      | 3        |                     |

As regards this query it is not to be understood that those affected persons are (or ever have been) literally confined in cells. They sleep in such; but, during the daytime, they are either in the keeper's kitchen (which they use as a day-room), or, when the weather permits, in the ground attached to the local asylum.

2. "How provision is made for the support of the Idiots in question; and, if by presentment, a statement of the same presented in each of the ten years specified; together with a reference to the Act under which such presentments have been made?"

Provision is made for their support—food, clothing, bedding, fuel, &c., being supplied for their use from the poor rates. Food is daily supplied; fuel, weekly; bedding, clothing, and other necessaries as required. They receive the prisoners' ordinary allowance of provisions, issued each morning, and have, in addition, an extra allowance for their supper. Any extra nourishment which the medical attendant of the gaol may consider necessary in any case is also supplied.

No distinct presentment is (or has been) made. The total cost of support is defrayed from the presentment made under 7 Geo. IV., cap. 74, for the support of the gaol.

3. "Whether it is intended that any new admission shall be made into the cells, or whether the present inmates only are to be supported therein?"

Since the opening of the Armagh District Asylum (with which the county Donegal was previously connected), when the Grand Jury selected that no patient should thenceforward be admitted, no new admission has taken place. I would infer from this circumstance that it is not intended that any new admission will be made; and that not more than the present number are to be supported therein.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,
 E. M. CLARKE,
 Local Inspector.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO LUNATICS IN WORKHOUSES.

No. 1.—BELFAST UNION.

Board-room, Workhouse,
 22nd May, 1857.

To the Commissioners of Lunatic Asylums, Ireland.

GENTLEMEN,

The Belfast Board of Poor Law Guardians regret that they had not an opportunity, when the Commission sat here, to lay before it their views relative to the state of insane persons in union workhouses. Of the evils of the existing system there cannot be any question. It is evident that dangerous lunatics cannot be safely managed in the wards of a workhouse, while idiots, incurable lunatics, and epileptics cannot be properly cared for by pauper attendants; and the intermixture of curable and incurable lunatics, idiots, and epileptics is fraught with many lamentable evils.

The Board, therefore, would respectfully suggest that such alterations may be made in the law regarding the admission and removal of insane persons into the district asylum as will provide for the immediate admission of lunatics dangerous to themselves or others into the district hospital for the insane, by an order signed by two magistrates, founded upon the declaration of two legally-qualified medical practitioners, such insane persons to remain under care until the approval of the local governors, at their next ensuing meeting; all such cases to be reported to the Government authorities.

The Board would also suggest that provision should be made for the removal of idiots, incurable lunatics, and epileptics from workhouses and district hospitals for the insane into a provincial or county asylum built and maintained for the purpose. At all events, whatever the decision of the Commissioners may be, this Board is satisfied that the Commissioners will see the necessity of some radical change in the existing arrangements, so as to remedy the many evils which attend upon the present legal provision made for the care of this most afflicted of our species.

For the Board of Guardians,
 Gentlemen, your obedient servant,
 ROBERT MCCORMACK,
 Presiding Chairman.

EXAMINATION IN WORK-
HOUSES.

Examination.

No. 2.—ENNERCHERRY UNION.

20th April, 1857.

In reply to your communication, accompanied by "Hills of Inquiry," on which the Commissioners for Lunatic Asylums request the remarks of this Board of Poor Law Guardians, I am directed by the Board to state, that with regard to the existing law or practice relating to lunatics, under the Three Classes No. 1., they have no information as to what to find any remarks, except in the case of the lunatic inmates of this workhouse, for whom very inadequate accommodation is provided, without any means of curative relief. Their number has averaged, for the last five years, 26; and although no accident has attended their custody, as a class they are a dangerous discipline; and the accommodation provided in the asylum at Carlow has not been able to diminish their numbers; and although this Union is afflicted with it as a part of the county Wexford, the asylum is too far distant for any inspection or control, even if the present state of the law contemplated such. The Guardians cannot, therefore, offer any observations.

On the subject of lunatic districts, the Guardians consider that a lunatic district should enhance as large a space as will permit sufficient control and inspection of the management and expenditure to those parties who pay for the maintenance, so as to lighten the burden of its establishment charges without a greater aggregate of patients than can be properly attended to. For this object, an area embracing from four to six Poor Law Unions should probably suffice.

An asylum should provide for a poor class and for persons who can pay partially for their support and treatment; also, in some cases, for such persons as may be able to pay the entire cost of their treatment. The two first classes should be admitted on certificate of the Medical Officer of the Union from which they are transmitted (and through which payment for them should be provided), by an order of the Board of Guardians, signed by the Chairman, and countersigned by the Clerk, a printed form for which should be provided.

Dangerous lunatics might be admitted from Her Majesty's gaols, as at present. We consider that a chargeability, as between Poor Law Unions, will be necessary, in consequence of the great difference which exists in the number of lunatics in different localities, and to avoid their unfair removal from place to place whilst at large; and in this view, a Board of Guardians may order the arrest, on the affidavit of their Believing Officer, of any stranger apparently lunatic for examination; and then, on certificate of their Medical Officer, may transmit such stranger lunatic to the asylum, first having examined into his place of general residence for the last two years; and having ascertained where he spent the greater part of that time, being insane, they shall report the same to the Inspector of Lunatics, who, having investigated the truth of the report, shall make the party chargeable on such Union of that or any other lunatic district as he may appear to have been living in during the earlier twelve months of such period, and shall order his removal to the asylum of the district within which such Poor Law Union is situate, with an order for payment of expenses incurred on his behalf by said Union.

That the class of poor lunatics shall be defined as for the purposes of Medical Classification.

That any member of a family not entitled in his own right to £10 a-year, or for whom, being under age (15), his parents cannot afford to pay that sum, shall be also entitled.

That persons belonging to the Union, who are themselves entitled to property above £10 and under £20, or whose family can afford to pay £10, being the expense of diet and clothing, shall be received at that sum, the diet, &c., to be the same (with some distinctive difference in the clothing) as for the poor class.

In addition to the above, for whose accommodation a district asylum is necessary, a third class might be provided with accommodation in a small number, whose friends, living as outpatients in the district, would pay £20 a-year (about the cost of maintenance and establishment); these patients might have a separate hall, diet, and better clothing; and in a state of convalescence or quiescence, might act as assistants or work even-ers. In all cases, the admission should be sanctioned by the Poor Law Guardians, who should be responsible for the maintenance, &c., and who, in the case of classes two and three, should take security from the parties for payment of the relief thus given by way of loan.

For the management of such a district asylum, each Union should nominate from its Board, as their first meeting after the 25th March, in each year, eight Governors, one-half being Ex-officio Guardians, the other half Elected Guardians, all of whom resident in the district, forming a Board of thirty-two persons (of whom seven shall be a quorum), to meet once in each month at the asylum. They shall elect a Chairman and Vice-Chairman, and their duties shall be to examine the admissions and discharges of patients; the Medical Report of the Superintendent as to the sanitary condition of the establishment; to examine the previous conduct and other accounts; make contracts for supply of requisites by public tender, &c., &c.; and to settle the accounts for the month, as against such Poor Law Union of the district, and forward them for payment as in the case at present with Fever Hospitals and Dispensary Commissions.

A Government Inspector should attend these meetings from time to time; Governors and to interfere with dietary or discipline; complaints in these matters referable to the Inspectors, either by the Governors, or by other parties through the Governors.

On the formation of a lunatic district, the Board of Governors shall be immediately appointed, and shall be the parties to select the site and provide the necessary accommodation, subject to the approval of the Lord Lieutenant, the expense to be defrayed by advances from Her Majesty's Treasury, repayable by equal annual instalments of the sum required, divided over a period of twenty years, without interest, the payments of which shall be made by a penny-rate on the associated Unions as far the purposes of the Poor Law Act, and be raised by the Guardians as part of the rates of the Union.

The Medical Superintendent, the Clerk, and other officers, should be chosen by the Governors of the asylum, subject to the approval of the Lord Lieutenant.

In the above suggestions, the Guardians found their opinions on the principles already applied to other Medical Classifications, that all classes—landed and tenants—shall contribute to their support and treatment, as well as to the buildings or accommodation provided for them.

In the choice of locality for an asylum, we earnestly press on your consideration that a good supply of water, or, if possible, a commanding head of water, shall not be overlooked, as was unfortunately the case of too many of the workhouses; that the situation of an asylum should be central in its district, the soil dry, the aspect warm and cheerful. And, in conclusion, we beg to suggest the propriety of making such inquiries, and of giving such information, as will satisfy the public if any part of the surplus workhouse accommodation through Ireland may not be made available for the purposes of lunatic asylums.

By Order of the Board,

J. KENNEDY, Clerk.

Commission of Lunatic Asylums,

REPORT OF VISITING COMMISSIONER.

Salisbury Union,

We have visited the house and fever hospital, and found every thing very clean. A nurse is checked up, and there are many inmates in the house for whom it is impossible to provide in a suitable manner.

Sir,
The Commissioners for administering the Laws for Relief of the Poor in Ireland acknowledge the receipt of Minutes of Proceedings of the Board of Guardians of Salisbury Union on the 11th instant, and request to be furnished with the observations of the Guardians on the Report of the Visiting Committee as to the number of inmates in the Workhouse for whom it is stated to be difficult to provide in a suitable manner.

By Order of the Commissioners,
R. BARRIS, Chief Clerk.

To the Clerk, Salisbury Union.

Salisbury Union,
1st April, 1857.

At a Meeting of the Guardians held on this day, read letter No. 5514/1857, 21st March, 1857, from Poor Law Commissioners, respecting the Report of the Visiting Committee relative to the lunatic inmates.

The Board desire to say that they have at present three male inmates, and seven female inmates; that they consider the care of these in a workhouse as most impracticable; that the attention of the Medical Officer and of suitable persons cannot be procured to the requisite extent; that if any of said inmates are violent, they have no alternative but to lock them up, a treatment which they consider would aggravate the disease; they, therefore, desire to avail themselves of this opportunity of requesting the Poor Law Commissioners to use their influence with the Government of the Commission now sitting on the subject, to have all such parties withdrawn from the Workhouse in Ireland, and put into such asylums as may be properly adapted to their case.

The Commissioners for administering the Laws for Relief of the Poor in Ireland have had before them the Resolution contained in Minutes of Proceedings of the Board of Guardians of Salisbury Union, on the 1st instant, in which they are requested to use their influence with the Lancashire Asylum Commissioners, with a view to having the lunatic inmates of the Workhouse in Ireland withdrawn therefrom, and placed in a fitting Asylum; and in reference thereto, the Commissioners desire to state that they have reason to know that the question of the propriety of lodging inmates in Workhouses is recurring the subject of inquiry respecting lunatics and insane asylums in Ireland.

The Commissioners do not doubt that the views of the Guardians, if communicated to that Commission, would receive attention.

LETTER TO THE COMMISSIONERS RELATIVE TO THE LUNATICS IN SPA HOUSE, LUCAN, ASYLUM.

LUCAN SPA LUNATIC ASYLUM,
20th February, 1858.

GENTLEMEN,
In obedience to your request to furnish you with information respecting the transfer of the Hardwicke Cells, House of Industry, lunatic patients to Lucan, I have the honour to inform you that, having been informed that proposals had been made by some medical men to the Lunatic Inspectors, to receive the inmates of the Hardwicke Cells into their establishment, and that it was open to me to do so, that, chiefly from the solicitation of the servants and patients that I should continue to manage them, I sent in my proposal to Colonel Larcom, having been informed by Dr. White that my proposal should be made to him.

My proposal was, that for the sum of £200 a-year I would undertake the management and medical care of the lunatics, estimating for them as hitherto, and as much as the efficiency of the asylum would permit; or that I would undertake all the expenses for £25 per head for a period not exceeding five years. On the 13th February, 1857, Colonel Larcom informed me that the Treasury had accepted my proposal at £25 per head, on the conditions that I should reside on the spot, and that the dietary and management of the patients should be under the control of the Lunatic Inspectors.

Lucan Spa House had been selected by me and approved of by Dr. Nugent. I furnished a dietary which I had prepared to submit to the Poor Law Commissioners, and the House of Industry continued under their control, which was much superior to the dietary in use up to their removal, and which entirely met with the concurrence of Dr. White. The improvement occurred in allowing for dinner six oz. of beef with a pint of soup, three days in the week; and bread soup, with vegetables, rice, and meat, three days in the week; gruel, one day. The breakfast to consist either of oatmeal or bread and tea. The supper, of cream or milk and bread. The bread allowed is twenty-two oz. for each patient. There are many delicate patients that cannot consume their allowance, which I see distributed to other patients. I proposed furnishing the same clothing as hitherto, averaging 25s. per head per year.

The 17th April, 1857, the house at Lucan was reported by Dr. Nugent as ready to receive the patients. On the 31st March I became answerable for all expenses, and repaid to the Governors of the House of Industry all the expenses incurred from the 1st April to their removal on the 17th. One patient died before the removal to Lucan. I brought 101 lunatics—seventy-one female, and thirty male. Four have died at Lucan—three females, one male. Four have died every month by one of the Lunatic Inspectors, who reports to the Government the number and condition of the lunatics. I beg to refer the Lunatic Commissioners to their reports.

Being well aware of the crowded state of the Richmond Lunatic Asylum, and of the relief the maniacs caused by death at Island Bridge gave, I suggested to Dr. Nugent that, according as maniacs occurred at Lucan, the same class of patients which I was in the habit of receiving, or the same patients that were returned to the Asylum on the breaking up of Island Bridge, might be sent to Lucan.

I have to inform the Commissioners that at present

I could accommodate at Lanes twenty homeless, incurable patients—eight male and twelve female.

The airy and well-ventilated houses appear to have improved materially the health of the patients, and they are generally becoming much quieter and easily induced to work. All the females that can do needlework are employed. When the work required for the house is done, work is taken in; and the patients are encouraged by receiving tea and some addition made to their clothing out of whatever is earned by them. The cleaning of the house and washing is done by patients, under the superintendence of the matron and servants.

The men are employed in pumping, assisting in taking care of cows, and working in the garden. With the house and outhouses, there is a garden and pasture, consisting of about five or six acres. Very few of the men are able to work. I purpose trying to employ as many as possible in picking oakum, or something that will employ them.

I find it quite safe to allow a great deal of freedom to the class of inmates under my management, and to let them feed as little as possible that they are prisoners. I have not the least apprehension that any one will attempt to leave the asylum. The constant observation of all who visit the asylum is the remarkable docility of the patients, and that they appear so much uncontented. It may be supposed that the feeling of being incurable would tend to depress the patients, but habit appears quite to reconcile them to their state, even those who possess but a comparatively small amount of intellect or reason.

I am most fortunate in having the service of a matron whose pleasure it is to meet all the wants, and consider the case of each patient, and who has won the confidence of every patient. Her desire is to act with the most perfect impartiality, and by patience and kindness, to win their confidence.

The Asylum is at all times open to the visits of the Protestant and Roman Catholic clergymen. As many of the inmates as are able go to mass, accompanied by the servants, and to church. Whenever a female is admitted ill the clergyman is sent for.

I have the honour to remain,

Gentlemen,

Your very obedient, humble servant,

HENRY H. STEWART, M.D.

Hospital.

No. 1.—THE CHARTER OF HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE II. for erecting and endowing St. PATRICK'S HOSPITAL, founded by the last will of the Rev. Dr. JONATHAN SWIFT, late Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, for the reception of IDIOTS, LUNATICS, and INCURABLES.

George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c., to all persons to whom these presents shall come, Greeting: Forasmuch as we have received information by our right trusty and right well-beloved counsellor and councillor, Philip, Earl of Chesterfield, our Lieutenant-Governor and General Governor of our Kingdom of Ireland; that Doctor Jonathan Swift, late Dean of our Cathedral of Saint Patrick, Dublin, deceased; being possessed of a considerable personal estate, by his last will and testament in writing, bearing date the third day of May, one thousand seven hundred and forty, appointed our right trusty and well-beloved counsellor, Henry Singleton, Esq., now Chief Justice of our Court of Common Pleas, then our prime Solicitor-at-Law; our trusty and well-beloved Justice Steward, Esq., Recorder of our city of Dublin; our trusty and well-beloved Patrick Delany, Doctor in Divinity; our trusty and well-beloved James Stephens, Doctor in Divinity, Vicar of Finglas; our trusty and well-beloved James King, Doctor in Divinity, Preliminary of Tipperary; our trusty and well-beloved John Gratian, Clerk, late Preliminary of Clonsilla; and our trusty and well-beloved Alexander McAulay, of the city of Dublin, Esq., with certain other persons since deceased, his executors; and bequeathed to his executors his whole estate and effects, excepting some small pecuniary and specific legacies, upon trust, and in the intent and purpose that they should lay out the same in purchasing lands of inheritance in the shire, situate in any province of Ireland (excepting Connaught) but as near to the city of Dublin as conveniently might be found, and not incumbered with, or subject to any leases for lives renewable, or for any term for years longer than thirty-one; and that the yearly profits of such lands, when purchased, and until such purchase should be made, the yearly income of his effects, bequeathed to his executors as aforesaid, should be laid out in purchasing a piece of ground, situate near Dr. Stephens's Hospital, which is situate in the suburbs of the city of Dublin aforesaid; or if it could not be there had, situate somewhere in or near the said city of Dublin; and in building thereon an hospital large enough for the reception of as many idiots and lunatics as the annual income of the said lands and effects should be sufficient to maintain. And the said testator, by his said will, directed that the said hospital should be called St. Patrick's Hospital; and that the same should be built in such a manner, that neither building might be added thereto, in case the enlargement thereof should be enlarged; so that the additional building may make the whole edifice regular and complete. And that when the said hospital should be built, the whole yearly income of the said lands and effects should, for ever thereafter, be laid out in providing victuals, clothing, medicines, attendance, and all other accommodations for such idiots and lunatics as should be received into the same; and in repairing and enlarging the building from time to time, as there should be occasion. And if a sufficient number of idiots and lunatics should not be readily found, he directed that incurables should be taken into the said hospital to supply such deficiency; but that no person labouring under any infectious disease, should be admitted into the same. And that all such idiots, lunatics, and incurables as should be received into the said hospital, should live and abide therein constantly, as well in the night as in the day. And that the salaries of agents, receivers, officers, servants, and attendants, to be employed in the business of the said hospital, should not in the whole exceed one-fifth part of the clear yearly income or revenue thereof. And the said testator further directed, that his executors should not have power to dispose any part of the lands to be purchased as aforesaid, but with the consent of the Lord Primate, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, the Dean of Christ Church, the Dean of St. Patrick's, the Physician to the State, and the Surgeon-General, all for the time being, or the greater part of them, under their hands in writing.

And that no leases of any part of the said lands should ever be made, other than for years not exceeding thirty-one in possession, and not in reversion or remainder; and not disposable of waste; whereon should be reserved the best and most improved rents that might reasonably and moderately, without making the tenants, be gotten for the same; without fine; and that no lease of any part of the said lands should ever be made to, or in trust for any person any way concerned in the execution of that trust; or to, or in trust for any person any way related or allied, either by consanguinity or affinity, to any of the persons who should then be concerned in the execution of that trust; and that if any leases should happen to be made, contrary to his intention above expressed, the same should be utterly void. And the said testator, by his said will, further directed that until the Charter thereafter mentioned should be obtained, his executors should not act in the execution of the said trust, but with the consent and approbation of the said seven additional trustees, or the greater part of them, under their hands in writing; and should, with such consent and approbation as aforesaid, have power to make rules, orders, and regulations for the government and directions of the said hospital. And the said testator, by his said will, requested his executors to apply to us in convenient time for a Charter to incorporate them, or such of them as should be then living, and the said additional trustees, for the better management and conduct of the said charity; with a power to purchase lands, and apply by election such vacancies happening in the Corporation as should not be supplied by succession; and such other powers as might be thought expedient for the due execution of the said trust. And he further directed, that when such Charter as aforesaid should be obtained, his executors, the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of such survivor, should convey to the use of such Corporation, in fee-simple, for the purposes aforesaid, all such lands as should be purchased in manner above mentioned.

To the intent therefore that the said charity may be duly conducted in all succeeding generations, and the pious design of the said testator the more effectually carried on, know ye, that we of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, by and with the advice and consent of the Most Reverend Father in God, our right trusty and right entirely beloved counsellor, John, Archbishop of Armagh, Primate of all Ireland; and our right trusty and well-beloved counsellors, Robert, Baron Newport, of Newport, our Chancellor of our said kingdom of Ireland; and Henry Boyle, Esq., Speaker of our House of Commons in our said kingdom of Ireland, our Justices General and General Governors of our said kingdom of Ireland; and according to the tenor and effect of our Letters under our Privy Signet and Sign Manual bearing date at our court at St. James's, the Seventh day of May, one thousand seven hundred and forty-six, in the nineteenth year of our reign, and now enrolled in the rolls of our High Court of Chancery, in our said kingdom of Ireland; have granted, ordained, declared, constituted, and appointed, and we do by these presents, for us, our heirs and successors, grant, ordain, declare, constitute, and appoint that the Archbishop of Armagh for the time being; our right trusty and well-beloved counsellor, Robert, Baron Newport, of Newport, our Chancellor of our said kingdom, and the Chancellor or Keeper of our Great Seal of our said kingdom for the time being; the Most Rev. Father in God, our right trusty and right entirely beloved counsellor, Charles, Archbishop of Dublin, and the Archbishop of Dublin for the time being; the Right Reverend Father in God, Thomas, Bishop of Ely, Dean of our cathedral of Christ Church, and the Dean of Christ Church for the time being; the Dean of our cathedral of St. Patrick's, Dublin, for the time being; Robert Robinson, Esq., our State Physician, and State Physician of our said kingdom for the time being; John Nicholls, Esq., our Surgeon General, and our Surgeon-General of our said kingdom for the time being; and the said Henry Singleton, our Chief Justice of Common Pleas in our said kingdom; Bates Stannard, Recorder of the city of Dublin; Patrick Delany, Doctor in Divinity; James Stopford, Doctor in Divinity, Vicar of Finglas; James King, Doctor in Divinity, Prebendary of Tipper; John Gratton, Clerk, late Prebendary of Clonsilla; and Alexander M'Acley; and such others as shall from time to time be nominated and elected to supply vacancies in manner hereinafter mentioned, shall be and be henceforth one body politic and corporate, and to have continuance for ever by the name of the Governors of St. Patrick's Hospital, Dublin, and that, by the same name they shall have perpetual succession, and that they and their successors by that name shall be able and capable, in law, to purchase and take to them and their successors, in fee-simple, any lands, tenements, or hereditaments in our said kingdom of Ireland, not exceeding in the whole the clear yearly value of two thousand pounds sterling; and further, that they may take and receive any sum or sums of money, goods, chattels, or personal estate whatsoever, that shall to them be given, granted, or bequeathed, the yearly rents and profits of such lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and the yearly interest and income of such personal estate, until the same be laid out in purchasing real estate of inheritance in fee-simple, to be by them expended for the uses and purposes of said will.

And our will and pleasure is, that the executors, administrators, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the executors of such survivor, shall grant and assign to the said Corporation the residue of the effects bequeathed to them as aforesaid, that shall remain in their hands, after discharging thereof the funeral expenses and debts of the said testator, and such legacies as by the intention of the testator are to be thereout discharged, together with their necessary expenses and disbursements in the execution of the said will: such residue and the interest, and the income thereof, to be laid out by the said Corporation, according to the tenor and meaning of the said will.

And we do hereby grant and ordain, that the said Corporation by the name aforesaid, shall be able and capable, in law, to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, in any of our Courts, and other places whatsoever, and before any judge, judges, or justices whatsoever, in all manner of suits, complaints, pleas, causes, matters, and demands of whatsoever kind, nature, or form they be, and all other matters and things, to do in as full, ample, and effectual manner, as any other body politic, or corporate, within our realm of Ireland may, or can do.

And we do hereby give and grant to the said Corporation to have a common seal, with such stamp and inscription to be made and engraved thereon as they shall think proper; and that it shall be lawful for them and their successors to change, break, alter, and renew the same at their pleasure.

And for the better conducting the said charity, we ordain and appoint, that the said Corporation shall have four quarterly meetings of the members thereof; that is to say, upon the first Mondays in May, August, November, and February, in every year in all future times, at such place or places in the city or suburbs of Dublin, as they or the greater part of them shall think proper; and any have such other general meetings, and at such times and places as the greater part of the members of the said Corporation shall from time to time think fit to appoint: and whatever shall be done at any general meeting of the said Corporation, by the greater part of the members then and there convened (such greater part not being less than three in number), shall be, and shall be deemed and taken to be, the act of the whole Corporation, and shall be as valid to all intents and purposes as if all the members thereof were present and consenting thereto (the making of leases and election of members only excepted).

And that the said Corporation, at their first general meeting, shall elect a treasurer, secretary, and such other officers as they shall find needful, to continue until the first Monday in November next thereafter, and until others be chosen to succeed them; and that at the time of such election, an oath shall be administered by any member of the Corporation, who shall be appointed for that purpose by the majority of the members then and there assembled, to each treasurer, secretary, and other officers, for the due and faithful execution of their respective offices; which oath such member so appointed as aforesaid is hereby empowered to administer.

And we do further direct and appoint, that at the general quarterly meeting of the said Corporation, to be held upon the first Monday in November, in all future time, there shall be a new election of persons to serve in the respective offices aforesaid, or the former officers continued, as shall be thought most convenient; and at every such new election each such as aforesaid shall be administered, in manner above-mentioned, to the office or offices so elected or continued; and the said Corporation are hereby empowered at any general meeting to remove any of their officers for misbehaviour; and upon the death or removal of any of them, to choose others to succeed in their places.

St.
PATRICK'S
HOSPITAL.

And to the intent that the said Corporation may have perpetual succession, and that their present number may for ever hereafter be supplied, kept up, and preserved, we do ordain, grant, and appoint, that whatsoever any member thereof shall happen to die, the survivors of the persons constituting the said Corporation, shall remain incorpore by the same afterwards, to all intents and purposes, as if all the members thereof had continued. And upon the death of any member (other than the Lord Primate, Lord Chancellor, or Keeper of the Great Seal of Ireland, Lord Archbishop of Dublin, Dean of Christ Church, Dean of Saint Patrick's, Saints Physicians, and Surgeon General of Ireland, all for the time being) some fit person, whose most next place of residence for three years at the least then next preceding, has been in the city or suburbs of Dublin, shall, in succession first, at a general meeting of the said Corporation, be elected in the room and place of such member so dying, by the greater part of the members then and there assembled; such greater part not being less than seven; whereas the Lord Primate, Lord Chancellor, or Archbishop of Dublin, for the time being, to be always one.

And our will and pleasure is, that all leases to be made by the said Corporation of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, shall be made at some one of their quarterly meetings, by the greater part of the members then present, and also with the consent and approbation of the Lord Primate, Lord Chancellor, Archbishop of Dublin, Dean of Christ Church, Dean of Saint Patrick's, our Saints Physicians, and Surgeon General of Ireland, for the time being, or the greater part of them; under their hands in writing, indented upon every such lease: and that every such lease shall be of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in possession, and not in reversion or remainder; and shall be made for a term not exceeding thirty-one years; and not disposable of, or for any manner of waste; and upon every such lease there shall be reserved the best yearly rent that can reasonably be had or gotten for the premises thereby desired; without any fine to be had or taken for the same: And that no such lease shall at any time be made to, or in trust for any person who shall at the time of the making thereof, be a member of the said Corporation, or any way related or allied, either by consanguinity or affinity to any person who shall then be a member of the same; or to or in trust for any person who shall then be treasurer or secretary of the said Corporation, or bear any other office under the same, or be any way related or allied, either by consanguinity or affinity to any such officers.

And we do hereby ordain, that all leases which shall be made by the said Corporation, according to the true intent and meaning of these presents, shall be good and valid; and that all leases or writings, purporting to be leases, or agreements for leases of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, belonging to the said Corporation, that shall be contrary, in any respect, to the true intent and meaning hereof, shall be absolutely void and of no effect.

And we do hereby for us, our heirs and successors, grant unto the Corporation at their said quarterly meetings, in all future time, and at no other meetings, full power to make such rules and ordinances, and from time to time to alter the same as they shall think proper, for the good government of the said Corporation, and management of the affairs thereof, and to give such instructions, directions, and orders, as they shall judge reasonable, to their treasurer, secretary, and such other officers as they shall think fit to employ.

Provided that such rules, ordinances, instructions, and directions be not repugnant to the laws then in force within our said kingdom of Ireland, nor contrary to the intention of the said Statute expressed in the said will as herein above recited; and that the same be approved of and confirmed by the Lord Chief Justice of our Court of Chief Place, or of Court of Common Pleas in Ireland, or by the Lord Chief Baron of our Court of Exchequer, in our said kingdom for the time being.

And provided that the said salaries of officers to be employed by the said Corporation, shall not in the whole, at any time, exceed one fifth part of the clear yearly profits, interest, and produce of the real and personal estate to them at that time belonging.

And we do hereby further ordain and direct, that the said Corporation do at their first general meeting, nominate and appoint seven of their members to be a committee, to meet upon the first Tuesday in every month, or oftener, as need shall require. And the said committee, or any three or more of them, are hereby empowered to carry into execution, all such rules, ordinances, instructions, and directions, as shall from time to time be made and confirmed in manner above-mentioned; such committee to continue till the first Monday in November next following the first said meeting of the said Corporation at which time, and on every first Monday in November yearly, the said Corporation shall nominate seven of their members to be a committee for one year then ensuing, for the purposes aforesaid.

Provided always, and we do hereby expressly declare our royal will and pleasure to be, that it shall not be lawful for the said Corporation at any time, by any act or theirs, to diminish their annual income, whether the same shall arise from real or personal estate, but that they shall at all times confine their annual expenses and disbursements to their annual income. And whatsoever sums of money shall come to them by gift or bequest shall, in convenient time, be lent out at interest, or laid out from time to time in purchasing lands, tenements, or hereditaments, until such time as their clear yearly income shall amount to two thousand pounds sterling, unless the disposal of such money be otherwise directed by the Statute.

And lastly, we do decline and ordain, that these our Letters Patent and Charter, and every clause, sentence, and article hereof, or the enrolment hereof, to be made in our High Court of Chancery, in our said kingdom of Ireland, shall be in all things firm, valid, sufficient, and effectual in the law, unto the said Corporation, according to the purport and tenor hereof, without any further grant, license, or toleration from us, our heirs or successors, to be procured or obtained.

Provided always that these our Letters Patent be enrolled in the Rolls of our High Court of Chancery, in the said kingdom of Ireland, within the space of six months next ensuing the date of these presents. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent. Witness our aforesaid Justices General, and General Governors of our said kingdom of Ireland, at Dublin, the eighth day of August, in the twentieth year of our reign.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO INSANE IN KILMAINHAM PRISON.

Prison of KILMAINHAM PRISON.

Kilmainham Gaol,
29th November, 1856.

GENTLEMEN,

I have been directed by the Board of Superintendence of this prison to forward the enclosed statement to you.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

H. M. LANGRISH,
Local Inspector.

To the Commissioners of Lunacy.

ENCLOSURE.

The Board of Superintendence of Kilmainham Gaol, in the capacity of Dublin, submit the following representations for the consideration of the Commissioners now sitting at the Lunatic Asylum.

1. That there are at present in the gaol a large number of lunatics, varying from idiots to deranged, considered under "unimpaired" minds as dangerous, for whom the Board are unable to obtain admission into the Richmond, although connected with their country as a Lunatic Lunatic Asylum. Some of these have been in the gaol for a period of about ten months, and the only means of accommodating the large number has been the hospitals of the gaol, which have previously been almost unoccupied during the present year. These apartments are, however, altogether unfitted for the accommodation of so many lunatics.

2. That several violent lunatics have lately been sent in (under warrants) from the Workhouses, and the Board suggested further additions may be made from Civil and other sources; and in the event of any epidemic breaking out in the gaol, they feel strongly they would be wholly unable to provide for both classes of lunatics while, from the imperfect accommodation, it must follow that the progress of the lunatics towards recovery must be very slow, if not altogether impossible.

3. The Board believe that the present state of things in the gaol under their control arises more immediately from the stoppage of all admission into the Richmond Asylum, in consequence of the refusal into that establishment of about 145 patients of some called unimpaired, than an Asylum at Island Bridge, which building being required, as they are informed, was lately taken possession of by the Government.

The Board, feeling the importance of the matter, urge upon the Commissioners the imperative necessity of recommending such measures as will prevent a continuance of such a state of things.

A deputation of the Board will be happy to wait upon the Commissioners, if they require it.

Signed,

THOMAS BAKER,
High Sheriff, County Dublin,
Chairman.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATIVE TO DISPOSAL OF INSANE SOLDIERS.

DISPOSAL OF INSANE SOLDIERS.

Office of Lunatic Asylums Commission (Ireland).

1, Palace-street, October 29, 1856.

Sir,—I am directed by the Commissioners, acting under authority of the Royal Commission, of which I enclose a copy, to request that you will be good enough to inform them how soldiers becoming insane on service, or in military prisons, are disposed of; and also to state, for the information of the Commissioners, the present number, and disposal, of such insane soldiers.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

(Signed) M. J. BAKER, Secretary.

To Major the Hon. James Colborne,
Military Secretary, Royal Hospital,
Edinburgh.Royal Hospital, Dublin,
29th November, 1856.

Sir,—With reference to your letter of the 29th and 30th ultimo, I have now the honour, by desire of the General Commanding the Forces, to transmit to you, for the information of the Commissioners for inquiring into state of lunatic asylums in this country, the enclosed memorandum from the Deputy Adjutant-General, relative to the disposal of insane soldiers on discharge from the service and military prisons.

I am to observe, that should any further information be required, Lord Seaton will feel happy in directing it to be furnished to the Commissioners.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES CROCKETT,
Major and Military Secretary.The Secretary, Lunatic Asylums
Commission, &c., 1, Palace-street.Adjutant-General's Office, Dublin, 29th November, 1856.

Memorandum for the Military Secretary, with reference to his despatch of the 16th October, 1856.

An insane soldier, on discharge, is sent by the military authorities, under charge of a recruiting party, to the parish to which he belongs, and thence handed over to the parochial authorities.

Seventeen soldiers have been thus sent to their homes since the 1st January last.

With regard to the return of the number of insane soldiers at present in any of the military prisons required by the Commissioners of Lunatic Asylums it is to be observed, that soldiers becoming insane whilst in prison are at once discharged, and forwarded to their homes as above notified.

The enclosures of the Military Secretary's despatch are herewith returned.

J. W. T. WOOD, Secretary.

DISPOSAL OF INSANE SOLDIERS.

INDEX TO EVIDENCE, AND TO DOCUMENTS AND CORRESPONDENCE.

[N.B.—In this Index the Figures following the names of Witnesses refer to the questions of the Evidence; and those following Doc. p., to the pages of the Documents and Correspondence.]

I.

Notes.—In one or two asylums notes or letters are kept distinctly apart, White, 406. Most desirable that this class of lunatics should be kept apart, White, 402. Exception is made in several asylums to the admission of idiots and imbeciles, Phelan, 821. Opinions that notes should be provided for in less costly institutions than the district asylums, Nagels, 473.

See also Imbeciles. Incurables.

Notes.—Unwillingness on the part of the Governors of some asylums to admit imbeciles, Phelan, 3221-3223. Privy Council rules desire that imbeciles shall be received into district lunatic asylums, White, 6241. Opinions that many chronic imbecile cases might be allowed to remain in workhouses, Phelan, 3282; Crawford, 4010.

See also Notes. Incurables.

Imperative Provisions.—The same necessary for the maintenance of district asylums addressed out of the Consolidated Fund, and repaid by imperative provisions, Earl of Devonshire, 6175.

Increase of Insanity.—Insanity is on the increase in Ireland, White, 416; Dillon, 10053. The more care is taken of lunatics, the more is the propagation of insanity checked, Nagels, 480. Necessity of more interference to prevent the extension of insanity, Forbes, 1519. Vast increase of insanity, in consequence of intermarriages among rich men, White, 416.

Incurables.—Two-thirds of the cases in the district asylums may be put down to incurable, White, 413. The number of incurables in the district asylums gradually augmenting, White, 414. The presence of a large number of incurables has a most injurious effect upon the curable cases, Phelan, 8356. Incurables made by the different Boards of Governors to get rid of incurable cases, White, 416. Several of what are called incurable cases most probably employed in the district asylums, White. Incurable dangerous lunatics not discharged from the district asylums, White, 417. Opinions that curable cases only should be admitted into the district asylums, Phelan, 8322. Opinions in favour of the creation of separate asylums for incurable cases, White, 3925; Earl of Devonshire, 6142; Phelan, 8367, 8368, 8369, 8370; Montgomery, 5082; Phelan, 8322; White, 3920; Earl of Devonshire, 6142; Phelan, 8367, 8368, 8369, 8370; Montgomery, 5082. The establishment of a central asylum for incurables under the control of the Government recommended, Earl of Devonshire, 6144-6146. Opinions in favour of the establishment of provincial asylums for incurables, White, 416; Montgomery, 5012. The creation of four provincial asylums for the reception of incurables recommended by a Select Committee of the House of Lords, White, 414. Power of the Lord Lieutenant in erecting provincial asylums for the exclusive reception of particular classes of lunatics has never been exercised, Nagels, 491. The removal of incurables to workhouses, set apart for that purpose, recommended, Phelan, 8303. In some asylums incurables unwillingly admitted, Earl of Devonshire, 6144; White, 416; Leifer, 9509; Kelly, 9770. The Act of Parliament establishing lunatic asylums in Ireland does not relate to curable cases only, Phelan, 8236. For the proportion of incurables to curables in the district asylums, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Inches.—Resolution of the Governors of the Belfast District Lunatic Asylum, authorizing senior medical students, required for the East India Service, to obtain clinical instruction in the asylum, referred to, Sherrin, 7738.

Incurable Poor. See Mobile Classes. Pauper Patients.

Incurables.—There is not, in general, an infirmary or hospital attached to each district asylum, White, 311. In the new asylums, except in Mullingar Asylum, there are detached infirmaries, White. In every asylum there are sick wards appropriated to the treatment of the sick, White, 314. Desirable that infirmaries should be attached to every lunatic asylum in consequence of the ward of infirmaries in the cells, Phelan, 3860-3864.

Inspection of Lunatics. See Commissions of Lunacy.

Magee, Rev. Patrick, Acting Roman Catholic Chaplain of the Sligo District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 9814-9127.

Magistrates.—Great laxity on the part of magistrates in committing dangerous lunatics to gaol, Nugent, 174. Committing magistrates may discharge a dangerous lunatic on becoming sane, or causing to be dangerous in prison, ib. 783. Unwillingness of magistrates to undertake the responsibility of discharging dangerous lunatics, ib. 787. Magistrates have no power to commit wandering lunatics to an asylum, White, 453. No power in magistrates to commit to safe custody poor lunatics who are not dangerous, Porter, 5790. Opinion that magistrates should have such a power, ib. Magistrates in England have power to commit a wandering lunatic direct to an asylum, Sir R. Ferguson, 5447. Opinion that this power should be extended to magistrates in Ireland, ib. Suggestion that the signature of one magistrate should be sufficient to a commitment under the Dangerous Lunatics Act, Henry, 5182. Objection made to the power now possessed by magistrates of granting licenses to private lunatic asylums, White, 559.

Maintenance of District Lunatic Asylums.—The same necessary for the maintenance of district lunatic asylums are advanced out of the Consolidated Fund, and repaid by imperative presentments on the exchequer table, Earl of Donoughmore, 8117. Any sum under £10,000 in any one quarter of the year may be loaned by the Privy Council for each district asylum, Croise, 182. Principle on which the cost of the maintenance of district asylums is apportioned on the counties forming the districts, ib., 181. No county can be charged for the maintenance of a district asylum, unless there are patients from it in the asylum, White, 488. The charges for the establishment of a district asylum are kept separate from the charges of maintenance, ib., 492. Suggestion that the costs of the maintenance of district asylums should be paid for out of the poor rate, Earl of Donoughmore, 8178. The accounts for the maintenance of district asylums are forwarded to the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums, and weekly investigated, White, 497; Croise, 176. Manner in which these accounts are checked, White, 491-496.

Managers of District Lunatic Asylums.—Duties of managers of district lunatic asylums, Doc. p. 329. Books required to be kept by managers of district asylums, ib. The law in Ireland does not require managers of district asylums to be medical men, Nugent, 384. List of the asylums under the management of non-professional men, White, 293. Opinion that managers of lunatic asylums should be medical men, White, 320; Nugent, 385; Phelan, 3846; Haynes, 9337. Medical men only appointed managers of district asylums of late, Nugent, 385. In England, managers of lunatic asylums may be medical men, Phelan, 3887. Managers of district asylums appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, Croise, 185. Opinion that managers of district asylums should be appointed by the Board of Governors, Sir R. Ferguson, 5263; Blake, 5733; Earl of Donoughmore, 8102. The salary now given to managers not sufficient, Phelan, 3898. Managers may admit urgent cases subject to the approval of the Board of Governors, White, 291. Opinion that in large asylums a manager, or superintendent, should be appointed to take charge of the local business, ib., 3. 320. The Privy Council rules do not impose any medical duties upon managers of district asylums, Ferguson, 7430. Opinion as to the position the medical manager of an asylum should occupy with reference to the moral and medical treatment of the patients, White, 321-328. For information respecting the relative position of the managers and visiting physicians of the district asylums, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Parks, Roger Charles, Esq., J.P., a Governor of the Sligo District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 10928-10931.

Parliament, Acts of. See Acts of Parliament.

Particular Classes of Patients.—The 8 & 9 Vic. c. 107 enables the Lord Lieutenant to establish prescribed lunatic asylums for the exclusive reception of particular classes of pauper lunatics, Nagot, 602. This power has never been exercised, ib. 694. Civil Orders in Council appointing an asylum or part of an asylum for the reception of a particular class of patients, ib. 322.

Paton, William, Esq., J.P., a Governor of the Armagh District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 8407-8478.

Paying Patients in District Asylums.—The form of admission of paying patients contains an agreement that the family of the patient shall pay a portion of the cost of his maintenance, White, 247. This agreement not binding, ib. These agreements are practically fulfilled, ib. 307. Nagot, 626. Admission refused to paying patients in some district asylums, White, 227. It is doubtful whether the law allows of their admission, ib. Opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown against the legality of their admission referred to, ib. A paying patient is not removed from a district asylum when his family comes to pay for him, Nagot, 638. There are very few paying patients in the district asylums, almost none in any, ib. 643. The paying patients in district asylums are from a class very little above paupers, ib. 603. Paying patients have the same accommodation and treatment as ordinary paupers, ib. 656. Opinion that pauper patients should have the preference for admission into the district asylums, ib. 601. Observation on the association of paying patients with pauper lunatics, Nagot, 724-731; White, 443-449. Great unwillingness on the part of some of the paying patients to associate with the pauper lunatics, Cassell, 3456. Objection to which the admission of paying patients into the district asylums is liable, Nagot, 603. Opinions against the admission of paying patients into district asylums, Houghton, 6735; Stewart, 7682; Hinds, 8066; Jackson, 8320; Paton, 8447; M'Alvan, 10078. Opinions in favor of the admission of paying patients into district asylums, Nagot, 3707; Blake, 5750; Mackay, 5830; Earl of Donaghmore, 6149; Phelps, 6180; Reid, 6233; Browne, 6330; Lohr, 6333; Case 4988; Dwyer, 6342; Cassidy, 7408; Ferguson, 7493; Berkeley, 7848; Montgomery, 8016; Macrae, 8084; O'Brien, 8811; Callahan, 8837; Porter, 8942; Ede, 9203; Arnold, 9254; Stewart, 9293; Rogers, 9401; White, 9581; Deane, 9581; Sir N. Baines, 9591; Boddington, 9724; Kelly, 9762; O'Flaherty, 10000; Dwyer, 10073; Robert, 10392; Ede, 10412; Townsend, 10426; Ogden, 10502; O'Connor, 10515; Purin, 10531; Lohr, 10532; Mackay, 11034; M'Gillivray, 11109; Porter, 11133; Browne, 11165.

Suggestion that the Boards of Governors of district asylums should have the power of recovering the cost of the maintenance of paying patients from their relatives, Browne, 6049; Nagot, 6021; Duckett, 6843. No paying patients received in the Lonsdownery Asylum, Sir M. Ferguson, 8478. Nor in the Waterford Asylum, Howe, 6257. Nor in the Carlow Asylum, Browne, 6031. Nor in the Belfast Asylum, Stewart, 7677. Nor in the Armagh Asylum, Jackson, 8333.

Persons in Offices of District Lunatic Asylums. See Superintendence.

Per-Centage of Income.—The per-centage of the income is, in England, about one in seven or eight hundred, Nagot, 678. It is about the same in Ireland, ib.

Phelan, Denis, Esq., Surgeon, Secretary to the Dublin Hospital Superintendence Board.—Evidence of this witness, 5603-5682.

Phelps, Lieutenant-Colonel Patrick, J.P., a Governor of the Chesham District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 6181-6223.

Plans.—The plans for district lunatic asylums, or for additions thereto are submitted to the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums, previous to their being carried out, Nagot, 341. The law requires plans of private asylums to be laid up in each institution, ib. 327. Not necessary to submit plans of private asylums to the magistrate granting licenses, ib. 364.

Positum. See Wardhouse.

Poor Law Commissioners.—The Poor Law Commissioners have no power to receive a pauper direct from a workhouse to an asylum, Phelan, 3942. Suggestion that such a power should be given to them, ib. 3946. No special orders have been issued by the Poor Law Commissioners, respecting the treatment of the lunatic poor in workhouses, ib. 1038. The Commissioners have issued no directions respecting the transfer of paupers from workhouses to lunatic asylums, ib. 1047. Power, Thomas, Esq., M.D., Resident Physician of the Cork District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 10117-10332.

Practising.—It is usual for the person performing Divine Service in the district lunatic asylums to preach to the inmates, Nagot, 688. Controversial subjects required to be avoided by the Priory Council rules, ib. 696. Good behaviour of the inmates of the asylums during the service, ib. Opinion in favor of allowing patients, afflicted with religious mania, to attend the services of the chaplains of their own persuasion, ib. 833.

Prescription Book.—There is a prescription book in every district lunatic asylum, which is examined by the Inspector when he visits the asylum, White, 310.

Presentments.—Nature of the presentments for levying the moneys necessary for the maintenance of the district lunatic asylums, Earl of Donaghmore, 6178.

Previous History of Patients.—It is most important, for its treatment, to know the history of each case previous to its admission, M'Kinnon, 9844; Porter, 10163. Difficulty of knowing the previous history of cases from goals, Porter, 10161; Lohr, 6334; Jacob, 7370. Not little information given as to the previous history of the patients from workhouses, Jacob, 7270; M'Alvan, 10533. Suggestion for some general and improved form of admission that would give some information as to the previous history of the cases, Porter, 9101.

Private Asylums.—There are thirteen private licensed houses in Ireland, Nagot, 603. The private asylums are visited tries and officers in each year by the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums, White, 314. Details as to these visits by the Inspectors, ib. 313-325. Entries made in the Inspection Book on the occasion of these visits, ib. 327. Details as to the mode of obtaining licenses for private asylums, ib. 324-325; Negrot, 262-264. The law respecting the licensing of private asylums not sufficiently stringent, ib. 307. Opinion that the licensing of private asylums should not be left to magistrates, White, 329. The magistrates make no inquiries as to the propriety of a person about to open a private asylum, ib. 334; Negrot, 242. Opinion that persons applying for a license to open a private asylum should be required to satisfy the magistrates as to their pecuniary means, ib. 365, 366, 374. Suggested amendment of the law respecting private asylums, Negrot, 281.

A most perceptible and unobscured improvement has taken place in private asylums within the last four years, ib. 326. Private asylums are very successful in their treatment; a very fair number are discharged cured, ib. 382. The arrangements in private asylums as to the attendance on divine worship not so satisfactory as in districts, ib. 306. Adequate attendance not generally provided in private asylums, ib. 351. Quorum.—Three form a quorum at the monthly meetings of the Boards of Governors of district lunatic asylums, White, 263. It often occurs that the monthly meetings do not take place in consequence of the non-attendance of a quorum, ib. 253. Provision a quorum at the half-yearly meetings, ib. 253.

R

Redcliff, John, Esq., a Commissioner for General Control and Correspondence of Lunatic Asylums.—Evidence of this witness, 1-165.

Register.—Suggestion that there should be a system of registration of the non-payment of the Boards of Governors of district lunatic asylums, Power, 16291-16295. Annually in allowing the money attached by taxation to be distributed without giving the rate-payers a voice in its allocation, Rynolds, 5406; Amsh, 8413. Opinion that half of the number of Governors of district asylums should be elected by the rate-payers, the other half to be ex-officio members from magistrates residing in the district, East of Donegalshire, 6171.

Receiving. See Education.

Receiver of Lunatic Property.—A receiver is sometimes appointed, as well as a commissioner of the estate of a lunatic, in the case of very large properties, Howell, 11467. Commission of the estate of a lunatic manage his receiver, and pass accounts in the same way, ib. 11468.

Revolving Cases.—Opinion that in recent cases, the attendance or non-attendance of chaplains would have the effect of disturbing the minds of the patients, Jackson, 8360; Caring, 8419.

Recreation.—For details as to the recreation of patients in district lunatic asylums, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Redwood, Patrick Waller, Esq., &c., &c., a Governor of the Carlow District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 6284-6290.

Register of the Residence of Lunatics.—Opinion that there should be a register of the residence of every person of unsound mind, or reputed to be of unsound mind, Bridg, 11385.

Registers.—What books and registers are required by the Privy Council rules to be kept in every district lunatic asylum, Doc. p. 528. Penalty imposed by the Private Asylums Act for the non-production of the books and registers required by the Act, Amsh, 7315. Observations on the requirements of the Private Asylums Act as to the keeping of the books and registers, ib. 7300, 7315-7318.

Register, The General.—One of the books required by the Privy Council rules to be kept in every district lunatic asylum, Doc. p. 528. Contents of this book, ib.

Regulations. See Rules for the Government of District Lunatic Asylums.

Relieving Officers.—It forms no part of the duty of the Relieving Officers of the poor to take any measure for the abolition of inmates to the district asylums out of the parishes, White, 1040. Suggestion that Religious Officers should be parties to the signing of certificates of admission to district asylums, Westphale, 6740. Advantages that would result from such a system, Cole, 6961.

Religious Books. See Books of Devotion.

Religious Exclusion.—The religious music, with some persons, does not at all tend to a counter-revolutionary character so much as to the exercise of piety, Nighting, 839. Witnesses do not see how attendance on worship can exclude patients, ib. Privy Council rules direct counter-revolutionary effects to be studiously avoided, ib. 893. Danger of religious exclusion in an asylum containing parishes belonging to different parishes, McCluskey, 7266; Howland, 7997. No religious exclusion caused among the inmates of different parishes in the Leadenhall Asylum by the attendance of the chaplains, Howland, 6941; Desford, 6621. Not in the Balfour Asylum, McKerrow, 8063. Not in the Cuck Asylum, Power, 10225.

Religious Instruction.—In those asylums in which there are no chaplains, no religious prayer takes place, and no religious instruction or ministrations is given, Nighting, 441. Copy Privy Council rules as to religious instruction in district asylums, Doc, p. 522.

See also Religious Ministrations.

Religious Ministrations.—Divine service, according to the respective rights of the churches to which the inmates belong, has been regularly celebrated in all the district asylums, except those of Armagh and Belfast, White, 326. The Board of Governors of each district asylum bound by the Privy Council rules to make regulations for the admission of clergymen, and the celebration of divine service, Nighting, 621. Opinion on the part of the Governors of the Armagh Asylum to provide for the celebration of divine service, White, 371, 573. A chaplain paid by the Archbishop of Armagh to attend such of the inmates as are of the Protestant church, ib. 374. Opposition offered by the Governors of the Belfast Asylum to the appointment of chaplains, ib. 578. Clergymen have been refused admission into the Belfast Asylum for the purpose of celebrating divine service, ib. 581. Complaints made by the Bishop of Down and the Roman Catholic Bishop that due facilities have not been given for the admission of clergymen, and that patients have frequently died without religious ministrations, Nighting, 610. Manager and trustees of the Belfast Asylum in the habit of reading prayers to the inmates, White, 392.

In those asylums where there are no chaplains very few of the inmates are brought out to attend divine worship, ib. 398. In the asylums without chaplains, the inmates have complained of not receiving religious ministrations, ib. 398. Great importance of religious ministrations as a corrective measure, ib. 393; Nighting, 636. Proportion of the inmates of district asylums who are capable of benefiting by religious ministrations, White, 594; Nighting, 627. Attendance on divine worship exercises the most beneficial effect even upon those who are not capable of deriving great spiritual advantages from it, ib. 598, 639. Copy Privy Council rules for the admission of clergymen and the celebration of divine service in district asylums, Doc, p. 522. Opinions in favour of attending chaplains in district asylums, White, 368; Nighting, 635; Sir R. Ferguson, 5228; Doyle, 5007; Doyle, 5018; Conolly, 5812; Fry, 5204; White, 5448; O'Sullivan, 6719; Leah, 5803; Burton, 7167; Hargreaves, 7252; Ferguson, 7450; Bishop of Down, 7929; Flitzgerald, 8023; Joseph, 8034; Malins, 8088; Thompson, 9165; Seiff, 9334; Howland, 9534; Howland, 9538; Bishop of Down, 9603; Desford, 9619; O'Flaherty, 9631; McKerrow, 9687; Power, 10244; Bishop of Cork, 10280; Ryle, 10428; Townsend, 10445; Chifford, 10454; Howland, 10461; McGillivray, 11126; Le Leah, 11183. Opinions that chaplains unnecessary in lunatic asylums, Howland, 5844; Murray, 5976. Opinions that it is not desirable to appoint chaplains to asylums containing inmates belonging to different religious persuasions, Desford, 7611; McCluskey, 7996; Howland, 7992; McCluskey, 8034. Opinions that in recent cases religious ministrations would tend to disturb the mind of the patients, Jackson, 8356; Conolly, 8419.

At each visit to the private asylums by the Inspectors, inquiries are made respecting the celebration of divine service, White, 594. There is much reason to complain in this respect as to some asylums, ib. 592. The arrangements in private asylums as to attendance on religious worship not so satisfactory as is desirable, Nighting, 964.

Salaries.—The salaries now given to managers of district lunatic asylums not sufficient, Palmer, 3636.

See also Superintendence.

Salt.—Dose of salt in the Maryborough District Lunatic Asylum, Barton, 7107. Dishes of the patients for salt, ib. 7148.

Schools.—School instruction in lunatic asylums desirable as a means of employment, Conolly, 3841. Great importance of instruction as a curative means, McGowan, 7094. Opinion that every lunatic asylum should have a school attached to it, Bishop of Down, 7921. Opinion that instruction is not necessary in the case of patients of district asylums, Macquarrie, 8101. Advantages of instructing these inmates who cannot read or write, Clancy, 8416; Pingould, 8618; Thompson, 9165; McMahon, 10737.

For information as to the proportion of patients in district asylums who can read and write, and respecting schools, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Scotland.—The lunatics above the class of paupers in the north of Ireland are generally sent across to Scotland, Sir R. Ferguson, 3478; Stewart, 7601. The lunatic asylums in Scotland are all of a mixed kind, having both paupers and paupers, Stewart, 7692.

Seclusion.—For information as to how for seclusion is practiced in the district lunatic asylums, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Self-supporting Institutions for the Insane.—The Broomfield Retreat is the only self-supporting institution for the insane in Ireland, Chasch, 3623. Suggestion of a plan of a self-supporting asylum, Sir R. Ferguson, 3478. Great deficiency of such institutions in Ireland, ib. 3473.

Sending Patients out on Trial.—There is no provision in the law authorizing the sending out of patients from district asylums upon trial or probation, White, 291. Patients are occasionally sent out on trial, ib. Not desirable to have such a provision, particularly in the case of private asylums, ib. 293. There is such provision in the law of England, ib. 293.

Separate Asylums.—Power of the Lord Lieutenant to establish provincial asylums for the exclusive reception of particular classes of lunatics, Nagett, 692. This power has never been exercised, ib. 691. Opinion in favour of the creation of separate asylums for lunatics, unacquainted in the existing asylums, Sir R. Ferguson, 3491-3495; Stewart, 6963; Alford, 6114, 6115; Palmer, 6101; Macquarrie, 6062; Pingould, 6032; West, 6030; Rogers, 6112; White, 10067. Opinion that the asylums, for lunatics should be in distinct localities, Stewart, 7746; Hendrie, 7144. Opinion in favour of a central asylum for lunatics, under the control of the Government, Earl of Devonshire, 6154; Gibbert, 6756. The creation of four provincial asylums, for the reception of chronic incurable cases, recommended by the Select Committee of the House of Lords in 1843, White, 424. Additional buildings, of a plain description, should be erected in conformity with the existing asylums for incurables, ib. Opinion that curable cases only should be admitted into the district asylums, and that other institutions should be built for incurables, Palmer, 3622. Opinion in favour of the creation of provincial asylums for lunatics, West, 6283.

Settlement of Pauper Lunatics.—Recommendation of the Commissioners of the Richmond District Asylum, that pauper lunatics confined in goals should be allotted to the several district asylums to which, by previous residence, they properly belong, Sir G. Hobson, 3136. The need of a settlement might arise in such cases, ib. 3137. Opinion that the law should be changed, so as to confer some interest on the pauper of insuring where lunatics come from, with a view to their transmission to the asylum to which they belonged, Reginald, 3388; White, 3744; Earl of Devonshire, 6140. Advantages of such a system, Earl of Devonshire, 6140.

Severals.—Copy Privy Council rules as to the duties of servants in district lunatic asylums, Doe, p. 350.

See also Attendance.

Severals.—For information as to the state of the servants of district lunatic asylums, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Swanton, Michael, Esq.—Collector-General of Rates for the City of Dublin.—Evidence of this witness, 5235-5245.

St. de, Thos.—Opinion that criminal and temperance should be charged upon the State generally, Swanton, 5277. Opinion on the question how far the State should make provision for lunatics who are not paupers, St. R. Ferguson, 2476; Ferguson, 7511. Propriety of State interference to prevent extension of lunacy, Ferguson, 7410-7421.

Statements.—Statement as to the necessity of having visiting physicians attached to district lunatic asylums, McNair, 6701. Statement of the duties of Inspectors of Lunatics, and of their office, Dec. p. 534-536. Statement of the number of institutions visited by the Inspectors of Lunatics, and of the number of visits paid to each institution, St. 540. Statement made by the Governors of the Richmond District Lunatic Asylum in reply to a letter of the Commissioners, St. 551. Statement showing the various items included in the general statement for lunatics from April, 1854, to the 31st March, 1856, in Swift's Hospital, Dec. p. 545.

Statute of Lunatics.—The wandering class of lunatics amounts to over seven thousand persons, White, 427. Two thousand lunatics are confined in gaols, St. Number of lunatics in Ireland in 1852, according to the Census Commissioners, Phelan, 3467. According to the Inspectors of Lunatic Asylums, St. 3948. Number of lunatics under official supervision in 1855, St. 3868. Steward. See Lay Managers.

Stewart, Henry Hutchinson, Esq., M.D., F.R.C.S., Governor of the House of Industry, Dublin.—Evidence of this witness, 1030-1037.

Stewart, Mrs. Mary, Matron of the Bellist District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 8142-8157.

Stewart, Robert, Esq., M.D., Resident Physician of the Bellist District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 7476-7483.

Storekeeper.—Perry Council rules as to the duties of clerks and storekeepers in district lunatic asylums, Dec. p. 539.

Stuart, Hon. Andrew G., Esq., M.P.—Evidence of this witness, 9279-9287.

Sub-Committee of Governors.—In some district asylums the Boards of Governors have appointed sub-committees to look after those details which could not be brought under the cognizance of the General Board, White, 373. The practice has been attended with beneficial results, St. 374. Sub-Committee of Governors or Visiting Committees contemplated by the Perry Council rules of 1843, Stewart, 3274. There is a sub-committee appointed by the Killybegs Board, Lake, 6778. One in Sligo, Cogan, 16657.

Suffolk Asylum.—Opinion of the physician of this asylum against the appointment of chaplains in lunatic asylums referred to, Montgomery, 8355.

Supts, Sir Edward. See St. Leonard's, Lord.

Suicide Cases.—For information as to the precautions taken against suicide cases in the district asylums, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Superintendence.—Power given by a late Act of Parliament to the Boards of Governors of district lunatic asylums of superintending the officers, St. R. Ferguson, 3528. Previously to this Act there was no power of superintendence whatever, Stewart, 7703. The scale of salaries as fixed by this Act is too low, St. 7704; Howson, 7948. Letter from the clerk of the Lincoln Asylum as to the persons who come under the provision of this Act, Dec. p. 534.

Superintending Committee of Lunacy.—Remarks on the facilities for superintending committees of lunacy, Brady, 11303-11302.

Surgeon Attendance.—Generally the visiting physician of district lunatic asylums performs the duty of surgeon; visiting physicians are generally both surgeons and physicians, White, 310. Cases where the visiting physician is not a surgeon, St. 347-348. Desirable that physicians to district asylums should have a surgical degree, St. 349. The appointment of a mere surgeon, as visiting medical officer of an asylum, is not a sufficient compliance with the rules requiring a physician to be appointed, St. 363.

Swift, Rev. Richard Meade, Protestant Chaplain of the Oughter District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 3058-3064.

Swift's Hospital.—Is a mixed hospital for poor and paying patients, Nagend, 861. Is one of the two charitable institutions for the insane in Ireland, Phelan, 3385. Copy Charter for erecting and endowing this hospital, Dec. p. 552.

For further information as to the condition of this asylum, see the evidence of the following witnesses, Channing, 3215-3263; Foxon, 3264-3275; Channing, 3275-3291; Craher, 3401-3479; Dobbs, 3480-3528; Alcott, 4038-5016.

This provision of the law not generally complied with, &c. This notice must now be given within three months, Chancellor, 5692. Return of the number of single patients in unlawful houses, &c., Dec, p. 539.
See also Private Houses.

Urgent Cases.—The Managers of district lunatic asylums have the power of admitting cases proved to be urgent, subject to the approval of the Board of Governors, White, 244.

V.

Ventilation.—For information as to the state of ventilation of district lunatic asylums, see the different asylums under their respective titles.

Violence, Fits of.—Opinion that there should be a power of putting persons of interperate habits under temporary restraint during fits of violence, White, 5393.

Violent Lunatics.—There are many violent lunatics detained in workhouses, Nagart, 748. Objectionable course adopted in some workhouses of committing irritable lunatics to gaols as dangerous, &c.

Visiting Books.—In all the district asylums the regular Daily Book has a column for recording the attendance of all the officers, and the length of each visit, White, 300.

Visitation. See Charity Lunatics. Inspection of Lunatics. Single Patients. Special Visitation.

Visiting Committee of Governors. See Sub-Committee of Governors.

Visiting Physicians.—The visiting physician of each district asylum is obliged to attend, three times a week where the number of patients is under, and every day where the number is over two hundred and fifty, White, 598. Statement as to the necessity of having a visiting physician attached to each district asylum, O'Meara, 6701. Doubtful that the visiting physician of a lunatic asylum should be in general practice, White, 338; Nagart, 615; Phelan, 3254; Porter, 9253. Opinion that the authority of the visiting physician should be paramount in cases of bodily disease, White, 339. Visiting physician, when absent, must supply a competent medical man as his substitute, Nagart, 630. The visits of the physicians of the district asylums are recorded in the Daily Book, White, 300. Copy Privy Council rules as to the duties of visiting physicians, Dec, p. 539.

W.

Wages.—The wages generally given to attendants in district lunatic asylums not sufficient to secure the services of competent servants, White, 491. Highly advisable that the wages in district asylums should be raised in order to secure a better class of attendants and servants, Nagart, 624. Recommendation that the remuneration of attendants and servants should be based upon a system of annual increase, depending upon good conduct, &c. 625. This plan of promotion has been adopted in the Drumcree Asylum, &c.

Wall, Rev. Patrick, P.P. of Ankerin, Roman Catholic Chaplain of the Waterford District Lunatic Asylum.—Evidence of this witness, 3516-3528.

Wandering Lunatics.—The wandering class of lunatic amounts to over seven thousand persons, White, 437. Asylums are the proper places for the detention of lunatics, whether dangerous or otherwise, &c. 425. Confining lunatics would check the propagation of insanity, Nagart, 660. A magistrate has no power to send a wandering lunatic to an asylum, White, 455. In England a magistrate has this power, Sir R. Ferguson, 5446. Desirable that a similar provision should be introduced into the Irish law, &c. Wandering lunatics should be provided for in less costly institutions than the district lunatic asylums, Nagart, 675.
